"The formative period of our history when the course which the Fathers decided upon was mapped out and the American democraey was started on the right road, was a great period in the history of this nation. Without the wise counsel that prevailed at the time democracy of the American type would have disappeared long ago. The Civil War period when the democracy that was planted and stored upon its journey through history by the Fathers was saved to the world was an equally great period. But, the greatest of all periods is coming; the one in which this democracy, now so firmly established that no political storm can uproot it, is to be extended and made world-wide.

If we remember correctly it was Zac Chandler who sent word back from Washington when the nation tottered on the threshold of rebellion, to the people of Michigan to send to Washington men who had back bone and were not afraid to fight. So, standing at the threshold of this momentous era we are approaching, the nation is appealing ta Michigan to send a man to Washington who is not afraid to preach the doctrine of true Democracy; democracy of a type untrammeled with the hedgings of wealth or unjust power. Democracy that breathes more of the golden rule and less of the doctrine of the Junker, and we say without fear of contradiction that Michigan has no man more capable of championing it than our illustrious upper peninsula citizen, Mr. Osborn. The Diamond Drill regards it as a privilege to, at this time, do its "bit" in helping along the selection of one who can so ably plead our ease at the bar of the world.

"We earnestly hope that Crystal Falls citizens will weigh well the hours, its needs and the man.

"We believe that man to be Hon. Chase S. Osborn."

The above furnished food for thought. Wouldn't it be a wise move, with the country in its present state of agitation and turmoil, to put a man in the senatorial chair who has the backbone to say what he thinks and make a fight for it. Osborn is this kind of n man, and we believe no better choice could be made.

THE DREAD OF DRAFT

Now that the registration of men liable to military service has taken place, every man can begin to tell whether he has within himself the making of a soldier. Some men who never saw themselves in that light will be surprised to see how enlmly they take this overshadowing possibility.

A case of suicide of a man who feared being drafted was reported the other day, but such instances will be infinitesimal in number. The fear of things is worse than the reality. The atmosphere of soldier camps has always been a cheerful one.

The people who will suffer will be those who are left at home. Those who go will be cheered by music, by the spirit of the army, the contngion of enthusiasm. There will he warm comradeship and hearty friendship in army life. The boys will look forward not without antieipation to seeing strange lands and foreign cities and alien peoples. They would not choose to travel in that way, but many men who never expected to go abroad will welcome this chance to see the world.

In ancient times the young men started off for the wars in the same jolly spirit in which the boys of today start for college. In this more fearful and introspective age we have lost this careless audacity. We are upset If we esn't avoid risks and if our loved ones must take them. But all reports from Europe are that the men part for the bsttlefield with no shaw of feeling and in good spirit and our boys will da the same.

The drafted men will be the heroes of their homc towns and camp surroundings. Many an obscure youth who never before could get reeognition will now find himself suddenly elevated on a pedestal of local fame. It will develop inlitstive and manliness, and all who return safely, ss the vast majority will, are sure to be stronger men for the experience.

PERSHING ON THE JOB

Major General Pershing, commander of the U. S. expeditionary forces in Europe, is already on the job. The announcement that Pershing had safely reached Europe and would leave England within a short time for the war zone in France came as a decided surprise to the American public, which did not even know that he had departed from this country. The secrecy that shrouded Pershing's departure, however, was necessary and it accomplished its objeet. With Pershing and his staff on the job in France the first actual step toward the participation of the land forees of the United States in the war has been taken. As is generally known Pershing's initial unit will be composed of regulars and marines. This force will be augmented later by picked regiments of the national guard and finally by other regular guardsmen and the great civilinn army that will soon be in the making in this country. In Pershing the United States has picked a veteran of many battles and a man whose jurgment can be relied upon to place the stars and stripes in the forefront of the fight and keep them there until victory has been won. Pershing is now in Europe. Success to him. Eacn and every American can aid "Black Jack" in the performance of his task by doing at home those things essential for the proper support and maintenance of our armies and navies in the war zone. The American troops will soon be in the thick of the fight, and let those of us who remain at home see to it that at no time do the boys who are upholding the principles of the nation on land and sea suffer because of any neglect on the part of the great body of American civilians on this sode of the ocean, thousands of miles away from the scenes of actual conflict.

Germany complains that our government didn't treat Count von Bernstorff and his staff with proper respect when he and his party left this country for Germany when diplomatic relations between the two countries were severed. Remembering that von Bernstorff while representing what was supposed to be a friendly government, was plotting and scheming for war against this country and was dividing it among themselves, Japan and Mexico, that wily statesman ought to consider himself fortunate that he was permitted to leave this country alive.

GERMANS' PLAN MIGHTY DRIVE

HOPE TO FORCE DECISION IN NORTH FRANCE

She Must strike Before American Troops Arrive and While Subs Are Active to Win

Recent developments on the western battle front tend strongly to bear out information that Germany proposes to make a titanic effort to force a decision in Francc this summer.

That Germany will and must strike "now or never" is generally conceded.

If the Germans expect to win a decision in the west, which, according to the concensus of militnry observers, is the only front on which a decision can be obtained for either side, they must strike.

1. Before American troops have nrrived in force.
2. Before Russia hns railled for an offensive.
3. Before American ships and American inventive genius have offset or defeated the U-boat compaign.
4. Before the allied Mncedonian army has been withdrawn and transferred either to the west or Palestine or the Mesopotamian front to push a new vigorous drive that may put Turkey out of the war.

Posse Captures Night Marauder After Thrilling Hunt—Now In Captivity

For some time past farmers living north of town have noticed their chickens disappearing quite regularly and had placed the blame on foxes, but when about three weeks ago turkeys and lambs also began to disappear, the mystery deepened.

The climax was reached one night last week when a six weeks old calf belonging to George Heller was taken from the pasture and nothing was found but a little blood and one or two bones.

The farmers arose in arms and started out to capture, dead or alive, the marauder. Included in the posse was Edd Boss, and to him fell the honor of capturing single handed, what is probably the only living specimen of the great horned Rinasticulas now in existence. Edd claims he battled with the monster over three hours and after emptying the magazine of his 303 Savage the shots all taking effect in the same place they did with the deer Edd saw last fall on the U. P. hunting trip, he finally had the animal subdued. Severed men arrived in answer to the S. O. S. call sent out by Mr. Boss, and they with the aid of a decking line got the animal loaded into a stock rack and brought it into town.

Opinion differed as to what the thing is. One man who saw it claims it is a monster bat, whose ancestors existed in pre-historic times, but a lady in the crowd said it was not a bat, as she had seen George Hunter on a good many of them before he was married and she assured the crowd they were nothing like this animal. To the writer the beast looks like a cross between a devil fish and a Zepplin, equipped with immense wings, one of which is slightly damaged by the heavy rifle fire poured upon it by its captor.

Mr. Boss has it chained in the basement of the hardware store where it is a great curiosity and attracts large crowds each day, as it devours huge chunks of raw beef like a sabre tooth tiger.

A representative of the Sells-Floto circus was in town the first of the week and purchased the beast and as soon as a special car can be secured it will be shipped to Chicago.

LEAVES MANY FRIENDS TO MOURN HER LOSS

Death of Mrs. Vanorman a Shock to Community

Hilda Leney was born in Saunders county, Nebraska, March 14, 1879, and died of tubercuIosis at her home at Ellsworth, June 16, 1917, aged 38 years, 3 months and two days.

She was united in marriage with Edward Vanorman on Christmas day 1902, and has lived in or near Ellsworth since that time except about one year spent in California, where she went about six years ago for her health.

On her return at that time she seemed much improved, but has been failing slowly but surely the past three years. There have been days in that time when she seemed better but she had failed rapidly the last three or four months, so her death was not unlooked for.

Mrs. Vanorman was always quiet and unobtrusive, caring more for her home and children than for social display, and as a result counted as her friends all with whom she was acquainted.

Four children, Ida aged 14, Orson age 12, Irene 10 and Iola 7 years old are with her husband, father, three brothers and a world of friends left to miss her.

Funeral services were held Sunday P. M. at two o'clock at the Apostolic Holiness church, and she was buried at Boss cemetery, Rev. Kridler, officiating.

The Central Lake band, in claiming the lion's share of the credit for the success of the patriotic rally at Bellaire on June 8, is, we think, entirely too modest. The only fault most people found was that the noise made by the Central Lake uniforms drowned what music they made.

Whether this appointment holds good after the course of medical training is over or not, he does no say, but it at least shows the esteem and respect in which he is held by his superiors, and is a decided honor as the training camp is in charge of medical officers of the regular army.

GROW YOUR OWN SYRUP

USE OF SUGAR BEETS ARE RECOMMENDED

Housewife Can Make Delicious Syrup and Sugar at Home if She So Desires

The Michigan housewife who is in the mood for experimentation may find it profitable this season, in the opinion of farm crops men of the Michigan Agricultural college, to try her hand at raising her own syrup. The department is recommending that women with land at their disposal, put out a few rows of sugar beets.

"With sugar away up a good supply of syrup will be welcomed in any household," according to the college men. "As in pioneer times, 'long sweet'nin' for buckwheat cakes and coffee will come in handy.

"Sugar beets may be grown in any locality which has tillable soil capable of producing a good crop of vegetables. A few rows of beets will furnish enough syrup for the ordinary family. The equipment needed for growing and syrup making can be found on any farm. A spade, hoe and rake are all that is needed to grow the crop. The butcher knife, kraut or potato slicer, and a large kettle comprise the only requirement required to produce syrup.

"In fall, beets should be pulled, topped and cleaned, and cut into thin slices. One bushel of beets will make about two bushel of slices. The slices should then be placed in a barrel and ten gallons of water poured over. After standing for one hour the juice should be poured out without pressing, and boiled down in a large kettle to the proper consistency. Frequent skimming to remove the scum and eliminate the strong beet-like flavor and will leave a wholesome and palatable product. If evaporation is carried far enough, a dark sugar will settle out which will be found useful in cooking.

"There still remains about two weeks' time during which Michigan gardeners can plant beets in their gardens."

VAN PELT ASKS A FEW QUERIES

QUIZZES COMMISSIONER ROGERS AT ROAD MEET

Hands State Highway Head Some "Boquets" and Gets Important Puzzlers Settled

In his address at the close of state highway commissioner Roger's address at the good roads meet on the evening of June 6th, George H. Van Pelt said some very nice things about the "comish" and then pumped bim dry on some of the knotty matters that have been bothering the tax payers of the county in connection with the road question. We herewith reproduce his little talk:

"I wisb to explain, first of all, that I am not eugaged in any active business and have absolutely no connection in any way with any kind of business whatever that has to do with tbe building or upkeep of roads, except to get good roads built that will save my family paying exorbitant road taxes as they, and every other tax payer will have to pay if we keep on making gravel roads as we are now doing.

"I am rejoiced to say that Mr. Hammond, our present county road commissioner, for this district, who I believe can make as good gravel roads as any one can, now says 'We must have concrete roads for all our main roads and there is plenty of work to be done on the lateral roads connecting with the main roads to keep a force busy for a long time.'

"Now, Mr. Rogers, knowing that you are an authority and good authority too, we wish to ask a few questions. We are not doing this with a view of criticizing, but in order that the people of Charlevoix county may thoroughly understand just how far we can go, what we are to do and how to go about it. This meeting tonight will go far towards moulding public opinion and it will do more in educating, and be more far reaching in producing results for our county, than perhaps any other meeting ever held.

"You know, we are planning to bond for $300,000 for twenty years for building concrete roads on our nationsl roads—the Dixie Highway and West Michigan Pike on the west end of the county, and the Mackinac Trail on the East end of the county. I have the figures to sbow what a great saving of expense this will be over the present system and its enormous yearly up keep. You know, Mr. Rogers, from your ride today, around Pine Lake, that there is not another county in our state that has the great advantages for tourists that Charlevoix county has, but we have lived here so long in an undeveloped sort of a way, that we want, like the unhatched chicken, to break the shell and come into our own. We Michiganders feel that there is no better stnte in the United States than our own slate, nnd if you will excuse a little personality, I will also add that I hsve travelled a good deal, seen a great deal of road work done and am going to make this assertion, which I make without fear of contradiction, that Michigan has, in Mr. Frank F. Rogers, as good a superintendent of highways as any other state. Now for a few questions.

"What proportion does the government pay in Federal aid, for the Dixie and West Michigan Pike?

"What does the state pay in addition to this?

"What proportion does the government pay in Federal Ald for tho Mackinac Trsil?

"What does the state pay in addition to this?

"Approximately, how much money has the state of Michigan spent in the last five years for gravel and dirt roads?

"Is there any way by which the people can tell how much a certain piece of road costs, or how much a gravel road costs as we now build them?

"What do you estimate the value of the roads built by the state during the last five years with gravel aad dirt?

"Have you any means of telling us how much it has cost tbe state of Miebigan to maintain tbese roads during this time? Why I ask this is that we have spent in the last four years, $141,000 on our roads and by the end of the present year, it will be $200,000, and I, for one, think this is an unbusinesslike way to proceed.

"Do you recommend building gravel or dirt roads upon trunk lines?

"Can you tell us which type of road the state of Michigan prefers to pay state reward on—trunk lines of permanent material, or impermanent?

"Was not the state reward on concrete and brick highway increased because of the state desiring to encourage the construction of permanent roads on trunk bighways?

"Will tbe government pay us anything on tbe road around Pine Lake?

"How much will the state pay us on the concrete road around Pine Lake? On all roads we refer to 16 feet.

Mr. Rogers having answered the questions satisfactorily to those present, Mr. Van Pelt then very happily said:.

"I wish to thank you, Mr. Rogers, very kindly for the manner in which you have answered all of these questions and for the information given, and I now invite you to come up here three or four or perhaps five years from now, and ride with me on a good concrete road, over both our beautiful national routes, and our still more beautiful road around Pine Lake, or about 45 miles, and every mile to be a good concrete road, 16 feet wide, and with every road connecting with these roads in our county to be a good gravel road and a row of apple trees oa both sides of these roads.

"May you live long and be happy. That is what we are going to do in Charlevoix county."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local spplications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

CULTIVATION MAKES POTATOES THRIVE

Farmers Urged To Take the Best of Care of Crops

Gardeners and farmers who have potato crops coming on will find it to their advantage, say potato specialists of the Michigan Agricultural college, to cultivate thoroughly their gardens and fields.

"The cultivator should be started as soon as the potatoes are up sufficiently to show the rows plainly," according to the potato men. "It is assumed that harrowing has been done as described in a pervious article. The first time the cultivator is used it should be run close to the rows and deep. This is for the purpose of loosening up the soil and putting it in a condition suitable for the soil bacteria to work to best advantage. A small amount of soil should be thrown around the plants to cover and kill any small weeds which may not have been killed by the harrow.

"After the first time over the cultivator should be run more shallow to avoid breaking off the small rootlets. The frequency of cultivation will depend upon the nature of the soil, the persistency of weed growth and the amount of rainfall. At least three things should be accumplished by cultivation. The weeds should be kept from growing, the soil moisture from evaporating, and the surface of the soil kept loose to facilitate aeration. The plant food will be liberated more freely and plant growth stimulated to a greater degree if the surface of the soil is kept open and porous, than will be the case if it is permitted to become firm, or baked.

"Cultivation should be kept up as long as it is possible to get between the rows without injuring the plants After the first two or three cultivations, only the surface of the soil should be stirred. Much harm is frequently done, especially when it is dry and hot, by deep cultivation close to the plants. The right use of the cultivator in the potato field is very beneficial, but the wrong use of the cultivator may be harmful to the potato crop."

EDITOR OBJECTED TO LIBERTY BOND BUY

Traverse City Scribe Roughly Handled by Infuriated Crowd

Thomas H. Coxe, editor of the Traverse City Press, was rather roughly used by a crowd at a mass meeting in the city commission's room June 13, when he refused to rise while the "Star Spangled Banner" was being played by the band. It is said he was assisted to his feet by the crowd. When the band repeated the music he again refused and again was forcibly assisted to rise. When for a third time in the same meeting he refused to stand for the national anthem, he was ejected from the building, considerably the worse for the harsh treatment given him. In a statement to the Traverse City Record-Eagle, Coxe said he was against using the flag for advertising purposes or the purpose of coercing public officials to vote against their conscience at what they believed is right. At the meeting at which the trouble occurred the city commission voted to buy $5,000 worth of Liberty Bonds.

SIGNS OF DANGER

That Should Be Heeded By Charlevoix People

There's serious danger in neglecting any weakness of the kidneys. The warning that Nature gives should not be overlooked. If troubled by too frequent passage of the kidney secretions; burning or scalding; if the secretions are highly colored and contain sediment when left standing—if you have backache, too, with frequent headaches and dizziness, make up your mind that your kidneys are affected and begin using some reliable kidney remedy. Deaths from kidney disease have increased in the United States alone, 72 per cent in the last 20 years. The risk is great—you can't afford to delay. Charlevoix people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Can you ask for better proof of merit than the statement of this Charlevoix resident?

Mrs. Jennie Smith, 1206 Bridge St., Charlevoix, says: "My back got so lame I could hardly get about my housework. Finally I had to take to bed, where I remained several days absolutely helpless. I couldn't even turn over. My kidneys were weak and irregular in action. I felt miserable and was in a terrible condition when I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They brought relief from the first and continued use cured me."

BUILDING OPERATIONS ARE BRISK

CITY CLEANING UP RAPIDLY TO RECEIVE COMPANY

May Street, "Cinderella" of the Town's Roads, Now Under Repair

Lots of building, repair work, painting and road improvement going on this week. Charlevoix is putting on her new summer clothes to receive visitors and is to be a better little town than ever this season.

The gates at both ends of the swing bridge have been painted a bright red and bear the lettering on the right hand gate, "Keep Off the Gates" in prominent white letters, and "Safety First" on the left hand gate.

The shoe parlor at the bridge also has a new coat of buff, a new door has been put on and the little building looks shipshape.

Repairs to the burned portion of the hotel Charlevoix are now in progress.

The Buttars building, occupied by George Glados, is getting a new front door and fan light as we write this.

Earl Young's office building has both side walls and partition wall up and the stringers are laid for the second floor.

The concreting of the alley from Park to Clinton streets, back of the post office and the Levinson block is now completed and workmen are removing the last of their paraphernalia this morning. They should get busy next on Van Pelt Place.

Last, but not least, the road men are now at work on May street. The residents on this much neglected thoroughfare are holding their breath in the fear that they will reconsider or that something will happen to stop them.

"OLD RIB" ACCIDENTLY KILLED AT BELLAIRE

Clothing Caught in Revolving Shaft In Printing Office

J. R. Riblet, seventy-two, veteran newspaperman, familiarly known as "Old Rib" while wandering leisurely about the Bellaire Independent office Saturday, approached too near the machinery and his coat was caught between a belt and pulley, throwing him to the floor and striking his head with such force on the foot of the press that his skull was fractured, his head cut and he suffered internal injuries which developed a hemorrhage. His head was drawn under the wheel, stopping the machinery. It was not thought at first that the injury was serious, but in a few hours he sank into unconsciousness. He died Sunday.

In recent years, Mr. Riblet owned the Rapid River Hustler, had been associsted with the Central Lake Torch and for a short time had been working on the Bellaire Independent. He was a veteran of the Civil war, a graduate from West Point and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the regular army. He was a Mason.

DRAFT TO BE MADE SHORTLY

WILSON'S PROCLAMATION IS READY FOR SIGNING

Regulations for New Machinery Will Be Announced and Real Work Rushed

The American war machine which is to grind out 625,000 soldiers for service in France is geared up and ready to start work, says a dispatch from Washington.

President Wilson's proclamation of regulations which will start the machine by putting into operation the actual draft of men is completed and ready to be issued.

This proclamation tells in detail how the fate of every man eligible for army service will be decided. It directly affects every American on the registration lists.

Final Draft Approved

Since Saturday the president and Secretary Baker have been going over the final draft of the regulations, prepared by a special advisory board.

Within twenty-four hours the rules probably will be promulgated and the most vital phase of the selective conscription will begin. The regulations create two classes of exemption boards, outline their duties and enunciate general rules for exemption or draft. The personnel of local exemption boards in twenty states was decided. They will be announced within twenty-four hours.

President Wilson's proclamation does not set an exact day for the great lottery which will result in the men for America's first armies being summoned from thousnnds of homes, but all Provost Marshal General Crowder's plans are placed upon conducting this momentous lottery during the first week of July.

GERMAN SUB-MARINES AWAIT U. S. FLEET

Will Attack Transports in Atlantic on Way to Europe.

A grent fleet of German submarines is now in the Atlantic awaiting the transports that will carry American troops to France, says a despatch from Washington.

This was the belief expressed by Chairman Denman of the shipping boar following a conference with President Wilson.

The increased submarine sinkings last week indicate Germany hns her entire submarine fleet in action, said Chairman Denman.

"There was evidence the German government called in its undersea hoats for repairs during the month of May, so they would be ready to lie in wait for the American transports when they begnn carrying our troops to France."

According to last week's figures, Germany is now sinkling merchant shipping faster than it can be replaced, unless the present shipbuilding plans of the United States are greatly extended, Chairman Denman told the president.

PATH STREWN WITH THORNS

"ANN ELLA'S" COURSE SO FAR FILLED WITH TROUBLE

Captain Potter Tells Thrilling Tale of Rudderless Battle With Angry Seas

Rumors last week of a yacht ashore or disabied at South Manitou island were quickly followed by the departure of captain Sam Rose with the "E. M. B. A." to the rescue early Wednesday morning. The vessel in distress proved to be the "Ann Ella" bound from Two Rivers, Wisconsin, to Toledo, Ohio, in charge of captain R. D. Potter, of Toledo.

The Courier representative interviewed Captain Potter shortly after his arrival here and secured a detailsd account of the trip which we will let the captain tell in his own words.

"We left Two Rivers last Monday morning (June 18) at 5:30 o'clock, headed for Frankfort, and had gone about 50 miles across the lake. The wind was blowing about 30 miles an hour with a big sea running. About 20 miles off Frankfort, the boat became unmanageable and at first we thought our steering cable had parted, but, on thorough examination of the steering gear, we found everything intact and at once decided that we had lost our rudder. The boat headed right into the sea and we ran under checked engine for at least 5 miles, right back into the teeth of the storm. We finally set out our sea drag, trying to keep the boat headed into the sea, but it was impossible to do so and the boat finally came about on the port tack and with the aid of the sea anchor astern and our engine throttled very low and with some blankets and quilts tied to the forward stanchions of our canopy top, we managed to hold the craft out across between east and south east. We picked up the land hills off Empire, but at that time did not know where we were.

We went into Empire as close to the dock as we thought best and anchored. There was quite a sea rolling in on the beach but with our 125 feet of anchor chain and hundred pound anchor out, managed to hold. The crew launched the row boat from astern and captain Potter rowed to the shore and at once got into communication with Captain Smith of the coast guard service at South Manitou island. The weather looked bad to the west and northwest and Captain Smith and his crew reached us 15 miles from the island at 8:30 P. M. They came alongside and took our towline and at 12:10 A. M. we anchored in the harbor. We lost our rudder at 11:30 A. M. Monday morning.

Captain Smith then got in touch with Captain Partridge of the Charlevoix station and had him arrange for a tug to come and tow us to Charlevoix. The "E. M. B. A.," captain S. M. Rose, reached South Manitou Wednesday noon, at 12:00 o'clock and at six o'clock Wednesday evening we were tied alongside of Hamilton's boat house on Round Lake, Charlevoix."

The "Ann Ella" is a brand new boat, launched about two weeks ago at Racine, Wis., where she was built for W. F. Robison, a banker of Toledo, Ohio, and was on her way to that point for delivery to the owner when the accident occurred. She is 64 1-2 feet long, with 12 foot beam and a draft of 3 1-2 feet. She is fitted with a 75 H. P. Sterling engine with electric starter and is electrically lighted throughout. There is a spacious main saloon forward and two staterooms, galley and toilet behind this—all finished in mahogany; with crew's quarters forward below. She carries a crew of four men; captain R. D. Potter, of Toledo, mate, C. E. Shanteau, chief engineer, Albert Ewing and chef, Otho Stauntain.

The craft lay at Hamilton's boat yard on Round Lake for three days last week undergoing repairs, including an entire new rudder and rudder post with rudder protectors. She left Sunday morning for Cheboygan on her way to Toledo by way of Lake Huron.

This is not the first mishap that the "Ann Ella" has encountered on her luckless journey. When she first started out of Two Rivers she stripped the running gear and had to be towed back into that port by the coast guards from the local station; Captain Potter rowing eight miles to get help. He said when interviewed at Charlevoix that he thought the life savers were a fine bunch of men, but hoped he wouldn't have to get acquainted with every coast guard outfit between here and Toledo and that in order to "break the spell' he had called on Captain Partridge here in person to forestall the possibility of the latter's visiting him later in a life boat under less happy circumstances.

REDUCES COUNTY TAX

State's Quota of Primary School Money is $7.10 Per Pupil

The distribution of the primary school money, next month, will produce a much higher per capita payment than at first expected. Some weeks ago, superintendent Keeler figured it would be $6.50 per pupil. but now, on a recount, he announced that it would run between $7.10 and $7.11. There is now in the fund something over $724,000 and the census of children of school age taken last year showed $872,000 plus. This brings the per capita up to $7.10 and enough taxes may be added between now and then to raise it still higher.

HOW THE DRAFT WILL BE MADE

THE MICHIGAN WORK IN HANDS OF 140 BOARDS

War Department Will Fix Quota of Each Draft District and Then Draw Numbers by Lot

One hundred and forty draft boards will handle the machinery of the conscription law in Michigan.

The names of the men who compose these boards as finally appointed by Governor Sleeper and approved by President Wilson were made public Monday afternoon, by Judge Advocate-General Pepper, of the state military department.

Detroit has 26 Boards

Some industries are given more than one board, while most of the cities are allowed more than one, Detroit of course, leads with 26. Grand Rapids has three.

The members of the boards will take the oath of office as soon as the notice of their appointments reaches them. Then they will take the cards which were made at the registration and number them consecutively in red ink. The duplicates will also be given the same number. When the numbering is done, and it must be completed by July 5, the duplicates are to be sent to Washington and Lansing. Then the board is to sit back and wait until the draft is ordered by the Washington authorities.

Must Remember Cards

As military men here understand it the drafting will be done in Washington on the basis of these new numbers, not on the basis of the numbers on the registration cards. The war department will determine the quota of each draft district. It will then draw numbers by lot, either by use of the jury wheel or in some other way that will insure the absolute fairness of the drawing. It will then wire each draft board to take such and such numbers—Nos. 13, 23,44, for instance— and the individual draft boards will then pick out cards which they have numbered, 13, 23, 44, or whatever it may be, ascertain the names and registration numbers that those cards bear and publish those registration names and numbers.

If this plan is carried out the news that the war department has ordered No. 13 drafted, for instance, will not necessarily mean that the man whose registration certificate bears No. 13 will have to go. It will mean that the registration card bearing No. 13 in each particular draft board's series of new numbers will be picked out and the man whose name is registered thereon will be drafted.

Charles Novak, Richard Lewis and Dr. R. B. Armstrong are members of the draft board for this city.

After June 15th, we will give a discount of 5 per cent on all accounts paid within two days from time work is finished. Sanitary Engineering Co., opposite P. O., Phone 208. 24t2

Anti-Liquor Petition

The children of the Charlevoix M. E. Sunday school have signed a petition, addressed to our representative in Congress, praying that his influence be used to secure the passage of a bill prohibiting the further manufacture of liquor in the United States. If such a law is passed, it will save, according to estimate, 600,000,000 bushels of grain for more productive consumption.

Delco Plant Installed

The Orchard Bay farm (popularly known as the Waller farm) now has a Delco lighting plant, furnishing current for 100 lights, installed by E. Paully, of Cheboygan, who is agent for this county. THETAS ARE NOW MEETING HERE

SOME 400 FAIR COLLEGIANS CAME TUESDAY

Much Important Work To Be Accomplished But There Will Be Good Times As Well

Charlevoix is honored this week by the presence of 275 sorority sisters, members of the Kappa Alpha Theta fraternity, who are holding their 22nd. biennial grand convention at the Inn. 40 colleges are represented and 33 alumnae chapters, with delegates hailing from as many as 30 different cities of the United States. Besides these, there are more than 300 visitors who are making this their annual vacation.

A good share of the girls arrived Tuesday morning on a special train that picked up the delegates and their friends at Chicago, Toledo, Detroit and Grand Rapids, these cities being headquarters for the last stage of the journey to Charlevoix.

Their choice of headquarters is a fortunate one as several conventions have been held there in the past and Mr. Creamer is noted for the unexcelled service he offers and the tact and skill he employs to make his guests feel thoroughly at home.

The convention opened Tuesday morning and at both morning and afternoon sessions little more was done than to read minutes of the last convention, make committee reports, attend to other preliminaries, and get acquainted with each other.

This morning (Wednesday) the fraternity's various opportunities for engaging in national service were discussed and Mrs. C. J. O'Connor, of Washington, D. C., wife of the executive secretary of the Red Cross, presented plans for making the Kappa Alpha Theta an unusually active unit for Red Cross work. The society numbers more than 8,000 members and the work they can accomplish will be no small item. The New York alumnae brought a lot of material for Red Cross sewing and several afternoons are to be spent with actual work under the direction of Mrs. O'Connor. Thursday morning will be devoted to round table discussion and Red Cross sewing will be the order of the afternoon. Friday and Saturday will see the constructive work of the organization accomplished.

The Kappa Alpha Theta had 1,200 girls in college and through endowments and scholarships put eighteen girls through college this year.

The alumni chapters are represented by Mrs. H. G. Henne, Austin; Mrs. Esther Donnelly Smith, Baltimore; Laura A. Merrill, Boston; Elizabeth C. Isham, Burlington; Mrs. Adelane Priest Borsett, Chicago; Mrs. Elizabeth Cellarius, Cincinnati; Mrs. Kate Johnson Harris, Cleveland; Mrs. Mabel Moore Taft, Columbus; Bertha M. Ballard, Detroit; Mrs. Marjorie Benton Haviland, Evanston, Mrs. Lucy Hughes Murray, Indianapolis; Sarah Morrison, Kansas City; Katherine Cline, Lincoln; Maud Philips, Los Angeles; Mary Buell, Madison; Mrs. Gipsy Robinson Kimball, New York; Mariam Brooks, Oklahoma City; Loa J. Howard, Omaha; Elizabeth Keller, Philadelphia; Miss Belle Bartholomew Pratt, Pittsburg; Ethel G. Westcott, Providence; Marien Swesey, Pullman; Mrs. Margaret Philbrook Neff, St. Louis; Jesse Watson, San Francisco; Mrs. Agnes Lovejoy Shannon, Seattle; Inis S. Williams, Spokane; Lola E. Lowther, Syracuse; Mrs. Elma Leonard McPherson, Tacoma; Charlotte M. Leavitt, Topeka; Mary Beatrice Millman, Toronto; Mrs. Ethel Ridgeway Fowler, Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The University of Michigan chapter is represented by Miss Mary J. Tinsman; Illinois by Miss Marion McConnell; Indiana by Miss Louise Hall Stubbins; Northwestern by Miss Victoria Ervin; Ohio by Corinne Putman; Minnesota by Miss Helen Bebum and Wisconsin by Miss Dororthy Bell.

The fraternity officers are: President, Mrs. Hope Davis Macklin, Pittsburg; vice-president, Mrs. Hazel Allison Forde, Emporia, Neb.; treasurer Mrs. Martha Cline Huffman, Lincoln, Neb.; secretary and fraternity editor, Miss L. Pearl Green, Ithaca, N. Y.

This afternoon the Thetas are going to Petoskey on the Manitou. In addition to their business sessions, social teas, athletic tournaments,

BROUGHT FATHER AND DAUGHTER TOGETHER

After a Separation Covering a Period of Some Eight Years

Conuty agent Madison was well pleased Friday to be the means of uniting a father and daughter, says the East Jordan Enterprise. Some eight years ago agent Madison took on request a young girl, about 5 years old from the Lutheran Child's Home at Bay City, to a woman at Boyne City, who had agreed to care for her. The child went by the name of Frances Coxe. She was at Boyne City but a short time when on account of mistreatment he had to find her another place and took her into his own home for a spell. Later he found her a home with John Schroeder, of Echo township until since his death she was again in need of a home. Mr. Madison had got track of an aunt of the girl and had written her, and was this week out looking for another place for her, when on Thursday the girl's father and aunt appeared to claim the girl. The father, Alonzo Cruiksey, is a sailor, and his wife dying he had lost all trace of his daughter, and for some years past had been trying in a way to find her.

MICHIGAN TRADESMAN SPEAKS PLAIN TRUTH

Rehearses Depths of Depravity to Which Soldiers of Kaiser Have Sunk

"The civilized world has been shocked beyond measure over the atrocities committed by the German army and the German people during the kaiser's war," says the leading editorial in The Michigan Tradesman of June 20.

"What makes the matter worse," continues the editorial, "is that nearly all of these atrocities have been carefully considered during the years of peace and worked out in detail with all the exactness of German militarism and German science. It is now fully established, both by statements of captured German officers and documentary evidence, that plans were made years ago to pursue a policy which places the Germans in a class by themselves as worse than wild beasts, because they resort to inhuman practices which challenge the detestation of the civilized world. In their desperate determination to destroy the French and Belgian nations, the German people are resorting to expedients which demonstrate, beyond the question of a doubt, the depth of depravity to which they have sunk. They are emasculating every French, Belgian and Polish soldier and citizen they capture. Even little children are mutilated in this manner by the wretched beasts who glory in the German name and aim in this manner to prevent the people they have betrayed and decimated from re-establishing themselves as free and indepetndent nations after the Prussian monster has been crushed.

"The Tradesman makes this statement—unpleasant as it appears in print—in the full knowledge of its absolute truth. There is no longer any question that the German nation deliberately planned to destroy the people of all countries pledged to the cause of human liberty and common humanity. It goes without saying that American soldiers who are captured by the German army will receive the same treatment that is being inflicted upon our allies.

"Not content with gloating over the mutilation and emasculation of persons of the male persuasion, the German soldiers have made it a rule of war to outrage every allied Red Cross nurse they have captured. This fiendish work accomplished, they have deliberately slashed off the breasts of the women and sent the mutilated wrecks back to the allied lines with cloth badges—prepared years before the kaiser declared war—bearing the inscription, 'This is War.'

"In the light of these disclosures, fully authenticated and now known to be a part of the war propaganda which Germany has been teaching her people for years—and which the Germans accepted as their birthright, on the theory that they are 'God's chosen people'—it is in order to enquire how long the God of Battles will permit such a people to exist and continue their brutal and barbaric outrages?

"How can any man with a drop of German blood in his veins ever think of his nativity or ancestry without the blush of shame mantling his face?

"How can any man with a German name continue to bear the badge of dishonor without realizing that he is the object of universal contempt and condemnation?

"The writer is one-quarter German, and he would give all he has in this world and all he expects to possess in the world to come to be able to wash this curse out of his veins."

Rickaby-Katar

Francis Rickaby, caddie master at the Charlevoix golf links, was married at Galesburg, Illinois, to Miss Lillian Katar, of Auburndale, Florida, on Tuesday, June 19th last. The young couple left immediately for this city where they will spend the summer months. They will be at home next September in Grand Forks, N. D., where Mr. Rickaby has accepted a position as a teacher of English at the University of North Dakota.

A Health Food

You hear a great deal nowadays about health foods and probably will be interested to know what a famous chemist says about some of them.

"Bread substitutes may be used occasionally in order to get a variety of tastes, but it should always be held in mind that white bread is the most palatable, most nutritious and most economic form in which we can obtain our carbohydrate food."—Dr. Victor C. Vaughn.

HOTBED GARDENS.

Early vegetable crops have proved quite profitable in many instances in Oklahoma, says C. W. Rapp of the department of horticulture, Oklahoma Agricultural college. This is especially true of lettuce and radishes when planted in hotbeds or cold frames. For the extreme early crops a hotbed will be necessary, but lettuce and radishes are rather hardy and can be grown in a cold frame quite early in the season.

In most instances a bed of good, rich soil is ridged behind some sheltered place. A frame may be used, but is not necessary. The seed is sown and some form of protection is provided for severe weather.

Lettuce, radishes and other hardy vegetables, when planted in this way and properly handled, are frequently ready for use from four weeks to six weeks before those planted in the open.

Our Sleep.

As a race we sleep toolittle. An infant's life is nearly all sleep. Gradually as the child grows older the hours of sleep are shortened. Youth till the age of twenty is reached requires fully ten hours' sleep. Although nature demands fewer hours' sleep in summer than in winter, it has been proved that eight hours of sleep are required for the average adult in good health. By this is meant not simply eight hours in bed, but that amount of good, sound, restful sleep night after night. Our power to work is intimately related to our ability to sleep, and there is no more reliable indication of sound health than the capacity to sleep naturally, and the more active and energetic the waking life the deeper the sleep.

Tripled Her Baking Capacity.

"One day, when baking cookies," says a housewife in the Woman's Home Companion, "I expressed a wish for larger pans. My husband said, 'Why not have some made to fit the oven?' He then measured the grate and went down to the hardware store. In a few days I had two Russia iron pans 19½ by 13½ inches and one inch deep. As those pans hold three dozens of cookies I can do my baking very much more quickly than I could with the old pans, which only held twelve cookies."

Hope.

A woman took her husband to a noted alienist for what seemed to be a beginning psychosis and to decide whether he should be placed in a sanitarium. After a lengthy consultation she drew the physician aside and asked him impatiently for his verdict. He responded, "There are hopes, madam, but it is at present only a surmise."—Medical Pickwick.

THEATRICAL.

Nazimova's Brilliant Career

Devotees of all that is finest in the art of the theatre recognize in Nazimova one of the most distinguished actresses of the day. It was a distinct surprise to the old, established motion picture producing firms to learn, a few weeks ago, that she had signed a contract to appear in photo dramas for Herbert Brennon and Selznick-pictures. Many offers have been made to Nazimova, but she had rejected them all, and the secret of her final capitulation to the newest of the producing concerns was that she was present at a private view of Mr. Brennon's latest masterpiece, "A Danghter of the Gods," and was so impressed with its imaginative qualities that she no longer hesitated to embark in the new art.

Ever since Nazimova came to the English speaking stage her career has heen an unbroken record of successes. Ihsen's plays were formerly regarded as a drug on the market, and yet in one after another of those history-making classics she scored tremendously. In "A Doll's House," "Hedda Gahler" and "Little Eyolf," she won the highest laurels. She turned to comedy and in "The Countess Coquette" she was equally successful. She is the only player who has heen ahle to introduce successfully to the American stage a full length drama hy the great Arthur Schnitzler, and in "The Fairy Tale" she scored again.

Departing from this European repertoire, she starred in "Bella Donna" playing to crowded houses in all the cities in the United States. Turning to vaudeville, she reached the zenith of her popularity in the only war play, hased upon the present struggle, which is conceded to be of permanent value. In "War Brides" she is no longer the patrician, hut a humble village girl, who revolts against militarism, and with the same suhtelty as in her "Hedda" and "Bella Donna" hrings new meaning to the portrait of the appressed women of a great empire.

"War Brides" one of the greatest of the Herbert Brennon productions will he shown at the Majestic, Monday, July 2.

MICHIGAN LOOP A GREAT ASSET

SO HIGHWAY ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT THINKS

Judge M. M. Allison Lauds Work of State on Dixie And Mackinaw Trunk Line Roads

"It would have been a fatal mistake not to have included the Michigan Loop in the Dixie Highway," said Judge Allison, of Chattanooga, Tenn., president of the Dixie Highway Association. "People of the south and central states wanted to visit Michigan, the greatest summer resort in the Union. It is as important that the Dixie Highway should serve the great summer playgrounds of Michigan as the winter resort region of Florida. Both the Dixie Highway Association and the state of Michigan are fortunate in having such men as president P. T. Colgrove of the Michigan Good Roads Association, Frank Hamilton of Traverse City, and W. E. Metzger of Detroit on the Board of Directors of the Association.

"When the movement for a great highway from the Lakes to the Gulf was first suggested and the conference of governors called, it was not intended that Michigan should be included. However, a delegation from Michigan headed by Mr. P. T. Colgrove came down to the meeting held in Chattanooga and insisted that Michigan be given a part in the construction of this great highway. You know Phil Colgrove, and you know when he starts out for anything he is practically sure of getting it. On behalf of his state Mr. Colgrove made certain promises relative to just what this state would do in the construction of the highway. The Board of Directors from the other states capitulated and Michigan was admitted. The governor of Michigan very wisely appointed Mr. Colgrove and Frank Hamilton, the veterans good roads worker of Traverse City, as the state's representatives on the board.

"The progress which has been made along the Dixie Highway in the two years the work has been under way amply justifies the support of the state of Michigan in the past and the continuation of its co-operation in the future.

"The highway from the Michigan line to the Kentucky mountains will be all well provided for by fall. The mountain counties of Eastern Kentucky have offered the most difficult problems. They are willing to do their best but their resources are small. They are somewhat high spirited, causing many difficulties in settlement of questions of routing. They are doing a wonderful work. When the Dixie Highway was first launched the Eastern division from Richmond, Kentucky, practically to Knoxville, Tennessee, was on paper. Sections of the highway between Knoxville and Chattanooga were travelable only in dry weather. Today, out of a mileage of 300 from Berea, Kentucky, to Chattanooga there is one little dispute relative to five miles of the highway which is the only thing standing in the way of a well surfaced Dixie Highway by the close of this year. As a result of our visit to these counties before coming to Michigan, it looks as if the counties of Laurel and Rockcastle will reach a compromise regarding the meeting point.

"Between Chattanooga and Atlanta there remain fourteen miles of the highway to be surfaced. This will be cared for this year. Between Atlanta and Macon the highway has been designated as the first Federal Aid Project. The counties will at least re-surface their highway this summer. From Atlanta to Savannah over the Eastern division, the greater portion of the highway is of sand clay well maintained in the summer months. From Savannah to Jacksonville minor improvements have been made. This route is now travelable. From Jacksonville to Miami—along the Eastern division the few remaining stretches are being rapidly surfaced, and by fall of this year practically a boulevard will be provided.

Great Military Asset For Nation

"Of the progress which has been on Michigan's section of the Dixie Highway you have been informed in the very complete reports on road construction which have been brought before the convention. In a very few years Michigan's system of highways will equal if not surpass those of any state in the Union. The states and the counties have been building the Dixie Highway during the past two years mindful only of its advantages in times of peace. With the nation at war, the Dixie Highway, completed, would be one of the nation's greatest military assets. Colonel Henry T. Allen, now commanding the Thirteenth United States Cavalry, two years ago saw in the Dixie Highway a magnificient line through a section which has always furnished more than its quota of soldiers and connecting up great manufacturing and vast supply centers of food production areas. Colonel Allen had stated that it would constitute a highly important base line sufficiently far from the coast to be reasonably safe from air crafts, yet sufficiently close for many war requirements. It is therefore highly important from a military standpoint that the Dixie Highway be completed at the earliest possible moment.

A Dixie Highway available for motor truck service could be used by the business interests affected by the shortage of cars, thereby keeping plants going and business normal.

SECOND OFFICERS' TRAINING CAMP

TO OPEN AUGUST 27 AT FORT LOGAN H. ROOTS, ARKANSAS

Application Blanks May Now Be Obtained From Mason Rose at Local Postoffice

The United States government, in announcing its plans for the second officers' training camp, makes a special appeal to men of mature age. The war department strongly desires men who, by virtue of their ripe judgment and that force of character which come with years, are able to lead others.

Men of 31 and over, and up to 44 years of age, are particularly wanted—professional men—men now holding responsible positions and business executives and men of special military training up to 50 years. The military officials point out further that the more mature men, who are ready to serve their country st wer, should consider it a solemn duty to apply for positions as officers rather than to be content through modesty, with a place in the ranks.

Mr. Rose, in charge of the local officers' recruiting headquarters of the Military Training Camps Association, emphezises the words of the Washington office. "Since the best ideal of service is for every man to do what he is particularly fitted for, men of maturity should consider that they are fulfilling their plain duty by qualifying as officers; that they are serving their country most efficiently by serving as commanders."

This is the final call for older men from civil life, who have a fund of real, personal experience. Younger men can rise from the ranks. The training camp is primarily for those over 31 years of age.

The war department makes it very clear that when the men, who secure commissions at this last camp, have taken their places as leaders of the first 500,000, all promotions will be from the rank and file.

Qualifications

In brief, the following are the qualifications for admission to the new training camps.

An intelligent, trained mind. Executive business ability. Previous military training is an asset— but not necessary.. The maximum age limit is fifty years; the minimum, twenty years, nine months. However, in order to obtain the experienced class of men desired, preference will be given to those over 31 years of age, other things being equal.

The war department expressly states that because of the anticipated large number of applications, it will probably be difficult for men under 31 years to qualify, except in instances where the applicants have pre-eminent qualifications or unusual military experience,

The government will pay civilians in training at the rate of $100 per month, and will also furnish transportation, subsistence and uniform. Men who receive commissions will be paid while in active service, at the same rate as regular United States army officers, which is as follows:

Second lieutenant	$1,700.00
First lieutenent	2,000.00
Captain	2,400.00
Major	3,000.00
Lieutenant-colonel	4,000.00

Immediate Response Necessary

Applications for the second training camp will be received between June 15th and July 15th at the local officers' recruiting headquarters. Under no circumstances will an applicant be considered after July 15. Upon the termination of this period, army examiners will visit various points, to be announced, in each state. An applicant selected for personal and physical examination will be notified to appear before the regular army officer in person, at a convenient point, for inquiry into his record, capacity, leadership, and qualifications in general.

The obligation involved is "enlistment for a period of three months only." Applicants will agree to accept, at the end of the training, such commission in the army of the United States as may be tendered by the Secretary of War. The enlistment, however, obligates one to service in the training camp only.

The two camps for divisional area X, Wisconsin and Michigan, will be located at Fort Logan H. Roots, Arkansas.

Until further notice we will give a dollar discount on all tires for Ford Cars, G & J. make—none better. S. Orlowski & Son—Adv 20tf

SCHOOL COMMISSIONER'S NOTES

Two applications for admittance to the county normal class opening September 10 are already signed and on file. Several others have declared their intentions of entering the class. The first commissioners' meeting of the summer has been called for June 26 in Mount Pleasant. The topic is "New Legislation." The second Round Table for the summer is July 12 and 13, with noted specialists on Mental Hygiene. The commissioner expects to attend both of these. July 9 is the biggest day of the school year. It is the time that you decide what men will have charge of your school affairs for the next three years. Your school makes your boys and girls men and women. The same law that took away from the electors all powers to render decisions in school matters, placed upon those electors the responsibility of choosing the right men to render these decisions. Your school house is your child's residence during the most plastic period of his life. Men and women, it is your responsibility. It is up to you. Attend the annual meating. Let nothing interfere.

The diplomas given as awards of merit for a full year of perfect punctual attendance have arrived. Any who have not received these earlier in the year may have them on request. The few schools still open should consider it a sacred, patriotic, religious and educational duty to instill into the minds of every child in every way possible, that the Red Cross is the greatest humanitarian organization existing, in the world today. We must care for the wounded, no matter what the creed or what the nation. Each boy and each girl may be able to do only a little, but that little is a sacred obligation, and he should learn now to do his bit. It would be well for every teacher to get in touch with the nearest Red Cross organization to ask what can best be done to assist in this great work.

The school year is drawing to a close. Except in cases of special interest to the public there will be no commissioner's notes during July and the first of August.

ROUND UP THE LOAFERS

That there are two million men of draft age throughout the country who will do no regular work and are virtually parasites was asserted in a recent conference in the office of the surgeon-general at Washington. That may be an exaggeration, but the figures are high enough at best. These men for the most part escape military service because of physical defects brought about by lack of discipline and bad habits. To round up these men, cure those who can be cured, and get what work out of them is possible so that they may not be drags upon the nation, is the problem before the government.

Just which plan will be adopted for reclaiming the latent labor now being wasted may safely be left to the government officials. But that such an army of wasters exists is a disgrace to the nation as a whole and to every community which has turned out even one of the young idlers.

It's not only the big cities which produce the bums. Hardly a village in the land but has its little group of corner loafers. And somewhere, somehow, the community which produces them has failed. Its schools have failed or its homes have failed, or it has failed to provide decent recreation facilities for its boys.

And why should boys be allowed to idle away their days anyhow? A boy—or a girl—ought to be in school as long as possible, and there should be no gap between school and work. This is no argument against restful vacations; invigorating recreation. Street corner loafing is neither. It serves no purpose. It is wholly destructive. There is no excuse for tolerating it.

AN INEXCUSABLE DELAY

War with Germany has been foreshadowed in this country for more than two years. By the first of the year all signs pointed to it so unmistakably that only the most sanguine of pacifists could doubt its coming. It was in fact declared April 6.

Not until June did the war department select the first of the sites for the cantonments in which the great new armies were to be housed and trained. As a result it is now reported that the camps which should be ready about September 1 will not be fit to receive soldiers until nearer Christmas.

A philosophic observer remarked in November last that the last thing the War Department was thinking of was war. The comment seems to have been justified. It would seem to have been the plainly obvious thing for that Department, when a great part of the country was loudly demanding war, to have taken the preliminary steps for receiving and caring for the soldiers that would be enrolled. Secretary Baker must have known that the creation of great armies would be the first step in hostilities. It should have been his study, months before the actual declaration of war, to have had the matter of the sites for the camps definitely settled, and the plans for their construction so well advanced that contracts could have been let within forty-eight hours of the actual declaration of war.

The utter failure of the Secretary of War to do this, apparently even to attempt it, is the most concrete example of inefficiency the record has yet presented.

GREED AND DEMAND

Mr. Hoover tells us that the food barons of the country have robbed the people of $250,000,000 during recent months by their manipulation of food supplies and prices. Right on the heels of this statement comes the statement from the Federal Trade Commission that, unless the government interposes, the coal barons will be charging the people from $14 to $20 a ton for coal next winter.

This is all cheerful information—only it isn't information. The people know they have been robbed; they know that inordinate human greed, and not a shortage in supply, is what has compelled the people to pay the highest prices ever known for food stuffs.

But what is the government going to do about it? That is what the people are interested in knowing. The situation demands drastic action. It is time for the administration to begin establishing a few precedents and not to content itself with following the cut and dried rules of former governmental failures and shortcomings and blunderings. If the Republican party were in control of affairs at Washington how the Democrats would roar and rant and blame it all on the "party of plutocrats." We suspect that if the Republicans were in control, with one T. Roosevelt in the White House, there would be a shaking of guilty bones among those responsible.

Any men, or combinations of men who would manipulate the nation's food and fuel supplies so as to rob the people to the extent that they have been robbed ought to be lined up against a stone wall and shot as inhuman traitors to their country and to their fellow human beings. They are human vultures in comparison with whom highwaymen and cold-blooded murderers are gentlemen animated by the very quintessence of human kindness.

THETAS ARE NOW MEETING HERE

boat rides, horseback trips, golf tennis and bathing in the big pool at the Inn are planned for their diversion.

Robert Bridge was appointed chairman of the local reception committee at the last meeting of the Charlevoix Commercial association, and he and his assistants have done their work well. Streamers of welcome in the fraternity colors (orauge and black) now decorate many of the shop windows as well as the big banner across Bridge street. Friday afternoon, the committee has arranged to take the visitors around Pine Lake—a fifty mile drive, for which about 70 autos have been secured. They will go first to East Jordan, where a band will play for them and from there to Boyne City where refreshments will be served. Friday evening a "weiny" roast on the beach has been planned. Through the courtesy of the Chicago Club, free use of the golf course has been secured throughout the week.

We are proud to have this organization with us and hope the girls will enjoy their stay in Charlevoix so thoroughly that they will want to come again on another occasion. The convention closes next Saturday.

SECOND BENEFIT DANCE AT BEACH

For Red Cross Work—To Be Held Wednesday, July 4th

A benefit dancing party is planned for the evening of July 4th, to be given at the Beach hotel for the benefit of the Red Cross society. Music will be furnished by Solomon's orchestra and the bill will be $1 per couple.

It is hoped that the affair will be liberally patronized as the last benefit dance proved very effective in assisting the splendid work of the Red Cross. It is a fine thing to see how the people of this community have risen to the occasion and entered heart and soul into various activities connected with the preparation of our great nation for the impending struggle. We cannot have too much of this enthusiastic effort and there is no worthier object for its application than the Red Cross work.

Shore Acre Barn Dance on 16th Complete Success

A barn dance at the Shore Acres farm, on the Boyne City road a week ago Saturday evening was well attended. Over a hundred couples were present and a good time enjoyed by all, and the best of order was maintained.

Excellent music was furnished by an orchestra of four pieces—piano, violin, bass and snare drums from Boyne City. Ice cream cones topped off the enjoyment of the evening.

The dance on the 30th of this month is expected to be fully as much of a success as the last one and everybody is urged to come and have a good time.

HEART of the SUNSET

Paloma chattered viciously: "Everybody in Texas is here. I wish we'd thought to scatter tacks behind us."

Cautiously they swung the door back and looked out. The open space along the river bank was leveled by the moonlight; from Morales' house, to their right, came the sound of voices. The women waited.

A few moments, then a number of men appeared. Paloma judged there were at least a dozen, but she was too excited to count them. As they came straggling toward the pumphouse one of them called back:

"Morales! Put out your lights." Both women recognized Tad Lewis as the speaker.

Alaire had stubbornly refused to charge her husband with any active share in this evil business, but her faith in Ed suddenly vanished when she heard him say:

"Hush! You're making too much noise. You'd better scatter out, too, for there's no telling where they'll land." Alaire leaned weakly against the door. "I'm going to leave, and let you-all attend to the rest," he was saying. But Tad Lewis halted him as he turned from the group.

"Where are you going, Ed? You left your car back yonder by the road. I almost ran into it."

"Eh? What are you talking about? My car is over by Morales' house."

"Senor Austin is in a great hurry," sneered someone in Spanish. "Once more he leaves all of the fighting to his friends."

"That's Adolfo Urbina," panted Paloma. "I know him." Stung by this open charge of cowardice, Austin began a voluble defense, but in the midst of it General Longorio addressed him sharply.

"You will stay here, senor. Nobody leaves this place."

"I told you I wouldn't be a party to the business," Ed declared hotly. "You forced me to come in the first place—"

"Yes! And now I force you to stay."

Longorio's stand appeared to please Lewis, who chimed in with the words: "That's right, Ed. You've got to stick, for once in your life."

"What do you mean, you nearly ran into my car back yonder?" Austin asked after a moment.

"Ain't that your machine yonder by the thicket?" inquired Lewis. "If it ain't, whose is it?" As no one answered, he started in the direction he had indicated; but at that moment a man came running from the river bank, crying softly:

"Look out! They come."

A man passed swiftly by the crack of the half-open door and scarcely ten feet beyond. He was followed by three others.

The first of the newcomers, acting as spokesman for his party, stepped out into the moonlight and cried loudly: "Hello, men! What's goin' on here?" It was an American voice; it had a broad, slow Texas drawl.

The group of plotters turned; there was a startled murmur, then Tad Lewis answered:

"Hello! Who are you! What do you want?"

"I reckon we must have got off the road," announced the stranger. Then he peered out across the river. "Say! Ain't that a skiff yonder?" he inquired.

"Well, it don't look like a steamboat." Lewis laughed disagreeably.

"Hello, Men! What's Going on Here?"

"We're havin' a little party of our own, I reckon you fellows had better beat it. Understand?"

The outposts that had been sent to cover the bank in both directions were now coming in. Through the stillness of the night there sounded the thump of oarlocks. Seeing that the stranger did not seem to take his hint, Lewis raised his voice menacingly:

"That's your road back yonder. It's a right good road, and I'd advise you to travel fast."

But this suggestion was also ignored; in fact, it appeared to amuse the man addressed, for he, too, laughed. He turned, and the women noticed that he carried a short saddle gun. They saw, also, that at least one of the men at his back was similarly armed.

"Now, what's the hurry?" The stranger was chuckling. Suddenly he raised his voice and called loudly: "Hello, Dave! Is that you-all?"

The answer floated promptly back: "Hello, Cap! Sure it's us."

"Have you got him?"

It was Blaze Jones' voice which answered this time: "You bet!"

Paloma Jones was trembling now. She clung to Alaire, crying, thankfully: "It's the Rangers! The Rangers!" Then she broke away and ran out into the moonlight, trailing her absurd firearm after her.

"Now, boys," the Ranger captain was saying, "I know 'most every one of you, and we ain't going to have the least bit of trouble over this thing, are we? I reckon you-all are friends of Ricardo Guzman, and you just couldn't wait to find out about him, eh?"

Alaire, who had followed Paloma, was close enough now to recognize the two Guzman boys as members of the Ranger party. Lewis and his men had drawn together at the first alarm; Longorio's Mexicans had gathered about their leader. The entire situation had changed in a moment, and the Ranger captain was in control of it.

Soon Dave Law and Blaze Jones came up over the river bank; they paused, stricken with surprise at finding a score of people where they had expected no more than four.

Blaze was the first to speak. "What's all this?" he cried. He peered near-sightedly from one to the other; then his huge hulk shook with laughter: "Say, do my glasses magnify, or is this an open lodge meetin'?"

"Dad! Oh, dad!" Paloma scurried to him and flung herself into his arms.

"What you doin' here, kid?" the father exclaimed. "Why, you'd ought to be home and abed, long ago. You'll catch your death of cold. Is that gun loaded?"

Dave Law was even more amazed than his companion. Recovering from his first surprise, he took a position beside his superior officer. Captain Evans did not seem at all troubled by the disparity in numbers. One Ranger, or two at the most, had always been sufficient to quell a Texan disturbance; now that there were three of them, he felt equal to an invasion of Mexican soil, if necessary. In consequence, he relaxed his watchful vigilance, and to Dave he drawled:

"We've got most of the leading citizens of the county, and I reckon somebody in the outfit will be able to identify Guzman."

"There's no trouble about that, sir. We found him. Pedro and Raoul can make sure." The sons of Ricardo Guzman stepped forward promptly, and Law waved them toward the boat landing, where the two helpers were waiting with Ricardo's remains.

Despite the Ranger captain's easy assumption of command, the strain of the situation had not subsided, and Longorio drew swift attention to himself when he said:

"It is fortunate that I chanced to learn of this matter. You have done me a great service, Senor Law, for I came to Romero purposely to examine into the death of this unfortunate man. But I could learn nothing; nobody knew anything whatever about the matter, and so I became convinced that it amounted to little. Now—behold! I discover that I was deceived. Or—perhaps there still may be a mistake."

Blaze Jones thrust his daughter aside and advanced toward the speaker. "There's no mistake," he declared belligerently. "I don't make mistakes when I go grave-roddin'. Don Ricardo was shot by your men. He had five thousand dollars on him, or he should have had, and he was an American citizen. Your Colonel Blanco covered the body, but he'll have a h—l of a job coverin' the facts. It's time we came to a showdown with your murderin' outfit, and I aim to see if you've got a government in your country."

"Heaven guided my hand," devoutly breathed the general. "It is regrettable that you used this means when a word to me would have served the purpose, for—it is no trivial matter to desecrate a Mexican graveyard. My country, it has a government. An officer of the state of Texas, under arms, has crossed the Rio Grande. What does that mean?"

Captain Evans had a sense of humor; Longorio's ominous words amused him. "Say, general, it ain't the first time," he chortled. "And you're an officer, too, ain't you? You're in Texas at this minute, and I'll bet if I frisked you I'd find that you was under arms." The Mexican understood English sufficiently well to grasp the significance of these words. After a moment's consideration, therefore, he modified his threatening tone.

"But my mission was friendly. I had no criminal purpose," he said mildly. "However—perhaps one offense condones the other. At any rate, we must have no international complications. There is a more practical side to the matter: If Don Ricardo Guzman met his death in Mexico, there will be a rigid investigation, I assure you."

Evans agreed. "That's fair! And I'll make a bargain with you: you keep still and so'll we. We never aimed for this affair to get out, anyhow. I reckon these men"—he indicated Lewis and his followers—"ain't liable to talk much."

The two Guzman boys, greatly moved, returned to announce that they had identified their father's body, and Longorio could not well refuse to accept their evidence.

"Very well," said he. "I am indebted to you. Since there is nothing more to be said, apparently, I will return to Romero." With a bow to Mrs. Austin, who had silently watched the play of these opposing motives, he turned away, and Tad Lewis followed him.

But Dave Law had recognized Adolfo Urbina in the crowd, and, stepping forward, disarmed him, saying:

"Adolfo, there's a warrant for you, so I'll just take you in."

For a moment Adolfo was inclined to resist, but, thinking better of it, he yielded with bad grace, bitterly regretting the curiosity which had prompted him to remain to the end of this interesting affair.

Tad Lewis gave him some comfort. "Never mind, Adolfo," he said. "They can't prove anything on you, and I'll go your bail. Ed Austin knows where you was the day that stock was stole." He and his two remaining men moved toward their automobile, and a moment later the vehicle went clattering away up the thicket road.

So ended the attempt to foil the return of Ricardo Guzman's body to Texas soil.

When Alaire came to look for her husband, he was gone.

CHAPTER XIV.

Superstitions and Certainties.

The sensation caused by Ricardo Guzman's disappearance was as nothing to that which followed the recovery of his body. Whatever the facts of the rescue, it was generally recognized that the result had been to bring on a crisis in the affairs of the two nations. Strong influences, however, were at work to prevent that very outcome for which the people of Texas prayed. During the delay there arose a report that Ricardo Guzman had borne an evil reputation, and that he had been so actively associated with the rebel cause as to warrant punishment by the federal government. Moreover, a legal question as to his American citizenship was raised—a question which seemed to have important bearing upon the case.

Public interest is short-lived; few living men can hold it more than a day or two, and it reckons no dead man worthy of more than an obituary notice. Thus in the course of time the Guzman incident was in a fair way of being officially forgotten and forgiven.

But there were several persons who felt intense relief at the course events had taken, and among these was Alaire Austin. In the days following that midnight expedition she had had ample time in which to meditate upon her husband's actions. It seemed probable that he had fled to San Antonio, there to remain until interest in the Guzman matter had abated.

Alaire telephoned Dave Law, arguing to herself that she must learn more about her husband's connection with the Lewis gang. Dave arrived even sooner than she had expected. She made him dine with her, and they spent the evening on the dim-lit gallery. In the course of their conversation Alaire discovered that Dave, too, had a hidden side of his nature; that he possessed an imagination, and with it a quaint, whimsical, exploratory turn of mind which enabled him to talk interestedly of many things and many places. On this particular evening he was anything but the man of iron she had known—until she ventured to speak of Ed. Then he closed up like a trap. He was almost gruff in his refusal to say a word about her husband.

Because of Ed's appropriation of the ranch cash, Alaire found it necessary a few days later to go to the bank, and, feeling the need of exercise, she rode her horse Montrose. When her errands had been attended to, she suddenly decided to call on Paloma Jones. It was years since she had voluntarily done such a thing; the very impulse surprised her.

Paloma, it happened, was undergoing that peculiar form of feminine torture known as "fitting;" but insecurely basted, pinned and tucked as she was, she came flying down to the gate to meet her visitor.

Alaire was introduced to Mrs. Strange, the dressmaker, a large, acidulous brunette, with a mouthful of pins; and then, when Paloma had given herself once more into the seamstress' hands, the two friends gossiped.

"I don't know what dad will say when he gets the bill for these dresses," Paloma confessed.

"Your father is a mighty queer man," Mrs. Strange observed. "I haven't so much as laid eyes on him."

Paloma nodded. "Yes. And he's getting more peculiar all the time; I can't make out what ails him."

"Where is he now?" asked Alaire.

"Heaven knows! Out in the barn or under the house." Taking advantage of the dressmaker's momentary absence from the room, Paloma continued in a whisper: "I wish you'd talk to dad and see what you make of him. He's absolutely—queer. Mrs. Strange seems to have a peculiar effect on him. Why, it's almost as if—"

"What?"

"Well, I suppose I'm foolish, but—I'm beginning to believe in spells. You know, Mrs. Strange's husband is a sort of—necromancer."

"How silly!"

There was no further opportunity for words, as the woman reappeared at that instant; but a little later Alaire went in search of Blaze, still considerably mystified. As she neared the farm buildings, she glimpsed a man's figure hastily disappearing into the barn. The figure bore a suspicious resemblance to Blaze Jones, yet when she followed, he was nowhere to be seen.

"Mr. Jones!" Alaire called. She repeated Blaze's name several times; then something stirred. The door of a harness closet opened cautiously, and out of the blackness peered Paloma's father. He looked more owlish than ever behind his big, gold-rimmed spectacles. "What in the world are you doing in there?" she cried.

Blaze emerged, blinking. He was dusty and perspiring.

"Hello, Miz Austin!" he saluted her with a poor assumption of breeziness. "I was fixin' some harness, but I'm right glad to see you."

Alaire regarded him quizzically. "What made you hide?" she asked.

"Hide? Who, me?"

"I saw you dodge in here like a—gopher."

Blaze confessed: "I reckon I've got the willies. Every woman I see looks like that dressmaker."

"Paloma was telling me about you. Why do you hate her so?"

"I don't know 's I hate her, but her and her husband have put a jinx on me. They're the worst people I ever see, Miz Austin."

RUN OVER AND KILLED

Falls Under Wheels While Driving a Team

H. J. Mercier, a teamster in the employ of G. VonPlaten, was run over and instantly killed Monday afternoon, of last week, by a pair of big wheels loaded with logs that he was driving. No one saw the accident, but it was evident that he had stumbled and fell pulling on one line which forced his team off the road and one wheel caught him before he could get out of the way, the wheel passing over his neck. A tow team was helping pull the load, but the man driving the head team heard nothing and only discovered something was wrong when he discovered the wheel team was not in the road.

TO CAN FOOD IN THE HOME

SIMPLE PROCESS RECOMMENDED BY EXPERTS

Adults and Children Easily Can Put Up Froits and Vegetables By These Methods

Can Surplus Food But Use Jars and Cans Wisely

Don't have an empty preserving jar in your home next fall.

There may be some difficulty in securing cans and preserving jars.

Reserve regular tight sealing containers for vegetables, concentrated soups, meats, and fish.

Concentrate products so that each jar or can will hold as much food and as little water as possible.

Put up jams, jellies, and preserves in glasses sealed with cork or paper and paraffin. Pack fruit juices in ordinary bottles.

Don't can anything that can be kept just as well dried or in other forms. Dry navy and muture Lima beans for winter use.

Produce in your garden lots of cubbage, potatoes and root crops that can be kept for the winter without canning.

How to Can by the One-Period Cold-Pack Method

Don't let vnluable surplus fruits and vegetnbles go to waste. Adults and children in a very few hours, with little other home equipment than a wash boiler and cans and jars, can preserve much valunble perishable food for next winter's use. Succulent vegetables and fruits are importnnt to health the year round. See that your table is supplied.

The simple one period cold-pack method described is that taught by the U. S. Department of Agriculture for the boys and girls of the canning clubs in the Northern and Western states. With tbis method thousands of boys and girls each season put up vast quantities of frults and vegetables. With this method practically every vegetable and friut grown in this section can he canned.

The wash-boller method described below is entirely effective. Those who desire mny purchuse home-size water-seal, steam pressure or pressure cooker canning outfits which save time and fuel.

Preliminary Preparation for Canning

Provide a false bottom of wooden lattice work, cross pieces of wood, or coarse wire netting for your clean wash boiler or other large, deep vessel to be used for sterilizing.

Fill the vessel with clenn water so that the hoiling water will cover the tops of the jars or cans. Begin heating the wuter so that it will he boiling violently by the time the contuiners are packed.

See that all cans or jars are in good condition and absolutely clean. Scald them thoroughly. Use new rubber rings and scald them just before putting them on the jars.

Preparing Fruits and Vegetables

Start with clean hands, clean utensils, nud clean, sound, fresh products.

Throw out all vegeables and fruits which are withered or unsound. Wash out all grit and dirt. If possible, use only fruits and vegetables picked the same day and never can peas and corn picked more than five hours.

Prepare fruits and large-sized vegetables for blanching. Remove nll spots from apples.

Prepare beans and greens as for cooking. Be especially cnreful to remove nll foreign plants from the greens.

Blanch vegetables and all fruits except berries by leaving them from 3 to 5 minutes in clean boiling water.

Remove the blanched products from the boiling water and plunge them quickly into cold water, the colder the better. Take them out immediately and let them drain. Don't let them soak in the cold water.

From this point on, spaad is highly important. The blanched vegetables and fruits, which are slightly warm, must not be allowed to remain out of the jars a moment longer than is necessary.

Remove skins when required, and as each article is pared cut it up into proper size und pack directly into the clean, scalded cans or jars.

Pack as solid as possiblo, being careful not to bruise or mash soft products.

In the case of fruit, fill the containers nt once with boiling hot syrup.

In the caso of vegetables, fill the containers with boiling hot water to which a little salt has been added.

Place scalded rubber rings on the glass jars and screw down the tops.

Seal tin cans completely. Wntch them for leaks. Aa the preliminary treatment has taken care of expansion it is not necessary to exhaust the cans.

How to Sterilize or Process

Put the jars or cans as soon as possible into boiling water in a wash boiler or into your canning device. Let them process for the time specified in the table, counting from the time the water begins to boil again, or the gnuge on the canning outfit registers to proper pressure.

Time schedule given is bnsed upon the one qunrt pack and upon fresh picked products.

When processing fruits in steam pressure canners, not over 5 pounds of steam pressure should be used.

When processing vegetables and meats do not use over 15 pounds of pressure.

After processing, remove the containers.

Tighten the tops of jars immediately and stand the containers upside down in a cool place, being careful that no draft strikes the hot jars. Watch for leakage and screw covers down tighter when necessary. Store in a cool, dry place, not exposed to freezing temperuture.

Use band labels for cans, being careful not to let the glue get on the can itself as it may cause rust.

From time to time, especially in very hot weather, examine jars and cans, making certain that there are no leaks, swellings, or other signs of fermentation.

There will be no spoilage if the directions are followed implicitly and the containers are sealed up tight.

Fruits which are put up with heavy syrups can be kept under cork and parnffin seal. Save all wide-necked bottles, glasses and jars for putting up fruits.

Vegetables, meats and fish, however, can not he kept safely unless they are hermetically sealed. Reserve regular jars for products that can not be packed in other ways.

As there may be some difficulty in securing cans and jars, dry or keep in other wnys everything that need not be cunned.

Our Rad Cross Sociaty

Our local society still occupies the store room so generously donated by Cnptain Wilbur. All who desire to assist in this great work will find the room open from two o'clock each afternoon. Some one will be in charge to give out work and to receive whatever donations may be made. Last week our donors were Mrs. Bugbee, Mrs. Saunders and Mrs. Shields, Mr. Allen of the Blanchard Hardware Company contributed an electric sewing machine, which is an nttrnction nnd a much needed help. Mr. Miles deserves our earnest thanks for his weekly donations of the benefits of the Saturday matinees at his Majestic theatre, a kindness much appreeiated indeed.

We are also grateful to our friends from the Belvedere resort as many of our north side visitors who are pressing forward in our interest and are rendering assistance in lines we most need. We urgently appeal for the presence of all who feel interested in the cause of right and humanity at the red cross rooms. There can be no better way to show your colors than by giving your generous assistance. Each can do some small share, thus lightening the burden of the few.

We are undertaking the work of supplying a quarter of a hospital unit, which means work. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, we receive instructions on "Hospitnl Dressing," do not miss these.

ever receive the proper balance of food to sufficiently nourish both body and brain during the growing period when nature's demands are greater than in mature life. This is shown in so many pale faces, lean bodies, frequent colds, and lack of ambition.

For all such children we say with unmistakable earnestness: They need Scott's Emulsion, and need it now. It possesses in concentrated form the very food elements to enrich their blood. It changes weakness to strength; it makes them sturdy and strong. No alcohol.

MAKE MONDAY A WHEATLESS DAY

MOVEMENT WILL SAVE MILLIONS OF BUSHELS

Bakers, Hotels and Householders to Co-operate in Effecting Huge Conservation of Grain

Mr. Hoover, the food commissioner, of Washington, is about to launch a vigorous fight for food conservation enlisting the housewives of the nation in his service. Wheat is our chief need at present. A single pound of bread for each person SAVED will increase our wheat surplus 100,000,000 bushels—that means enough for us—for our soldiers—for our allies. Charlevoix has decided to start a campaign of its own—a Wheatless Day. One day in the week, Monday, will be set aside on which no wheat flour will be used. Already the baker has consented to bake only rye, bran and corn bread on Monday. The hotels have followed suit, and now we want every householder in Charlevoix to pledge her support, and if we can do this other communities will follow, and we may start in our town what may become a nation-wide Wheatless Day.

PETOSKEY WILL CELEBRATE 4TH OF JULY

Seven Bands and Troop Manoeuvers Feature of Day

The city of Petoskey is going to celebrate the Fourth of July this year with a big military demonstration with the Michlgan State troops taking part. Charlevoix has been asked to send any soldiers she may have in the city that day to aid in the big entertainment. Other cities are also going to send their troops and all Northern Micbigan will be represented. The idea is to make it a sort of Northern Michigan demonstration of patriotism and loyalty.

With all of these towns and cities co-operation the parade there July 4, promiscs to be a mammoth affair, and one well worth going to see. Without a doubt large numbers will go from this city for the day.

Newspapers in all Northern Michigan cities and towns are carrying advertising for this big event this week and next. It is announced seven bands will participate and there will certainly be plenty of music.

The field day sports will be for prizes valued at $200. No money prizes will be given because of high school and college objections. Young men from this city are going and will certainly bring home their share of these handsome prizes. Last year at Petoskey boys from this place made a wonderful showing and were well paid.

There will also be free horse races, auto races, etc., to entertain the people.

There will be special features of educational value. Among the pretty sights will be the Red Cross nurses in uniform marching in the parade and taking part in the day's doings. The Boy Scouts will also be there from this place and will aid the Petoskey Scouts not only in the parade but in the sports.

This will be the only big celebration in this part of the state, July 4, and will be attended hy about the largest crowd Petoskey ever witnessed.

This place has been especially invited to attend and participate in the program.

BUT FEW MEN WILL BE CHOSEN

ONLY SMALL PER CENT OF TEN MILLION WILL SERVE

Probabilities Are That Present Draft Will Not Go Overseas For Many Months

Now that we have registered for selectiva service, what next?

This question is in the minds of about 10,000,000 young men and their 30,000,000 relatives.

The answer in some of its details will be delsyed for several days. It is contained in regulations now being worked out by Provost Marshal General Crowder and it must have the final approval of the secretary of war and the president.

Some of the questions, however, can be answered. For instance, how are the men to be chosen? What are the chances of being selected by lottery and by exemption boards?

Million and a Half

In round numbers a million and a half names will be taken by lot from the ten million registered names. The chances are about one in seven and a half of being seleeted in this lottery. Then will follow exemptions on the ground of oecupation, dependent relatives or physical defects. This will cut the number down to 500,000, so that the chanee is one in three of being selected from the list chosen by lot.

Will married men be excused? At this writing this question is unanswered. It may be covered by the regulations which will before long be published. Probably it will be left largely to the judgment of the local exemption boards.

Will sons with dependent mothers be excused? Again the answer is to be found in the regulations and the judgment of the local exemption boards.

Not All to Be Excused

Broadly speaking, it may be said that those baving dependent relatives will be excused. Not all, however, will be excused. They are more likely to be excused, however, if their occupation is important to industry, as, for instanee, if they are in a mechanical trade or farming.

If it should happen that the man with a dependent relative be a lawyer or have no regular profession he might still be selected on the theory that the $30 a month to be pald him as a soldier would go farther toward supporting his dependent mother than casual earnings in industry or his profession.

It is expected that about one man in three will measure up to the physical requirements. These requirements will necessarily be relaxed from the severe tests applied to the regular army and will come nearer to those applied to the state militia.

Might Be Second Drawing

If it should happen that exemption for occupation, physical defects and dependent relatives reduced the number in any community below the number required from that community another drawing would be made from the registration list and new candidates would appear before the exemption boards.

These exemption boards will be in many cases the same officials who did the registering. It is not necessary, however, that they be the same officials. Nominations for exemption board duty are now being sent to the president and by him forwarded to the war depnrtment where they are investigated to discover their qualifications to serve on such boards.

Appeal is allowed from the decision of exemption boards and one of the big jobs now faced by the war department is the creation of these boards of nppenl, one in each federal judicial district. Judicial districts are quite large and such np-

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tabe. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

At M. E. Church Sunday

In compliance with the request of Mr. Hoover and President Wilson, the pastor will preach on "How to Win the war by Conserving the Country's Food Supply." Bread is just as important as bullets in the present crisis.

In the evening an illustrated sermon showing how the hand of God has been in the development of our country. Everybody is cordially invited to be present at these services.

BUT FEW MEN WILL BE GHOSEN

peal boards will be very busy after the exemption boards have done their work, hearing cases brought to them on appeal.

Do Not Need Lawyer

It is not necessary to have a lawyer to make this appeal. The purpose is to have everything informal. If a candidate feels that he is not being fairly dealt with by his local exemption board and that he has a proper ground to be excused he may come before the appeal board and tell his story.

The work of selecting from the registered men is expected to occupy nearly two months. By that time the government will have a roster of a half million or more able bodied and more or less foot-loose young men. These young men will not be called until the cantonment barracks are ready for them. This will not be before September 1, according to the present prospect.

It will take from 60 to 90 days to build these cantonment cities, but when they are ready the men will be ordered to assemble and will be put under command of officers now being trained in the various camps of the officers' reserve corps. These officers will teach the 500,000 rookies the first principles of soldiering.

When Pay Begins

Pay will begin for each man from the time he gets orders to report or takes the formal oath as a soldier. It will begin whether be actually is ordered to camp or begins drilling or remains at home. He will be issued his uniform and shoes and when he has put them on he will resemble in all respects a soldier in the national guard or regular army.

There is nothing distinctive about the uniform of the selective service army unless a button on the collar be used to designate as the militia and regulars are designated.

In assembling and organizing the men an effort will be made to hold localities together. The boys from Chicago, for instance will not be mixed up with those from St. Louis or New York, although they may be if the war department later decides to mix them. The law directs that so far as it may be practicable men from the same communities be kept together.

Men in the selective service army will be eligible to officers' commands and it is announced, that the third series of officers' camps will be made up of men chosen from the selected soldiers.

Camp Begins Aug. 27.

The second camp is to be August 27 and the third will probably come in October or November.

In official circles it is privately admitted that the chief purpose of this selective service army is for the defense of this country. Much has been said and written about sending men to the trenches in France.

Men are going to France now and it will not be long before Gen. Pershing has a couple of divisions there, but it probably will be a long time before the men now about to begin their training will see active service of any kind.

Will Take Full Part

This does not mean that America is not to take its full part in the war. It merely means that one of the most important tasks this country faces is the preparation of a large reserve army, mobilized, equipped and trained, to be used if necessary, to defend this country from foreign aggression.

As much as we would like to send large bodies of troops abroad, the shortage of transports makes this an almost impossible task in the near future. Feeding the people in France and England is already a tremendous burden which must be shared by the United States, and every man sent over there from the United States is another man to be fed, clothed, munitioned and transported by the workers at home.

Selective service men who will be disappointed if they do not see active service fighting at once will do well to enlist in the navy, the marine corps or even the regulars.

All May Go In End

All of these will go before the selective service army. This army may in the end all go. That is for the future to determine.

If that date is not June '17, we wish you would call or send the amount to make your title clear for the year to come. Many papers have raised their subscription price, and in view of the increased cost of everything that goes to produce a newspaper, it would seem to be necessary, but the Courier has not decided to do so yet. It takes money to run a newspaper, and we desire that all subscription shall be paid in advance as near as possible. FIST BATTLE DRAWS AN INTERESTED CROWD

Pugilistic Affair Ends in Court and Blows Prove Costly

Chief of Police Weikel picked up Archie Gravelin and Walter Vosburg late Monday afternoon and escorted them to Judge Felt's office, where each was fined $5 and coats (a matter of $8.75 apiece) just as a gentle reminder that the street corner is not the place to settle one's personal differences—especially, by hand.

The two had started an altercation in which blows rapidly followed words and quite a crowd had collected before the officer got there. Do your fighting at the front in France, boys, there's where they need it most.

HITS SIDEWALK ON HIS HEAO

JACK ROBB FALLS FROM SECOND STORY WINDOW

Saturday Night Sensation Nearly Terminates Fatally For Boyne City Man Here

Jack Robb, (or Jack Moore, as he sometimes is called) of Boyne City, had a very narrow escape from death last Saturday evening. He is a chimney sweep by trade, and makes this town every summer in the course of his journeys through Michigan and Wisconsin, on which he picks up many a dollar cleaning flues and furnaces. When in town, he stays with Pat Hoiland in the latter's rooms over Bob Mears' pool room.

He returned from Traverse City, where he had been on an auto jaunt with a party of friends, at about seven o'clock, a little the worse for wear and his friend, Holland, had prevailed on him to lie down on the bed and "sleep it off." Holland then left the room and went down on the street. About 9:30 o'clock several fellows who were standing in front of the pool room, discussing the war and the high cost of living (presumably) were slightly startled when a heavy body struck the sidewalk with a thud directly in front of them and a chair bounded on to the pavement several feet away.

It seems that Robb had left the bed and gone to the window, which has a very low sill, to get some air, placing a chair with its back to the opening. He is a big man, weighing, one would judge about 190 pounds, tall and heavily muscled, and it is thought that he dropped into the chair so carelessly as to tip it over the low window sill, snapping the back of the chair in two as he fell. His hands were still in his pockets when he was picked up and the chairback lay under him while the rest of it was quite a distance from him on the sidewalk.

He was taken at once to Dr. Wilkinson's office and there it was discovered that he had suffered a deep scalp wound, requiring five stitches to close, and a slight fracture of the outer table of the skull. No other injuries, besides a few bruises, could be discovered, and the doctor estimated that if there was no internal injury or concussion, this lucky individual might be about his business again in ten days time. His wife came over Sunday from Boyne City at four p. m., in a car and took him home from the hotel Charlevoix, where he had been carried from the doctor's office and made as comfortable as possible until her arrival.

SUB-CHASERS IN THE HARBOR

TWO NEW THORNS IN THE KAISER'S SIDE HERE

They're Small, But Able to Deliver the Goods—In Gray War Paint Look Ready For Work

Were you down at the dock Tuesday afternoon to see the submarine "chasers." Two of them, there were—business-like little vessels with no hint of their sinister purpose save the braces and stand for the murderous Colt automatic machine gun which each of them carries forward.

The S. P.—219 and the S. P.—231 as they are named (S. P. standing for "Submarine Patrol") have just fitted out at the Great Lakes naval training station at Great Lakes, Ill., and are here in port this week on their way to a destination somewhere on the broad waters. The former is the larger of the two, being 65 feet long, while the S. P.—231 is only 46 feet in length. The draft is about five feet. The engines are 4-cylinder Doman type, developing a speed of about 18 miles per hour. Each carries a single mast. They are roomy little craft for their size, having a combination officers cabin and chart-room forward, engine room, galley and toilet behind this and the quarters for the crew aft. The present complement is a crew of six men, uniformed and armed with the Springfield rifle, under command of an officer who bears the rank of captain.

The Courier representative was permitted to see the deadly Colt automatic and the wicked looking, needle-pointed steel-nosed bullets in their canvas belt. The entire outfit is kept carefully cased against the ravages of the weather when the boat is off duty. As explained by the chief warrant officer, the gun has an effective range of 500 to 1,000 yards and may be fired singly, shot by shot to get the range or the bullets may be sprayed like water from a hose at the rate of 450 per minute. It is so mounted as to secure a firing radius of 180 degrees, which is liberal enough to provide for almost any contingency. The boats have yet to receive their full recommended battery, which will add a three-pounder aft and another Colt.

We predict trouble in large chunks for any of Kaiser Bill's underaea "kultur propogators" that may be unlucky enough to stick their noses up near these little scorpions of the sea.

The Rev. L. C. Vinyard, accompanied by Mrs. F. Bearss, Miss Ethel Ingalls and James Courier, left Wednesday morning for Detroit where they will represent the local society in the International Convention of Baptist Young People's Union. The party are driving through in an Overland.

DELEGATES FROM NEIGHBORING CITIES HERE

Afternoon and Evening Sessions Greatly Enjoyed—Resolutions Passed at Meeting

The W. C. T. U. convention held in the Methodist church in this city on Thursday afternoon and evening and Friday of last week was a success in every respect. The numerous delegates from surrounding cities helped swell the crowd until the church was filled to capacity at practically every session.

Below is printed the resolutions presented and adopted at the meeting.

RESOLVED, that we deeply appreciate the courtesy shown by the citizens in sharing their homes with the delegates during their stay in the city and for the excellent management of the local committees of entertainment and music and the decorations so beautifully given in floral display and the national emblem so much in evidence; also for the use of the Methodist church which was given free of charge.

We appreciate the children who as representatives of the nation gave their "bit" to the convention in songs and patriotic exercises;

WHEREAS, all people at this time are urged to conserve the nations resources, by careful living, and economy of the household and society;

RESOLVED; That we exert all possible influence to prevent the use of grain in the manufacture of malt and distilled liquors, that we shall bring pressure to bear upon all pending legislation in endeavoring to effect national prohibition both as a war measure and a preparedness measure in the peace which is to follow;

RESOLVED, That every purity committee of every union shall actively support the work of the Y. M. C. A. in their endeavor to secure and protect the manhood of our boys both in the training camps and in the rank of file of battle, and that this support shall include all active publicity work being in its scope both moral and financial.

RESOLVED, That we co-operate with the Red Cross units in our respective towns in assisting to furnish base hospitals with the many articles needed for the sick and wounded.

RESOLVED, That we as a convention representing the W. C. T. U. of Charlevoix county urge Congress to pass laws prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor for the period of the war and urging the influence of our congressman in safeguarding the morals of our soldiers. Finally resolving that a telegram be sent to our congressman from this convention.

FARMERS CAN NOW GET HELP NEEDED

Agent George Kilborn Has Line On Several Men

George Kilborn, state farm agent for Emmet and Charlevoix counties, is now in a position to furnish some help to farmers of his territory.

He has a number of applications for places on farms from men and young men and wants to get in touch with farmers who need help for the season.

There are also a number of applications from men who wish to bring their wives with them.

Farmers should notify Mr. Kilborn at Petoskey at once as to their needs in the help line. They should either call him by phone, write him, or notify the supervisor of the township in which they live.

THETA CONVENTION IS OVER

ALL BUT SIXTY MEMBERS RETURN TO THEIR HOMES

Saturday Last Sew Close of Fraternity Sessions Where Much Has Been Accomplished

The 22nd biennial grand convention of the Kappa Alpha Theta fraternity that met at the Inn last week, closed its sessions Saturday and the members left Saturday and Sunday by train and boat for their respective homes, with the exception of some sixty odd who are prolonging their visit here.

The pass word of the 1917 convention, very appropriately at this time, was "Opportunity." A great amount of discussion was given to Red Cross work and opportunities for college women in this time of war along the lines of national service.

Much time was given to the actual work, under the direction of Mrs. C. J. O'Connor, of Washington, D. C., (who also spoke Sunday at the Congregational church.) Definite financial aid was given in a vote of the convention to furnish funds to equip the nurses of one base hospital—a sum of over $3,000 being necessary for this purpose.

The fraternity is also supporting its own scholarship fund. This past year, the fund put through college 18 of the 1200 Thetas enrolled in college and at present has $8,000 available for next year.

In the midst of business sessions and serious work, the girls found time to enjoy the beauties of Charlevoix and have athletic tournaments, boat-rides, horseback trips, play golf and tennis and bathe in the big Inn pool.

The auto trip around Pine lake was one of the most enjoyable entertainment features of the week; 49 cars donated and driven by Charlevoix residents taking some 200 of the members to East Jordan and from there to Boyne City, where they were entertained with refreshments at the Wolverine hotel. The procession left Charlevoix a little after 2:00 P. M. Friday and got back here at 8:00 P. M. Those who contributed cars and their own personal services or those of some member of their family as chauffers, are as follows: Robert Bridge, George H. Van Pelt, Lisle Shannhan, R. C. Hammett, Dr. Frank Wilkinson, Harry Nicholls, Dr. A. M. Wilkinson (2 cars,) Henry Partridge, A. E. Mason, Will Withers, James Cook, W. H. Cook, A. D. Crimmins, G. F. Kimball, D. F. Meech, Ed. Shapton, Joseph Hallett, Dr. Greensfelder, F. A. Butler, Erickson & Fowler, Dr. George King, Mrs. Emma Kellner, L. E. Crandell, M. B. Hooker & Son, F. E. Cartier, Babcock & Son, George Weaver, C. H. Miller, Mason Rose, Meyer Levinson, Engle VanAlsburg, F. M. Glassford, Alonzo Powers, Charles E. See, F. E. Frazier, Rev. Quinton Walker, J. M. Harris, A. L. Fitch, Don Campbell, H. A. Wood, Judge F. W. Mayne M. M. McDonald, Walter Taylor, D. J. Eckinger, Rev. Lloyd C. Vinyard, George A. Crouter, C. L. Thomas and A. L. Hart.

NEW BRICK BLOCK

B. A. Herman Will Build On Site Of Present Store

B. A. Herman is contemplating the erection of a new two story brick store and office building on the property he recently purchased from F. N. Chapel, of Portland, Ore., at the corner of Bridge and Clinton streets and on which his present place of business stands. In order not to interrupt his summer trade and due to the high prices of building material, Mr. Herman will probably not commence operations on the new building before fall, but by next summer we may hope to see a handsome addition to Charlevoix's rapidly improving business district.

The plot is 30 x 66. The lower floor will be exclusively devoted to the drug business and on the second floor there will be a number of spacious rooms for office purposes. One of the three stairways in the present building will be eliminated, and this will give considerably greater space on the ground floor.

CITY FATHERS WOULD MUZZLE ALL CUT-OUTS

Nervous Energy of the Public Must Also Be Conserved

The city council, we understand, his instructed the chief of police to see that the open cut-out nuisance in Charlevoix is stopped. This is very commendatory action on the part of the council.

The only reasons for the existence of a cut-out on an automobile are its uses in testing the engine, securing a little extra power in an emergency, or driving out some slight accumulation of carbon. These occasions for its use arise but seldom. Against the cut-out may be brought the very serious charges of retarding the recovery of the sick and increasing the already too-high nerve tension of the public. It should be suppressed.

We can think of cases, however, where some form of cut-out would be useful; notably in out city electric light plant. Some of the antiquated junk housed therein and rule-of-thumb methods employed in its operation might be cut out without serious protest from any of us. On the other hand, it might be well to put a muffler on the city's fuel expenses. Muzzles for the "cur dogs" have already been tried but have proven ineffective. Perhaps a muffler would do the trick.

SLOAN RESIGNS ENGINEERSHIP

ABLE CITY OFFICIAL WILL TACKLE BIG JOB

Step Made Necessary By Pressure of New Duties—Will City Revert to Old Order?

Following on the announcement of the immediate commencement of operations on the new 800 acre estate recently purchased by Albert H. Loeb of Chicago, comes the news that R. F. Sloan, who is to have charge of the construction work, has severed his connection with municipal affairs and has tendered his resignation to Mayor Rose in a letter of recent date, which we reproduce below with his permission:

July 2, 1917

"Hon. S. M. Rose, Mayor,
City of Charlevoix,
Dear Sir:

"I regret to advise you that my engagement in another matter from this date makes it necessary for me to transmit to you herewith my resignation as city engineer, with the expressed hope that you will favor me with its immediate acceptance.

"It is with some regret that I, at this time, must sever my relations with you, as I want to be understood to always be in sympathy with the very best interests of our beautiful city and I take this occasion to assure you of my full co-operation in any matters in which I may be of assistance to you which will not in any way interfere with the other duties now assumed by me.

With this, I extend to you my most sincere hope and confidence in your ability to handle to a successful conclusion the many important matters now before the city.

"With the very kindest personal regards, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly,
(Signed) R. F. SLOAN.

Mr. Sloan is not alone in his regret at the step it has become necessary for him to take. During the several years of his incumbency as city engineer, public construction work has been dignified by elevation to the higher levels which it sometime attains in cities of greater magnitude than Charlevoix. Instead of the confusion generated by the efforts of numerous petty officials to get their paws into the public pie and "get mine out of it," we have seen various operations proceed with a smoothness and dispatch and the results obtained display that satisfying permanence and shipshape appearance that speaks of the master hand behind them.

Our regret at losing Mr. Sloan's public services only allayed by the pride we feel that a fellow townsman should have been selected for a task, the importance and difficulty of which will be more fully realized when it has been completed.

HOUSEWIVES ARE DANDIES

LITTLE KITS CONTAIN EVERYTHING NEEDFUL

Each New Recruit May Secure One Before Leaving For the Front At C. R. Bellingar's

Have you seen the new housewives the W. R. C. members are furnishing to the boys who enlist for service with Uncle Sam? First aid kits, you might call them, although one can finish the job with them and send the wounded coat or battle-scarred shirt back to the firing line in prima condition to "do another bit."

Handy little rolls, they are, bound in black oilcloth with strings to tie them up like a wallet. Each has three compartments, one containing two rolls of black thread and one of white, suitable for darning or sewing on buttons. In the next section the amateur tailor finds a package of common pins and a card of black, rustproof safety pins. Then comes a card of bone and metal trouser buttons and two cards of white pearl buttons and last, but not least, on the flap is fastened a little cloth case carrying many sizes of needles.

Every man who enlists from Charlevoix is requested to call at C. R. Bellinger's jewelry shop and get one of these useful little kits. Besides its practical value it will remind him in his moments of lonliness at the front—in the trenches or in his more or less comfortable quarters behind the lines of the sympathy, love and confidence of those who wait for him at home.

TUESDAY'S FIRES

Glassford and Nicholls' Cottages Suffer Slight Damage

At 2:00 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the Glassford cottage, at 203 Dixon Avenue, occupied by Walter Friedlander, commissioner of Public Safety for the city of Cincinnati, and family, who had just arrived in Charlevoix that morning, caught fire in the shingles of the roof from a chimney spark and drew an excited crowd from all parts of the town. It was soon out, leaving damages to the extent of perhaps $25.00.

Tuesday night at 7:00 o'clock, the department was again called out—this time to the home of Harry Nicholls on Dixon Avenue, but the fire was out before the fire boys arrived.

SURGICAL DRESSING TAUGHT

MONDAYS, THURSDAYS AND SATURDAYS AT RED CROSS

Mrs. Henry Strauss of Chicago Will Give Expert Instruction In This Important Work

The Red Cross society is in receipt of donations of money from Miss Bridgett Gallagher, Stewart Stevenson and F. J. Meech. Other donors for the week were: Ivy Drug Store, Blanchard Hardware Co., Charlevoix Hardware Co., Fred Myers and the Congregational ladies aid society.

The class in surgical dressing began on Monday afternoon, every table was full and all available chairs were occupied by willing helpers. Mrs. Henry X. Strauss, of Chicago, is giving three afternoons of instruction each week—Monday, Thursday and Saturday to any who desire to become proficient in the art of surgical dressing. The opportunity is one to be appreciated, because Mrs. Strauss is a Red Cross teacher of unusual qualifications, holding graduate certificates. She is giving her time freely and willingly to the work.

Red Cross buttons can be procured by members of the society at the rooms in the Wilbur block. Remember the Saturday matinees, the benefits of which Mr. Miles gives to the Red Cross society.

There will be a general supper and program Friday evening, July 13, given by the young people of the Epworth church. Everybody welcome.

THEATRICAL

NORTH NORWOOD

Still it rains.

The farmers have just got their beans in.

Quite a number attended church at Norwood Sunday night.

Mr. Jones is now living on his farm which he just purchased from F. Seymour.

Mrs. Wm. Supernaw and children and Mrs. Arnold West spent Saturday in Charlevoix.

Mrs. William Supernaw and children visited at the home of her mother, Mrs. P. Block.

Miss Lela Lohr, of Charlevoix, and Glenn Smith of East Jordan, spent Sunday at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Lohr.

EVELINE

Wallace Kemp, of Detroit, is home for the summer.

Walter Peterson was in Petoskey on business last Monday.

There will be a grange dance in Ironton on July 6. This will be on Friday evening.

Mrs. Hunter, Mrs. and Miss Bixby of Northport are visiting at John Knudsen's home.

Will and Clarence Murphy, of South Arm visited with relation and friends last Sunday.

Mrs. Curtiss and children of Detroit are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kemp.

Ed. Hetrick of Boyne Falls visited at the Courier home last week. He was serving as juryman in Charlevoix.

Swain Smith has commenced building a wall for Alfred Williams. A barn will be built 40 x 50 to be used by fall.

Max Hainden was taken to Petoskey last Sunday where an operation was performed for appendicitis. Doing well the last report.

The Hartwells have completed a well near the stone pile to be used by the county road construction crew by next week or sooner.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Walker, Mr. and Mrs. John Knudsen and children motored to Traverse City last Sunday in the former's new Overland.

Mrs. Wilbur Spicdel underwent an operation in Petoskey and is expected home this week. Health has improved rapidly since operation was performed.

The bean crop is badly damaged by the bean maggot. Hundreds of acres in this county alone will be ruined and sowed to some other crop. Buckwheat will be the main grain sown where the maggots have wrought destruction to the bean.

The most severe rain storm for a long time visited us Sunday morning. Fields looks pretty bad where the water has washed away a great deal of top soil.

The mass meeting held at the Grange hall was an entire success. Over thirty dollars was subscribed for the Red Cross movement, besides the proceeds from the refreshments amounting to over $7, which will be used for purchasing supplies to be made into hospital garments and bandages.

"Ynu don't really helleve in such things?"

Blaze dusted off a sent for his visitor, saying: "I never did till lately, but now I'm worse than n plantation nigger. I tell you there's things in this world we don't sabe. I wish you'd get Paloma to fire her. I've tried and failed. I wish you'd tell her those dresses are rotten."

"But they're very nice; they're lovely; and I've just been complimenting her. Now what has this woman done to you?"

It seemed impossible that a man of Blaze Jones' character could actually harbor crude superstitions, and yet there was no mistaking his earnestness when he said:

"I ain't sure whether she's to blame, or her husband, but misfortune has folded me to herself."

"How?"

"Well, I'm sick."

"You don't look it."

"I don't exactly feel it, either, but I am. I don't sleep good, my heart's actin' up, I've got rheumatism, my stomach feels like I'd swallowed something alive—"

"You're smoking too much," Alnire affirmed, with conviction.

But skepticism aroused Blaze's indignation. With elaborate sarcasm, he retorted: "I reckon that's why my best team of mules ran away and dragged me through a ten-acre patch of grass burrs, eh? It's a wonder I wasn't killed. I reckon I smoked so much that I give a tobacco heart to the best three-year-old bull in my pasture! Well, I smoked him to death, all right. Probably it was nicotine poisonin' that killed twenty acres of my cotton, too; and maybe if I'd cut out tobacco I'd have floated that bond issue on the irrigation ditch. But I was wedded to cigarettes, so my banks are closin' down on me. Sure! That's what a man gets for smokin'."

"And do you attribute all these misfortunes to Paloma's dressmaker?"

The man nodded gloomily. "That ain't half! Everything goes wrong. I'm scared to pack a weapon for fear I'll injure myself. Why, I've carried a bowie knife in my bootleg ever since I was a babe in arms, you might say; but the other day I jabbed myself with it and nearly got blood-poisonin'. This fellow, Strange, with his fortune-tellin' and his charms and his conjures, has hocus-pocused the whole neighborhood. He's gettin' rich off of the Mexicans. He knows more secrets than a parrot."

"He is nothing more than a circus fakir, Mr. Jones."

"Yes'm! Just the same, these greasers 'd vote him into the legislature if he asked them. Why, he knows who fetched back Ricardo Guzman's body! He told me so."

"Really?" Alnire looked up quickly, then the smile left her face. After a moment she said, "Perhaps he could tell me something I want to know?"

"No, don't you get him started," Blaze cautioned, inanely, "or he'll put a spell on you like he did on me."

"I want to know what Ed had to do with the Guzman affair."

Blaze shook his head slowly. "Well, he's mixed up somehow with Lewis. Dave thinks Ted was at the bottom of the killin', and he hoped to prove it on him; but our government won't do anything, and he's stumped for the time bein'. I don't know any more about Ed's dealin's than you do, Miz Austin; all I know is that I got a serpent in my household and I can't get shed of her. I've got a lapful of troubles of my own."

"This is too occult for me," she declared, rising. "But—I'm interested in what you say about Mr. Strange. If the Mexicans tell him so much, perhaps he can tell me something. I do hope you have no more misfortunes."

"You stay to supper," Blaze urged hospitably. "I'll be in as soon as that tarantula's gone."

But Alnire declined. After a brief chat with Paloma, she remounted Montrose and prepared for the homeward ride. At the gate, however, she met Dave Law on his new mare, and when Dave had learned the object of her visit to Jonesville he insisted upon accompanying her.

It was early dusk when they reached Las Palmas; it was nearly midnight when Dave threw his leg across his saddle and started home.

Alnire's parting words rang sweetly in his ears: "This has been the pleasantest day I can remember."

The words themselves meant little, but Dave had caught a wistful undertone in the speaker's voice, and fancied he had seen in her eyes a queer, half-frightened expression, as of one just awakened.

* * * * * * * *

Jose Sanchez had beheld Dave Law at the Las Palmas table twice within a few days. He spent this evening laboriously composing a letter to his friend and patron, Gen. Luis Longoria.

CHAPTER XV.

An Awakening.

Time was when Phil Strange boasted that he and his wife had played every fairground and seaside amusement park from Coney Island to Galveston. In his battered wardrobe trunks were parts of old costumes, scrapbooks of clippings, and a goodly collection of lithographs, some advertising the supernatural powers of "Professor Magi, Sovereign of the Unseen World," and others the accomplishments of "Mlle. Le Garde, Renowned Serpent Enchantress." In these gaudy portraits of "Magi the Mystic" no one would have recognized Phil Strange. And even more difficult would it have been to trace a resemblance between Mrs. Strange and the blond, bushy-headed "Mlle. Le Garde" of the posters. Nevertheless, the likenesses at one time had been considered not too flattering, and Phil treasured them as evidences of imperishable distinction.

But the Stranges had tired of public life. For a long time the wife had confessed to a lack of interest in her vocation which amounted almost to a repugnance. Snake-charming, she had discovered, was far from an ideal profession for a woman of refinement. It possessed unpleasant features, and even such euphemistic titles as "Serpent Enchantress" and "Reptilian Mesmerist" failed to rob the calling of a certain odium, a suggestion of vulgarity in the minds of the more discriminating. This had become so distressing to Mrs. Strange's finer sensibilities that she had voiced a yearning to forsake the platform and plt for something more congenial, and finally she had prevailed upon Phil to make a change.

"Over Her Head Floats a Skeleton—"

The step had not been taken without misgivings, but a benign Providence had watched over the pair. Mrs. Strange was a natural seamstress, and luck had directed her and Phil to a community which was not only in need of a good dressmaker but peculiarly ripe for the talents of a soothsayer. Phil, too, had intended to embrace a new profession; but he had soon discovered that Jonesville offered better financial returns to a man of his accepted gifts than did the choicest of seaside concessions, and therefore he had resumed his old calling under a slightly different guise. Before long he acknowledged himself well pleased with the new environment, for his wife was far happier in draping dress goods upon the figures of her customers than hanging python folds about her own, and he found his own fame growing with every day. His mediumistic gifts came into general demand. The country-people journeyed miles to consult him, and Blaze Jones' statement that they confided in the fortune-teller as they would have confided in a priest was scarcely an exaggeration. Phil did indeed become the repository for confessions of many sorts.

Contrary to Blaze's belief, however, Strange was no Prince of Darkness, and took little joy in some of the secrets forced upon him. Phil was a good man in his way—so conscientious that certain information he acquired weighed him down with a sense of unpleasant responsibility. Chancing to meet Dave Law one day, he determined to relieve himself of at least one troublesome burden.

But Dave was not easily approachable. He met the medium's allusions to the occult with contemptuous amusement, nor would he consent to a private "reading." Strange grew almost desperate enough to speak the ungarnished truth.

"You'd better pay a little attention to me," he grieved; "I've got a message to you from the 'Unseen World.'"

"Charges 'collect,' I reckon," the Ranger grinned.

Strange waved aside the suggestion. "It came unbidden, and I pass it on for what it's worth." As Dave turned away, he added, hastily, "It's about a skeleton in the chaparral, and a red-haired woman."

Dave stopped; he eyed the speaker curiously. "Go on," said he.

But a public street, Strange explained, was no place for psychic discussions. Dave agreed. When they were alone in the fortune-telling "parlor," he sat back while the medium closed his eyes and prepared to explore the Invisible. After a brief delay Phil began:

"I see a great many things—that woman I told you about, and three men. One of 'em is you, the other two is Mexicans. You're at a water hole in the mesquite. Now there's a shooting scrape; I see the body of a dead man. And now the scene changes. Everything dissolves. I'm in a mansion; and the red-haired woman comes toward me. Over her head floats a skeleton—"

Dave broke in crisply. "All right! Let's get down to cases. What's on your mind, Strange?"

The psychic simulated a shudder—a painful contortion, such as anyone might suffer if rudely jerked out of the spirit world.

"Eh? What was I—? There! You've broke the connection," he declared. "Did I tell you anything?"

"Nn. But evidently you can."

"I'm sorry. They never come back."

"Rot!"

Phil was hurt, indignant. With some stiffness he explained the danger of interrupting a seance of this sort, but Law remained obdurate.

"You can put over that second-sight stuff with the greasers," he declared, sharply, "but not with me. So, Jose Sanchez has been to see you and you want to warn me. Is that it?"

"I don't know any such party," Strange protested. He eyed his caller for a moment; then with an abrupt change of manner he complained: "Say, Bo! What's the matter with you? I've got a reputation to protect, and I do things my own way. I'm getting set to slip you something, and you try to make me look like a sucker. Is that any way to act?"

"I prefer to talk to you when your eyes are open. I know all about—"

"You don't know nothing about anything," snapped the other. "Jose's got it in for Mrs. Austin."

"You said you didn't know him."

"Well, I don't. He's never been to see me in his life, but—his sweetheart has. Rosa Morales comes regular."

"Rosa! Jose's sweetheart!"

"Yes. Her and Jose have joined out together since you shot Panfilo, and they're framing something."

"What, for instance?"

The fortune-teller hesitated. "I only wish I knew," he said slowly. "It looks to be like a killing."

Dave nodded. "Probably is. Jose would like to get me, and of course the girl—"

"Oh, they don't aim to get you. You ain't the one they're after."

"No? Who, then?"

"I don't know nothing definite. In this business, you understand, a fellow has to put two and two together. All the same, I'm sure Jose ain't carrying no epitaph for you. From what I've dug out of Rosa, he's acting for a third party—somebody with pull and a lot of coin—but who it is I don't know. Anyhow, he's cooking trouble for the Austins, and I want to stand from under."

Now that the speaker had dropped all pretense, he answered Dave's questions without evasion and told what he knew. It was not much, to Dave's way of thinking, but it was enough to give cause for thought, and when the men finally parted it was with the understanding that Strange would promptly communicate any further intelligence on this subject that came his way.

On the following day Dave's duties called him to Brownsville, where court was in session. He had planned to leave by the morning train; but as he continued to meditate over Strange's words, he decided that, before going, he ought to advise Alnire of the fellow's suspicions in order that she might discharge Jose Sanchez and in other ways protect herself against his possible spite. Since the matter was one that could not well be talked over by telephone, Dave determined to go in person to Las Palmas that evening. Truth to say, he was hungry to see Alnire. By this time he had almost ceased to combat the feeling she aroused in him, and it was in obedience to an impulse far stronger than friendly anxiety that he hired a machine and, shortly after dark, took the river road.

The Fates are malicious jades. They delight in playing ill-natured pranks upon us. Not content with spinning and measuring and cutting the threads of our lives to suit themselves, they must also tangle the skein, causing us to cut capers to satisfy their whims.

At no time since meeting Alnire had Dave Law been more certain of his moral strength than on this evening; at no time had his grip upon himself seemed firmer. Nor had Alnire the least reason to doubt her self-control. Dave, to be sure, had appealed to her fancy and her interest; in fact, he so dominated her thoughts that the imaginary creature whom she called her dream-husband had gradually taken on his physical likeness. But the idea that she was in any way enamored of him had never entered his mind. In such wise do the Fates amuse themselves.

Alnire had gone to her favorite after-dinner refuge, a nook on one of the side galleries, where there was a wide, swinging wicker couch; and there, in a restful obscurity fragrant with flowers, she had prepared to spend the evening with her dreams.

She did not hear Dave's automobile arrive. Her first intimation of his presence came with the sound of his feet upon the porch. When he appeared, it was almost like the materialization of her uppermost thought—quite as if a figure from her fancy had stepped forth full-clad.

"NORTHERN BREEZES"

John C. Wright of Harbor Springs Issues New Book

The Courier is in receipt of a new book entitled "Northern Breezes" just issued by John C. Wright of Harbor Springs. The book contains a very choice collection of poems of his own production, which are filled with the freshness of the woods, the songs of birds, and the wholesome, healthgiving call of the North. The poems deal with the common things of this Northland and are delightfully written, setting forth in pleasing verse all the beauties with which we are surrounded.

In addition to the numerous well written poems, the book contains a three act drama, entitled, King Strang, and deals with the Morman Colony, which formerly lived at Beaver Island.

Mr. Wright is himself a product of this northern country, and knows and loves all of its matchless beauty in such an intimate way that he is able to express it in a style that is distinctly pleasing and all his own.

SIXTEEN CHILDREN MADE FATHERLESS

Double Drowning Near Elk Rapids—Boat Overturns

Sixteen children were made fatherless when Nels Anderson, seventy and John Pink, thirty-five, drowned in Birch lake, north of Elk Rapids, late Friday afternoon when a boat from which they were fishing overturned.

Everett Darocher, the third member of the party, was saved. Anderson, who is a small fruit rancher on the shore of the lake, leaves a wife and twelve children, and Pink, who recently arrived from Grand Haven had a wife and four children.

The accident happened when Pink who was fishing from the boat, lost his balance and fell into the lake, overturning the craft. Pink and Anderson sank immediately. Darocher started to swim ashore but saw the task was too great and swam back to the boat where he was rescued in an exhausted condition.

Anderson acted as a guide all his life and had taken thousands of fishing parties about the lake.

NEWSPAPER ANNOYANCES.

Here is something you might stick in your hatband: "If I owned a newspaper, what I would say in it just now would be aplenty," remarked a man the other day.

He was invited to write what he wanted to say, with assurance that it would be printed if his signature accompanied it.

He very promptly declined the tender, remarking that it would "hurt bis business." There are a lot of people willing, anxious in fact for things to be said in the newspaper, providing they hurt the business of somebody else and not their own.

What newspaper has not had this same experience with this very same yellow tadpole of a citizen who splutters and splutters about what ought to be printed in a newspaper and what ought to be omitted.

Time is the test of truth. And Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test in Charlevoix. No Charlevoix resident who suffers backache or annoying urinary ills can remain unconvinced by this twice-told testimony.

Mrs. John Hull, 102 W. Lincoln Ave., Charlevoix, says: "I gladly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills for they have done me worlds of good. I suffered from an atteck of lumbago. I tried various remedies but got no delief until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. In a short time they entirely removed the troubie. A short time ago my back and kidneys troubled me again but Doan's Kidney Pills brought me relief promptly." (Statement given October 26, 1911)

On October 5, 1916, Mrs. Hull said: "I can speak just as highly of Doan's Kidney Pills as I did when I recommended them before. I use this medicine occasionally as a tonic and it keeps my back and kidneys in good condition."

And yet when you invite the coward to be responsible for the manuscript he wants you to publish, he whines like a sick dog, skulks behind this pretext and that and wobbles out of the office with a grouch.

That is not all. He writes in that he will stop his paper if you don't print what he himself won't sign. Yet if you were to suggest to him that his threat to stop his paper is pure and simple coercion through a threat of blackmail he would yowl like a tomcat with its tail stepped on.

The fellow who stops his paper is trying to do the newspaper in a small way the very thing that he would condemn as criminal in a corporation that tried in any way to throttle the freedom of the prese. Threatening to stop the paper is an attempt at intimidation.

But it is worse than that. Threatening to stop the paper is a confession of bigoted intolerance on the part of the delinquent subscriber that pulls such a bone, for it means that he does not want the paper to have the courage of its own convictions after all, but insists that it shell have only the courage of the convictions of the stop-my-paper threatener.

Big magazines with circulation piling toward the million and great metropolitan newspapers are pestered with this pest who wants them to publish something and assume a responsibility for authorship which the pest is too big a coward to assume, and who threatens to etop his subscription if they do not do his bidding.

Why do newspapers have these annoyances? Well, why do hotels sometimes have bedbugs, and henhouses have lice?

WE MUST SAVE FOOD

It is impossible to put too much emphasis upon the necessity for food saving by everyone during the war.

Food is going to play as important a part, if not a more important part in the war than guns and ammunition.

The saving of food is very largely an individual problem.

In the final analysis it is up to the women of the nation.

Every woman should do her part in the government's compaign to increase and conserve the nation's food supplies.

The food necessities of all of the nations with which we are allied in the war against Germany are very great.

The people of America must save every pound of food that self-imposed rigid economy makes possible to the end that there be the greatest possible surplus for shipment to our hard pressed allies.

Do not make the mistake of confusing the food problem with the financial problem.

You have no more right to waste food simply because you can afford to do so than has your small income neighbor.

It is not a question of saving food for the money's sake. It must be saved so that there will be enough to go around.

Every pound of food that finds its way to the garbage can means that much loss of fighting strength.

Volunteer today for the duration of the war in the great American army of food savers.

Begin now, today, to demonstrate thrift in YOUR home.

Make saving, rather than wasting YOUR social standard.

You can fight for your country in your kitchen just as effectively as your husbands, brothers, sons and sweethearts are fighting for it on the field of battle.

SURPRISING STUPIDITY

It is surprising to learn that munition making firms have falsified their returns to the government in an effort to escape their shares of the taxes levied by congress. It would not be believed except as an authorative statement by government officials. One firm, it is reported, which originally made a return showing no profit, was in haste to remit a check for $150,000, while federal inveetigators were still at work on its books.

The stupidity of such behavior is even more surprising than its flagrant illegality. Lack of patriotism can be charged, also, in a broad way, for it is always unpatriotic to evade the government's laws, though in this particular case there is not the aggravated lack of patriotism that similar dereliction would now involve, for at that time of the commission of these offenses the country was not at war.

But it is the stupidity of the offending conduct that is its most salient characteristic. How could the tax dodgers heve expected that they were going to get away with it? How could they possibly have expected that their bookkeeping, involving preposterous cherges against production and other preposterous expedients to cover up their earnings, would pass government scrutiny? And is it possible that they believed the great discrepancy between their volume of business and the reported "no earnings," or very small earnings, would not make certain that their operations would be scrutinized?

Such stupidity is not a characteristic of American businese. Usually, whether it is behaving well or badly, it displays intelligence. When it has been behaving badly it usually has displayed so much intelligence that the task of checking its abuses has been a very serious one, indeed. It is a new thing for it to be caught so openly with the goods. The present crop of offenders, from whatever light they are viewed, offer a sorry picture.

BURDENING THE NEWSPAPERS

Various propositions have been before Congress for war taxes on newspapers and magazines. Taxes on advertising, on gross profits, and increased newspaper postage rates have been suggested.

The feeling of Congress may be expressed by the reported mark of one member, to the effect that "The newspapers made this war, now let them pay for it." Probably the people who say that they are the same ones who at other times claims the newspapers do not exert influence.

The newspapers do not ask to dodge any taxes that fairly belong to them. But they do object to being singled out specially for taxation on a basis not imposed on any other industry. Advertising is the principal source of revenue for most newspapers. It is about as fair to place a tax on gross advertising revenue, as to tax a merchant on two thirds of his gross sales, or to tax a manufacturer on two thirds of his gross product. If anyone advanced such a proposition as that, the entire business community would be on his neck.

While most people expect the service rendered the government will be paid for, even in the present exigency, the newspapers donated many columns of their space to the government for booming the Liberty bond sale. Few of them asked any pay for it. If it had not been for this free publicity the loan could not have been put over.

In return for this it is proposed to place on them a burden unlike what any other industry is asked to bear. The newspaper press is hard put to it by the high price of paper stock. It is certainly inopportune to load another burden on them now, over and above what other industries are paying. The government depends on the press to arouse patriotic sentiment and secure co-operation in the war. Don't burden too heavily the agency on which so much depends.

"War is a great stimulus to the imagination," says a leading physchologist. That's true; it keeps the imagination busy trying to keep pace with the real horrors of it.

It was better to lend a little of your money to Uncle Sam than to have Germany later take every nickel you have from you in the form of an indemnity.

The German rulers continue to cry that Germany did not want the war. Apparently they have just begun to realize it.

An American admiral commanding a British fleet operating in Irish waters. This is the melting-pot of war.

Can all you can and dry all you can.

Discord.

"What are those two men on the stage singing?" asked the wife.

"A duet," replied the husband.

"I know. But what piece are they singing?"

"The one on the right is singing 'Home, Sweet Home,' but I never heard that thing the other one's singing."—Youker's Statesman.

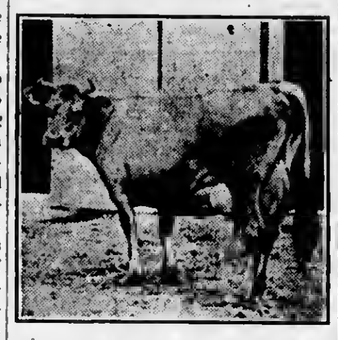
GREAT BUTTER PRODUCER.

Oregon Jersey Establishes Record For Breed West of the Mississippi.

Dairy cows, and particularly Jerseys, have taken their place beside Oregon apples in the race for supremacy in that state. Goldie's Nehalem Beauty had just become champion three-year-old of the Jersey breed when St. Mawes Poppy, owned by Ed Cary of Carlton, Ore., finished a year's authenticated test, in which she made 15,782.4 pounds milk and 952 pounds butter fat, which would make 1,120.32 pounds of 85 per cent butter. This record is the sixth best record ever made by a Jersey and establishes the best record of the breed ever made west of the Mississippi river. St. Mawes Poppy was going so strong through the first seven months of her test that it began to look as though she would exceed the record made by



ST. MAWES POPPY.

Sophie XIX, of Hood Farm. In the eighth and tenth month she fell off in milk flow, however, the first time from an attack of milk fever and on the other occasion from a severe bloat caused by a heavy feed of green corn. At the time she met her first misfortuna she was milking well over forty pounds a day, and in spite of the second trouble she finished her test by milking twenty-seven pounds.

St. Mawes Poppy has made three yearly records of over 900 pounds of butter, including one of over 1,100 pounds, as shown by the following table:

Age. Yrs.	Mos.	Milk. Pounds	Fat. Pounds	Butter 85p.c. Pounds
5	3	12,934.3	800.8	942.1
6	9	12,651.4	797.7	938.6
9	2	15,782.4	952.3	1,120.3

St. Mawes Poppy started this latest test, with her seventh calf, at nine years two months of age. She is a daughter of the great St. Mawes, sire of eighteen other register of merit cows. St. Mawes is now famous as a sire of heavy producers, but his great value was not ascertained until after his death at the hands of the butcher.

"There was a terrible accident at our house last night," said a weg. "As I was sitting in the dining room I happened to look out, and I saw the kitchen sink."

How to Carry Watar.

If you want to carry a full pail of water any distance without spilling or to carry water from one room to another in a flat dish or tray you should always hava something floating on it. If it is drinking water a clean saucer will do, and a flat piece of wood is tha best thing for a pail. It is the little waves that arise from tha water's lapping against the sides and then rushing to the other side that makes the water spill over. The floater stops this.—New York Sun.

EXPLAIN DUTY OF RED CROSS

MEETING FRIDAY EVENING WAS WELL ATTENDED

Local and Outside Speakers Deliver Able Addresses—160 People Present

In answer to the invitation sent out by the newly organized Red Cross auxillary of Ellsworth, about one hundred and sixty people gathered at Harris Hall last Friday evening to partake of the pot luck supper and to listen to the fine program arranged by the officers of the organization and the committee in charge of the supper.

The band was on hand with a short open air concert at 7:30, and following this the crowd were invited to seat themselves at the heavily laden tables and partake of the good things provided.

E. R. Harris acted as master of ceremonics, and handled his job in his usual versatile manner. The hall showed by the decorations of flags bunting and emblems of the. Red Cross, that the ladies had not been idle during the week preceeding the rally, and it was conceded by all to present the prettiest appearance in the history of the building. Following the supper, Mr. Harris took charge of the program. The first number was a duet by Miss Thelma Frick and Mr. Maltby of Bellaire. They sang, "Somewhere a Voice is Calling," and so pleased their audience that they were obliged to respond to an encore, "A Perfect Day" being the second number. The second number of the evening was a talk by C. L. Bailey of Bellaire. Mr. Bailey was the principal spenker of the evening's entertainment, nnd in his address he enlightened the assembly as to the work of the Red Cross. Mr. Bailey is one of the most nble speakers of this or adjoining counties, and those present last Fridny night look forward eagerly to his next appearance before an Ellsworth audience.

Following Mr. Bailey's tnlk, the chairman introduced the Hon. G. W. Nicholls, of Ionia, who gave a short but very much-to-the-point talk pleasing to nll. Miss Marie Weffenbach was next called on and she explained to the ladies the splendid work done by the Antrim county chapter in regard to sewing, and gave some insight as to what steps to take in order to get supplies.

Those present were called to become members and sixty-one signed up for membership, subscribing from one dollar upwards.

As there were nhout twenty present from the county seat, the rest of the evening was spent in visiting and a thoroughly enjoyable time was had.

Too much cannot be said or done for the Red Cross and the following poem written by John H. Finley, entitled: "the Red Cross Spirit Speaks" almost fully explains their good work.

I knelt behind the soldier's trench
I walk 'mid shamble's smear and stench,
The dead I mourn.
I bear the stretchers and I bend,
O'er Fritz and Pierre and Jack to mend
What shells have torn.

I go where ever men may dare,
I go wherever woman's care
And love can live.
Wherever strength and skill can bring
Surcease to human suffering
Or solace give.

I am your penny's and your pound
I nm your bodies on their rounds
Of pain afar.
I am you, doing what you would
If you were only where you could
Your avntar.

The cross which on my arm I wear
The flag which on my breast I bear
Is but the sign,
Of what you'd sacrifice for him
Who suffers on the hellish rim
Of war's red line.

FARM HOME STRUCK BY ELECTRIC BOLT

Ralph Sitsma and Family Have Narrow Escape From Death

That a lucky star was hovering over the home of Ralph Sitsma, two miles north and one mile west of Ellsworth, when the house was struck by lightning during the electrical storm early last Sunday morning, is evident to any one who inspects the building today.

How the family escaped with only minor injuries is hard to explain as every room in the house is more or less damaged and the bed room, occupied by Mrs. Sitsma and two small children, received more attention than any other. In this room the bed in which the three were sleeping was struck and literally torn to pieces. The children each received slight burns about the face but Mrs. Sitsma escaped uninjured.

One chimney was completely destroyed and nearly every window in the house was shattered, but no fira started so the damage while it will cause the house to be completely repaired, is not so bad as it might hava been.

Taking it all in all it was a lucky escape and was an ordeal which the family will not care to experience again in the near future.

BOYNE CITY PHYSICIAN TELLS EXPERIENCES

Thinks United States Has Herculean Task on Hands

A letter from Dr. W. W. Marshall, of Boyne City, to Dr. John Reycraft, of Petoskey, gives interesting sidelights on the war situation in Europe. Dr. Marshall has for several months been in service in France, and the letter was written on the Atlantic while he was enroute to Chicago, where he will remsin for the present.

"I crowded more experience into the last few months than one usually does in many years," writes Dr. Marshall. "The British 'Tommy' from all parts of the empire is a great subject for study, and I really have a great admiration for him. Generally the British surgeon's technique is inferior to that of the American, but, after all, there is little place for fine technique in war surgery. For example, amputstions are always circulsr, with no attempt to sew up. If you do, 'gas' infection kills your patient. All the wounds are infected, and so far, no plan of treatment has been completely successful.

"The Germans are not yet beaten and it would seem that the U. S. A. has a herculean task on her hands. I don't think we yet realize what a formidable enemy we have to contend with.

"I saw the recent disasterous air raid from too close a point of view to feel comfortable. After this raid I am convinced that the United States cannot send too many good air men. Besides we must send much better machines than the ones we have been in the habit of using."

YOUNGER MEN ALSO WANTED

THOSE BETWEEN 25 AND 35 MAKE BEST OFFICERS

The Sooner You Sign Up the Better Your Chance to Get a Commission

"It has been the experience in the armies of Europe that men between the nges of 25 and 35 yeara make the best officers. Men of these ages, with a certain amount of business experience are what we want for the secand Officera' Training Camps, which open August 27th."

This is the statement made by the examining officer of thls district, who is now considering applications for the new training camp. Mr. Mason Rose of this city, local secretary af the Military Training Campa Association has been in direct touch with the examining officer and makes public the words of the latter.

"From the way in which applications are coming in, it is evident that many younger fellows have misconstrued the government's circular which stated that men over 31 would be given preference in the new training camp. While it is very true that alder men are wanted, this should discourage no one of 25 years of age, and even younger, from putting in his request for admission. A man'a chances for being aceepted are greater if he is over 26 ar 28—but there will be a large number of the 25-year class wearing the khaki as officers.

"It seems that many who have asked for applications for the new camp are still holding them. In the case of the younger men, this is a big mistake. The sooner their names sre on file, the more chance they have of getting in on the ground floor and having the opportunity ta be an officer in the new national army.

"We want to have plenty of time to thoroughly consider the merits of the younger men."

Here the examining officer picked up an application blank lying on his desk. "Now, this fs a good type of man," he said, "26 years of age, captain of his high school baseball team with four years of business experience. He has had no military trnining, but seems to have given early evidence of leadership. I have given him a high mark nnd he will undoubtedly be enrolled in the second and last Officers' Training Cnmp.

"Here are two more applications. One of them is from a superintendent of building construction. He has only had three years of high school nnd no military experience, hut he knows how to handle men. The other application is from the manager of a department in a commercial enterprise. He, too, hss had no military experience, but he has demanstrated his worth in taking charge of men, although he is only 25 years old."

"In its attempt to get older men to fill the more responsible positions in the New National Army," says Mr. Rose, "many have not realized that men of 25 years and up have an excellent chance to be accepted.

"Men, more men, and still more men are wanted for this second Officers' Training Camp, opening August 27th. There are only two weeks more to apply. No one will he considered after July 15th. This is at once the duty and the opportunity for men between the ages of 25 and 44 to give the government the benefit of their experience, of their services, as leaders of the second National Army of Five Hundred Thousand Men."

Go to the local offices today and learn about the opportunities that nwait you. The office for this district is the Charlevoix Post Office. Mr. Rose, the chairman, will gladly give you full information. The Regular Army must gain 70,000 rccruits this week to show the Kaiser thnt the young men of Americs nre back of the President.

HOW IT FEELS TO RIDE IN A BRITISH TANK

Newspaper Correspondent Relates Experiences While in British Tank at Front

Paris.—(By Mail.)—How does it feel and sound in the "innards" of a British tank in action?

Bullets clattering against the steel covered sides of the newly invented war machine sound like myriads of hailstones against the window of a moving train. A direct hit by a shell shakes the monster from stem to stern and rattles your teeth but in tanks like this it merely tickles their ribs and they wallow on.

A first hand description of a tank fighting was given here today by one of the crew of H. M. Landship "Ichthyosaurus." He speaks from inside information.

"You need your sealegs to ride a tank," the land seaman said, describing the slow rolling ride towards an enemy machine-gun "nest" somewhere on the Somme. The tank approaches the German wire—brown rusty entanglements in multitudinous rows. It slides down an old mine crater and waddles up the other side. It cuts through the forest of wire with scatchy crunching sounds and just ahead is the "nest," piles of white sand-bags with little loopholes here and there.

"We fire without ceasing hand on gun and eye glued to the loophole pierced in the steel with sweat pouring down our forearms.

"A thud; a powerful panting, a last and almost imperciptable stop. The nose of our tank scatters sand snd cement bags throwing them right and left as if it were ploughing up a field. Then comes another violent shock, and heavy blow and a crashing: We are going straight through a wall and are pulverizing machine-guns. Grenades burst upon the tank's armor. We are in the midst of the 'nest.' All at once enemy heads with terror on their faces appear on both sides of us. Now is our turn. Our machine guns crackle and our bullets whistle into the German trenches which we are enfilading and we throw lead into the underground passages leading from the 'nest' to the rear. The Germans are in the greatest disorder. They throw themselves flat on their stomachs, they raise their arms to heaven and some of them try to run away.

"A whistle sounds in the tank and we stop. Then wild cheers come faintly to our ears. The Tommies are just behind us. They take possession of the 'nest' and gather up everything living which remains.

THE PUBLIC PULSE

Editor Courier:

It was just a clear, nice Friday afternoon in the month of June, when some 250 or 300 bright, vivacious, charming young ladies from all parts of the United States assembled at the porch of the Inn, preparatory to embarking in about 50 automobiles to take a 50 mile trip around Pine lake through the flourishing cities of East Jordan and Boyne City. At the latter place they were met outside the city and escorted by members of the Boyne City Association of Commerce to the Wolverine hotel, where a beautiful luncheon had been prepared and a right royal reception given. If Boyne City could have heard and could still hear the many beautiful things that were being said about this reception and their fine hotel, they would feel amply repaid for all they did.

Great regrets were expressed by this party because they were unable to express, in a more fitting manner, the kindness shown them. It is very doubtful whether mine host, Creamer, who has managed the Inn so successfully for so many years and built for it a reputation as a summer hotel second to none in this country, ever held beneath his roof a more enthusiastic set of people than this same bunch of 300 little girls. We speak of them in this way, rather familiarly, because they were just bubbling over with mirth and gratitude for the excursion given them for their entertainment during their sojourn at this hotel.

Charlevoix Association of Commerce is certainly entitled to credit for the getting up of the excursion. Bob Bridge—we all know Bob. We are not positive that he would lock the vault and close the bank while someone was waiting to pay a note due or even past due, in order to enjoy a little chat with, or better still, to take some pretty, charming young lady for an automobile drive, but he might even be guilty of neglecting business to this extent. At all events, Bob said we want to take these young ladies out for a ride and the association said "yes."

I know what this thing means to Charlevoix. I know it means an advertisement that will go all over this country, as you mark my words—some of the young ladies who were here last week attending that national convention, will make it a point to come here on their wedding trip, and some of them won't wait until they are married to come again. and they will send their friends and their friends' friends, and it will mean more to Charlevoix, I believe, than any other association that has ever come here. I was told by the gentleman and his wife who rode in my car, that it was one of the happiest surprises that they had ever had accorded them. I would say to our friend Creamer that whenever he has an association of young ladies coming to Charlevoix, all he had to do is to tell Bob Bridge and he will be "Johnnie on the spot."

Yours truly,
GEORGE H. VAN PELT.

ENLIST IN THE HOME COMPANY

NO NEW COMPANIES WILL BE FORMED

Citizens Advising Young Men to Wait are Making a Grave Mistake—Enlist Now

Despite pressure brought to bear upon it by influential men, the war department has steadfastly refused to accept any new companies to the National Guard or as volunteers. Col. Roosevelt was turned down on his scheme to send three divisions of volunteers to France; and scores of other well known officers have met the same fate.

If there is any young man in Northwestern Michigan who is holding off because he hopes to get into a company recruited entirely from his own city or town, he is wasting his time. There will be no such companies taken. No less than three former brigadier-generals of Michigan National Guard have requested the government for permission to raise a regiment and have been turned down. So have two Michigan men who have commanded for considerable periods Canadian battalions, one of them on the firing-line, and who have splendid records.

And so have about 20 majors, captains and lieutenants who have been begging Governor Sleeper to help them. He cannot do so, because the war department has announced its policy and will not change.

Any citizen who advises prospective recruits against joining a present National Guard company in the hope he will be able to raise a company of volunteers is making a grave mistake and insofar as he is successful is weakening the military forces of the United States.

If you want to enlist, get in now, and join the Northwestern Michigan home company,—I of the 33rd. Write the recruiting officer at East Jordan armory. He will get in touch with you.

There will be a dance at the Ironton Grange Hall on Friday evening, July 6. Orchestra music—everyone invited. 27t1

NEARLY 100 MEN ARE NEEDED

TO RECRUIT COMPANY I TO WAR STRENGTH

Numbers Have Already Enlisted—Transportation Given Free to Company Station

The War Preparedness Board is working with Company I, 33rd Michigan Infantry, to recruit the company to war strength. Nearly 100 men are needed. Until they are secured, Northwestern Michigan's company is at a disadvantage in the performance of its duty. It is now in the Federal service "Somewhere in Michigan," having been kept on duty since it was called out more than a year ago.

Though the headquarters of this company are at East Jordan, the young men who compose it come in large numbers from adjoining counties. Recruits are being secured over this entire district. Fourteen counties between Lake Michigan and the northern central part of the state have as much interest in the company as has East Jordan.

The editor of this paper is interested in seeing the company recruited in record time to war strength, and will be glad to give information and advice to any young men desiring to join it. A recruiting officer will be constantly on duty at the armory in East Jordan, and prospective recruits will be transported free of charge from their homes to the company station and from there to the present location of the company.

BOLD BANDIT SHOOTS 'EM UP

MAHONEY GIVES SHERIFF AND POSSE THE SLIP

Gun-Play Showed Fine Courage But Poor Marksmanship—"Jesse James" Escapes

To those who believe that the wild and wooly west with its "shootin' i'rns" and bad men is a thing of the past, we offer the following lurid tale as a complete refutation of their arguments. One would not credit the fact that the sheriff of Charlevoix county could be confronted in the course of his duties by conditions as hazardous as those that obtain in the trenches of France, but such is the case, as you will see as you read on.

Courier readers will remember the escape last November from Ionia reformatory of Asa Mahoney, who had been sentenced to from one to ten years for rape, and who took advantage of his freedom as a "trusty" to regain his liberty. Since his escape, those familiar with the case have been busy figuring where he could possibly have concealed himself. Where he is now is still a matter of conjecture, but where he was last Saturday night became painfully apparent to the sheriff and members of a posse whom the latter had summoned to effect Mahoney's capture.

Novak was driving up Michigan avenue with a couple of friends Saturday afternoon at about four o'clock and when near Jonas Hiller's residence, saw a fellow dressed in a khaki suit and carrying a gun dodge into the underbrush as though fearful of being seen. He thought it rather peculiar but had no particular reason to follow the incident up. On his return to town, he was called on the phone from Traverse City and his aid solicited in locating one, Ambrose Schafer, who recently escaped from the state institution at Stillwater, Min., and who was believed to be somewhere in this part of the country.

The sheriff drove back along Michigan avenue and out on the Petoskey road, where he made inquiry at several places as to whether any suspicious person had been seen in the neighborhood, finally coming to the Mahoney home.

The sheriff says that as he stopped the car in front of the house, he thought he saw someone leave the building by the back way and disappear into the brush, but could not be sure, as it was growing dark and he caught only a fleeting glimpse. He went to the door and knocked. Mrs. Mahoney answered, but stoutly denied that anyone had been there. Novak, whose suspicions were aroused, was not satisfied, however, and returning to town called out Fred Choon, W. T. Driggett and Fred Hull to serve as a posse and bidding them hold themselves in readiness, watched for developments along a line that he felt sure would shortly produce them.

How well his suspicions were justified may be seen from what follows: At about half past eleven o'clock Saturday night, Joe Hoffman, who delivers for Klooster's market, was standing with the car he drives near the Ferguson house on Bridge street when he was approached by Eugene Fry, who has been a sort of "pal" of Mahoney's and had a reputation with the authorities as a bad man, having come originally from Texas. Now, Hoffman, who has only been here a year, or thereabouts, didn't know Fry and had never seen Mahoney. So, when Fry stated that he had a party who desired to reach Boyne City that night and offered to pay Hoffman if he would take the man over, Joe acceded readily enough to his request and drove up Dixon avenue to the Inn with Fry. Here the latter got out and Mahoney who was waiting there, got in, and they drove on. They had got a short distance past the Pine Point resort entrance on the Petoskey road, when Mahoney told Hoffman that he wanted to go to Boyne Falls. Hoffman refused to take him that far, saying that he could either get out of the car where they were, or be satisfied with a ride as far as Boyne City. "Well," said Mahoney, "take me across the ravine to the top of the next hill, at any rate, and I will stop there for the night."

Hoffman agreed to this and in a few moments they pulled up in front of the farm home of W. H. Moyer, where Mahoney thought he could secure accommodations for the night.

Now it seems that the sheriff had kept his eye on Fry, whose relations with Mahoney he knew and whom he had reason to suspect would be the one to help his escape if any attempt were made. When Fry engaged Hoffman to take him to the Inn and got into the car, Charley rapidly collected his posse, landed them into his own car and started in hot pursuit. As Mahoney and Hoffman drew up in front of Moyer's and before Mahoney had time to get out of the car, Novak and his posse whizzed past and stopped a little ways beyond. The sheriff and his assistants sprang from the car and ran to where Mahoney was sitting. As Chorley reached him Asa shoved a couple of young cannons into his face, saying, as he did so, "I'll kill you, Novak."

As the sheriff jumped back, Mahoney commenced firing. The former had a gun with him, but it was strapped at his hip in a holster and stuck, as Charley attempted to draw it. Then Mahoney fired two more shots, jumped out of the car on the far side and backed up the bank, firing at random as he went. Bill Driggett, who had his safety hammerless trained on the bandit by this time yelled, "Put up your hands." Mahoney's only reply was a couple of shots that sung by uncomfortably close to Bill's cranium. Driggett tried to reply but in his confusion had forgotten to release the safety catch on his gun which naturally wouldn't respond. When he did manage to turn her loose, he emptied all five chambers in Asa's direction, but that gentleman by this time was rapidly getting over the bank into the swamp. The only casualty occurred to Fred Choon, who got one of the leaden pellets through his coat and trouser leg.

The sheriff and his posse beat up the swamp, but in the uncertain light was unable to find the bandit, who had all the advantage, as there is no worse place to hunt a criminal in the country than the deep thicket near the Moyer place into which Mahoney made his way. Novak believes that Fry, who has not been seen since the night of the affray, will try to join Mahoney, who he thinks got away on the night fright, and will in some communication to friends here give away his whereabouts, so he is pursuing a policy of "watchful waiting" which is about all that can be done in the circumstances.

SECRET GOT OUT

Miss Clara Nowland and Neal Dow Married on "Q. T." July 6th

Miss Clara Nowland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Nowland of Charlevoix and Neal Dow, of Boyne City, stole a march on their friends and were married at Norwood on July 6th last, by the Rev. Mr. Smith.

They intended to keep it a secret and succeeded until Sunday, when some one found it out. Mrs. Dow is at present working at the telephone office here, but will leave on July 16th and join her husband, who has a good position with the Buick Auto Co., at Flint, where the young couple will be at home to their many friends about the middle of August.

CHILD HAS CLOSE CALL

LITTLE WITHERS BOY STRUCK BY CAR SATURDAY

Youngstar Badly Bruised But No Serious Injuries Sustained—Drivar Not Blamed

Robert Withers, the little son of Mont Withers, was struck by a car owned by Mrs. H. L. Kitzelman, a resorter, last Saturday forenoon on Bridge street and knocked to the pavement, sustaining several bruises about the arm and leg, but no other serious injuries.

No blame attaches to the driver of the car as he was moving slowly at the time and made all possible effort to avoid striking the child, who ran out suddenly into the road. The little fellow was struck a glancing blow by the car's fender and so escaped falling under the wheels.

The greatest care should be taken by parents to keep their children in hand while on our crowded business street. With the greatest care that it is possible to exercise, serious accidents are liable to occur this summer owing to the great number of cars now in town and which may be expected to be even greater a little later on. The co-operation of everyone, both car owner and pedestrian is necessary if shocking casualties are to be prevented.

PURCHASE 250-ACRE TRACT OF LAND

National Motor Tourists' Club Locate near Mackinaw City

Announcement of the purchase of a 750 acre tract at Mackinaw City for the National Motor Tourists' club has been made in Detroit by J. W. Ryckman, of Flint, secretary of the organization, says the Petoskey Evening News.

The location is near the monument recently erected to mark the northern end of the Dixie Highway and is traversed by the West and East Michigan pike. It has a frontage on the straits of one and a quarter miles and includes a slight eminence overlooking the bay, on which the organization purposes to build a club house to be ready for occupancy next summer. Included in the club plans are arrangements for a golf course, bathing pavillion and private bungalows for members, the entire outlay to be in the neighborhood of $350,000.

The membership of the club includes wealthy motorists throughout the country and the club house will be located at the terminus of a direct road from Miami, Fla. The organization has already offered financial aid to the Michigan Good Roads association and will co-operate with chambers of commerce and other civic bodies throughout the state in an effort to make Michigan the mecca of motor tourists and to provide good roads from every entrance to the state direct to Northern Michigan.

MUCH LOVED FRIEND GONE

MANY HERE WILL MOURN FOR MISS PHILA WOOD

Charlevoix Was Her Girlhood Home —Passed Away Last Monday At Germantown, Pa.

Phila Wood is dead. When the sad news became known here, the hearts in many homes of Charlevoix were stirred to the depths.

Few there are here unacquainted with her gracious and loveable personality. The eldest daughter of O. D. and Mary H. Wood, her childhood and girlhood days were spent in Charlevoix, where everyone who knew her loved and respected her. Many older residents will remember, too, the perfect horsemanship of this self-reliant, active-minded girl. She rode as she did everything else, with confident mastery.

Miss Wood graduated from the high school here with honors in 1888. She was one of the six members of the first class graduated from the Charlevoix high school, and is the first one of the number to go. Four of the remaining members will probably be present at the funeral. They are Mrs. Robert O'Neill, Mrs. A. A. Swinton, Mrs. Frank H. Wilkinson, Miss Luna Washburn (now Mrs. W. E. Wellman) and Miss Josie Litzau, whose whereabouts is not known.

Following her graduation, she attended the university at Ann Arbor for a year, after which she entered Northwestern college for a like period, finishing her studies in 1892 at Ann Arbor. Later, during the period of 1893-1900 she was associated with Miss Mary MacDowell in settlement work at the city of Chicago.

About seventeen years ago, she entered the home of Charles Jenkins, at Germantown, Pa., as governess for his children and soon became an honored member of their household, valued in every capacity beyond words. Four years ago, she was forced to undergo a very critical operation, followed of necessity a year later by another. Since that time, she has been a constant sufferer, but kept actively about her duties until the end, which came Monday, July 9th, at Germantown—the close of 45 years of useful, unselfish life.

Her sister, Mrs. Fred Clarke and brother, Henry Wood, of this city, were notified by telegram and Mrs. Clarke endeavored to reach her bedside before she passed away but arrived too late to meet her again in life. Mr. and Mrs. Clarke and Mr. Jenkins are now on their way to Charlevoix with the remains and on their arrival plans for the funeral, which it is expected will be held Saturday, the 14th, will be definitely settled.

Miss Wood was strong and loyal in her friendships. On the occasion of her several visits here, she never forgot to call on the old friends of her girlhood days, nor was any one of the number ever neglected in this respect. Her death has removed one of nature's true noblewomen from a world sadly in need of their ministrations.

PURCHASE FIVE HUNDRED ACRES

H. L. OLDHAM AND FRIENDS CLOSE A SECOND DEAL

Six Farms Included In Big Tract To Become Sites of Handsome Summer Homes

Charlevoix people have hardly had time to recover from the excitement of anticipation aroused by the news of Albert H. Loeb's extensive purchase of Pine Lake property and it' projected development and now comes the news that Harry L. Oldham and a number of his friends have acquired six farms in the territory adjacent to the Loeb tract—a matter of some 500 acres; including the Newman, Wakefield, White, Navutney, Hiram Brock and Wm. L. Shaw farms.

What Mr. Oldham and his friends will do with the property in question can at present only be a matter of popular conjecture, as details of the transaction and its outcome are not now available. It is safe to say, however, knowing Mr. Oldham as we do and that he never does anything by halves, that whatever the hand of man can do to add to the attractiveness of nature will be done.

Now that these gentlemen have "set the pace," we may expect to see the dream of Charlevoix's boom prophets realized and the shores of Pine Lake from Boyne City's smokehung furnaces to Pine Point on the one side and from the sugar plant to East Jordan's busy mills on the other will no doubt in due time blossom like the rose with the gardens of our summer visitors.

WHEAT MAKES POOR SHOWING

REPORT SAYS ACRES WILL NEVER MATURE

Large Acreage of Corn But Weather Has Hindered Growth—Condition in State

Wheat, oats, barley, rye, meadows and pastures made decided improvement during the month. Of these crops wheat shows the poorest prospect, the stand being thin and uneven with considerable areas in many fields that will never mature. Oats and barley germinated slowly and made little growth at first but they have since improved in color and the growth is satisfactory. The stand of rye is better and more uniform than that of wheat but it is not generally heavy. Clover and alfalfa meadows are excellent and more promising than timothy meadows although the last named have made marked growth under the prevailing cool and wet weather conditions. Pastures are growing rapidly and in good condition in every part of the State.

Every effort has been made by farmers to plant the maximum acreage consistent with their facilities. A large acreage of corn went in but planting was more or less delayed by unfavorable weather and proper cultivation is being hindered by the same cause. In some cases the seed rotted in the ground, or failed to germinate, and cutworms and crows have done much injury, so that much replanting has been necessary. The stand is generally good except that it is small and backward due to the lack of sunshine and warm weather.

A still greater increase is noted in the acreage of potatoes in the main potato-growing districts. The stand is very good and the present outlook is excellent.

The acreage of beans is much greater than in former years, the percentage of increase eclipsing that of every other crop. Unusual care was exercised in preparing the ground and the most of the crop went in under generally favorable conditions, but heavy rains delayed planting on some of the heavy soils so that fields were still to be planted after the end of the month. Considerable damage was done during the closing days of the month by the flooding and washing of planted fields, and considerable injury has been caused in some counties by the bean maggot.

Of the fruits, peaches show a very poor prospect because of the serious winter-killing of buds. Unfavorable weather during the blooming period of the other tree fruits prevented proper pollenization and caused a poor setting in consequence, so that the outlook for apples, pears and cherries is only fair. Grapes promise an excellent crop in the commercial districts and small fruits are generally plentiful. Truck crops, while backward, are now making satisfactory advancement. Sugar beets have suffered considerably from wet weather and the condition is below the average of previous years.

FIRE MAKES CLEAN SWEEP

WEBB COTTAGE ON BELVEDERE RESORT A TOTAL LOSS

Cause of Blaze Unknown—Most of Furniture Was Saved But House Must be Rebuilt

The cottage owned by George Webb of Chicago, at 133 Sigourney Avenue (Upper terrace,) Belvedere resort, caught fire last Friday afternoon at about one o'clock and got such a start that the fire department was unable to save it, although there was very little wind blowing at the time. They had a long run to get to the house and so many lengths of hose were required to reach it that much valuable time was lost.

The place had been cleaned the day before the fire and made ready for the family, who were expected to arrive Saturday. What caused the fire is not known, but John Brown, caretaker for the resort, who was the first man on the scene, found his entrance to the upper story already blocked by the flames. It was possible, however, to save most of the furniture on the lower floor.

It is understood that the owners of the cottage have already closed a deal for another cottage on the resort, which they will occupy this summer.

DESERTER GIVEN A FIFTEEN YEAR SENTENCE

Member of Co. L, M. N. G., Picked Up at Powers

Oliver Poquette, a member of Company L., M. N. G., who enlisted from Iron River, has been sentenced to fifteen years in the Fort Leavenworth prison for desertion, says the St. Ignace Enterprise.

Poquette came to Iron River from Menominee county and was working there when the bunch of recruits were added to Company L. He enlisted with the other boys and served with the company as Escanaba where they are guarding the ore docks. One day he turned up missing and was later captured at Powers. He was taken back to Escanaba and from there to Fort Brady at Sault Ste. Marie, the company being in the employ of the U. S. government. He was tried by court martial last week and found guilty of desertion. The death penalty could have been imposed by the authorities but it was thought best to impose that of imprisonment instead.

CHACO IS ENTIRELY RE-BUILT

PETER THOMPSON'S CRUISER NOW IN HARBOR

Observation Cabin Entirely Different From Ordinary Type—Can Do 20 Miles Per Hour

The gasoline yacht Chaco, owned by Peter Thompson, a son of Logan Thomson of the Champion Coated Paper Co., of Hamilton, Ohio, who spends his summers on the Belvedere resort, arrived in this port a week ago last Friday and is now lying at the foot of Ranger's dock in Round lake.

This fine power boat, which was here last season has been entirely rebuilt and now represents the latest thought in yacht construction. She is 60 feet in length, 10 1-2 foot beam and draws about four feet. Galley, toilet and engine room are amidships. Forward is a spacious observation cabin, enclosed with high plate glass windows which may be opened at the top or both top and bottom. So large and so close together are the windows that the effect is that of a Pullman observation car. Crew quarters are forward of this cabin and the owner's apartments are aft of the engine room. She carries a crew of two men.

The craft is finished in mahogany outside and done with white enamel paint over the woodwork inside.

She has two 200 h. p. engines of the 8 cylinder Sterling type, capable of developing a speed of 20 miles per hour. The Chaco flies the burgee of the Pine lake yacht club.

BABY HAS A NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH

Mrs. Charles Lamphear Falls With Child in Arms Down Stairs

The seven months old baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lamphear was the victim of a painful and what might have proven fatal accident Tuesday evening. An older child with less pliant tissues would scarcely have survived serious injury.

Mrs. Lamphear was descending the stairs at their home on Mason street with the baby in her arms, when her foot caught on an obstruction on the stairs, causing her ankle to turn and pitching her headforemost down the steep flight. The baby's head struck the edge of the door at the bottom of the stairway, and for several hours the little one was unconscious. Drs. Wilkinson and Armstrong were called, and after careful examination decided that no permanent injury had been inflicted. Mrs. Lamphear, though badly bruised sustained no serious hurt. The baby at last reports is resting nicely.

GUARD LAST TO GO OVER-SEAS

HOME PROTECTION DEMANDS TRAINED TROOPS

Pvt. Harold Usher Here on Furlough —Thirty-third May Go South This Winter

From Private Harold W. Usher, of Company I, Thirty-third regiment, M. N. G., who is home on a three day furlough, we learn that it is not likely that the national guard will see service at the front for some time yet, although the 31st and 32nd regiments will be mobilized at Grayling on the 15th of this month, where they will be trained in the details of actual trench warfare, which, as far as possible, will be reproduced in every respect save the actual horrors of conflict. It is likely that the guard will not go to the front until the first draft troops have been sent, as a division of our regular army and some 2,500 marines are now with Pershing in France, and it is hardly reasonable to suppose that the government will drain the United States of all its trained troops and leave its protection in the hands of raw levies.

Private Usher has followed the Thirty-third through the entire course of its noteworthy career in the government service. He enlisted in Company I of East Jordan on the 19th of June, 1916. On June 24th following, the company left East Jordan for Grayling, where they remained in camp until the 5th of October, when they were ordered south, arriving at El Paso on the 11th. On March 5th of this year and after the war cloud on the Mexican border had passed over, the Thirty-third entrained for Michigan, remaining in barracks at Fort Wayne for about a month, when the different divisions of the regiment were assigned to guard duty at various points of strategic importance in the state.

To Company I was allotted the task of keeping "hyphenated" citizens away from the Grand Trunk tunnel under the St. Clair river at Port Huron, and they are still on duty there, acting in conjunction with the Canadian national guard across the river at Sarnia. They have orders to shoot, if necessary, but so far have been able to put nothing more formidable than a tramp or two and a few stray dogs. This is not their fault, but it seems that "Kaiser Bill's" agents are not pulling off any "frightfulness" stuff in that locality. However, the government cannot afford to take any risks, as the St. Clair tunnel is a vital part of the main traffic artery between the east and west and on one of the largest trunk line systems in the country. The destruction of this tunnel would mean a terrific tie-up of indefinite duration that might have far-reaching and disastrous results. Other portions of the Thirty-third are stationed at Detroit, the Soo, Marquette, Escanaba, Mount Clemens and Battle Creek. The machine gun company of the Thirty-third, now at the Soo, was pronounced by Brigadier General George Bell to be the most efficient unit of its kind in the United States army.

The Thirty-third infantry, by the way, has the peculiar honor of being the only regiment of the guard in the United States that was not mustered out of the service at the close of the border trouble. This may have been due to the fact of its fine record, as it was mentioned once officially in terms of the highest praise by Brigadier General Bell.

Company I, also has an A-1 standing. Not a single man has been in the guard house since the regiment left for Texas and less punishments have been recorded for this company than any other in the regiment. The company left East Jordan 107 strong. On their being sworn into federal service, the stricter medical examination and dependent clause pruned this number down to 60 men. On their return to Michigan the further discharge of those having dependents reduced the number to 38. Recent recruiting has brought the company up to a respectable war strength of about 100.

School District Meets

The annual meeting of School District No. 1 of the City and township of Charlevoix was held last Monday evening at the high school building.

Reports of officers were presented and accepted and the meeting re-elected Oluf Nordrum and W. E. Hampton whose terms as trustees expired this year. The various schools of the district were reported in good shape and it is not thought that any increase in taxation will be necessary, despite the 50 per cent boost in fuel cost over last year and increased expense for salaries, etc.

Rescue Valuable Cargo

Part of the valuable cargo of copper and relics from the steamer Pewabic, sunk in Thunder bay, Lake Huron in 1865, left Alpena Monday in a steamer bound for Toledo. The Pewabic was sunk in a collision with the steamer Meteor and only a few of those on board were saved. Several lives have been added to those lost with the vessel in efforts to salvage the cargo, which in addition to copper, is said to be worth today approximately $200,000, including a large quantity of pig iron.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

Wash away all the stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside; no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, billous attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast, act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

COMB SAGE TEA IN FADED OR GRAY HAIR

If Mixed with Sulphur it Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

BARNARD NOTES

Miss Lottie Ager is very happy over a new piano presented to her by her mother, Mrs. Annie Ager, of Charlevoix.

The families of Fred Swartout and Clarence Beattie drove over to Norwood the Fourth and ate their dinner "pienic fashion" on the farm recently purchased by Mr. Swartout.

The glorious Fourth is over. Quite a number of this vicinity celebrated in Petoskoy. Among them were Mrs. Sims Baker and the families of John Holiday, Wm. Cook, Albert Beattie and most of the young people of the neighborhood.

This is the 10th dny of July but the weather feels more like the 10th of October. The crops are growing very slowly, especinlly corn and beans, which do not look very promising just now. Either crop are not a very good stand and the beans in some instanees are being taken by cutworms and others by a sort of a grub.

Mrs. George Ager received a letter last week from Mrs. Lizzie Whitmoyer, formerly a resident of Barnard, but now living in sunny California. She wished to be remembered to all her friends here and told how she took the Courier and how much she enjoyed reading the Barnard items. She said the paper didn't menn very much to her unless there was something in it from dear old Barnard.

The annual district school meeting was held Monday evening. About fifteen were present and considerable business was transacted. Wm. Burns was elected for school treasurer for another term, George Holiday was appointed janitor with a salary of $5 a month and duties clearly outlined, and Alee Kerr was commissioned to haul and put 8 ton of coal into the school house cellar ready for next winter. This is to be done ns soon as haying time is over. And last, but not least, plans were talked over for making Barnard a standard school. For this purpose, as soon as arrangements ean he made with the Commissioner, Miss Stewart, a district meeting will be held at the school house. Everybody in the district is urged to attend this meeting and help the board and the commissioner make plans and arrangments for standardizing Barnard school and finishing the work before school shall begin in September. Wateh for announcements later.

AMONG THE PLAYERS AND CADDIES

The protracted visit of the cool weather this spring has made the number of golf players extremely seant so far. July 4th, just past, was the lightest Fourth the course has had in years. There were only seventy-four players. The record for this year is eighty-eight, which number of players teed off Saturday, July 7. Many more boys have been given numbers than have been actually needed so far because it was thought well to encourage the new and younger lads, whom we will need badly later and who make our "old" caddies of the years to come. The boys are plentifully supplied with wholesome pastime and the supervision is good, so that even though many of the boys spend most of the day at the links to get an out, they are not in mischief. Parents or any who may be interested are cordlally invited to drop in on us at any time and see for themselves the condition of things. It is hoped that the boys will not become discouraged by the lack of players. Work will be better soon, though it may not this season be as heavy as in 1916.

—o—

On last Friday morning, Arden Ulrich, (43) fell from a small tree, presenting himself with an ugly bruise above his left eye and a sprained wrist. He was taken home in the H. X. Strauss automobile. The boys haven't plnyed tree-tag for so long thnt they have ahout forgotten how. As a game, tree-tag is zero, anyhow.

—o—

Sunday, August 19, has been set as the day for the Fourth Annual Excursion of the Charlevoix Caddies, subject to the approval of Captain Weaver of the "Columbia," who hasn't been consulted yet. Where the trip will be made has not been decided.

—o—

Parents of the new caddies particularly are asked to help their boys learn the art of caddying by having them bring home a copy of the folder containing the rules and general information that every good caddie must know, and helping him to learn them. If this is done our beginners will the sooner become our good caddies. We ask all the boys to be, first of all, punctual, attentive and obedient. Parents ean also help by seeing that their boys are at least punctual at their work.

—o—

Though conditions have changed at the links in the last five years, boys are still boys nnd frequently bits of unneeessnry roughness take place which escape the notice of those in charge. In such cases the caddie master wishes parents to confer directly with him, for, although talebearing is discouraged, everything that can be done to root out rowdyism will be done.

—o—

For some reason or another the basket ball of lust season did not last through the snow-time, and the winter wind broke the bank boards down. The latter have been repaired and a new ball has been ordered and should be here soon.

—o—

Glen Moore, (11) has lately become a local distributor of the Grand Rapids Press.

—o—

Vern Miller, (13) found his number to be too much for him and went to work for Orlowski, the groeer.

—o—

William Woods, (9) returned to the golf world after a week or two of work in the food department of The Inn. He had something to do with the dishes we think.

—o—

Carl Gordan, (21) and Harold ("Fat") McCafferty, (22) have formed the crack horse-shoe team. Laverne ("Buck") Lenore (63) has the prize-taking faney "wind-up" though. Incidentally, if the boys ask any of the village blacksmiths for horseshoes, we hope they'll let them have a pair or two, for they are being put to good use.

—o—

Jerald ("Jig") McCafferty (40) tried farming for a big long week and a little more; eame in to spend his money on the Fourth and stayed. "Jig" says he is no farmer. In all the time he was in the country he couldn't raise anything but an umbrella.

—o—

Martin ("Fish") Halverson (4) took a much needed rest last week end, spending Saturday afternoon and Sunday at Ironton visiting his sister. A "much needed" rest—did you get that?

—o—

Lyman Brown (5) has been taken into the employ of Benj. Brown. His work, they say, is mostly cranking self-starters.

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamful sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. It is free from alcohol.

Raspberry Pie For Dinner

That's welcome news and even a grouch will permit a smile to play on his face when he hears it.

Nearly everybody relishes good pie, especially red raspberry pie.

The kind that is full of ripe red berries and is almost running over with juice.

Of course, the crust must be crisp, flaky and tender too, so bake it with

Lily White

"The Flour the Best Cooks Use."

for Lily White Flour makes really wonderful pastry as well as delicious bread.

It is very convenient for you, as well as economical, to have a flour in the house that bakes everything.

And all dealers are instrueted to sell you Lily White Flour on the guarantee you will like it better than any flour you ever used or return your money.

Don't forget the Raspberry Pie—Try this receipe:

Line tin with pastry. Mix berries with ¾ or 1 cup sugar, depending upon acidity of berries, to which has been added 1 level tablespoon flour. Fill crust with berries, dot with butter.

Place upper crust in position and bake. Have a quick oven at first to start under crust baking, then lower the temperature to complete the cooking.

If the under crust be brushed lightly with white of egg, the albumin forms a thin coating which prevents the juice from soaking into the crust.

To avoid the juice running out into the oven, try folding the edge of the pie back upon the pie for a short distanee. This also does away with any hard baked edges to the crust.

HEART of the SUNSET

By REX BEACH

Author of "The Spoilers," "The Iron Trail," "The Silver Horde," Etc.

She rose and met him, smiling. "How did you know I wanted to see you?" she inquired.

Dave took her hand and looked down at her, framing a commonplace reply. But for some reason the words lay unspoken upon his tongue. Alaire's informal greeting, her parted lips, the welcoming light in her eyes, had sent them flying. It seemed to him that the dim half-light which illumined this nook emanated from her face and her person, that the fragrance which came to his nostrils was the perfume of her breath, and at the prompting of these thoughts all his smothered longings rose as if at a signal. As mutinous prisoners in a jail delivery overpower their guards, so did Dave's long-repressed emotions gain the upper hand of him now, and so swift was their uprising that he could not summon more than a feeble, panicky resistance.

The awkwardness of the pause which followed Alaire's inquiry strengthened the rebellious impulses within him, and quite unconsciously his friendly grasp upon her fingers tightened. For her part, as she saw this sudden change sweep over him, her own face altered and she felt something within her breast leap into life. No woman could have failed to read the meaning of his sudden agitation, and, strange to say, it worked a similar state of feeling in Alaire. She strove to control herself and to draw away, but instead found that her hand had answered his, and that her eyes were flashing recognition of his look. All in an instant she realized how deathly tired of her own struggle she had become, and experienced a reckless impulse to cast away all restraint and blindly meet his first advance. She had no time to question her yearnings; she seemed to understand only that this man offered her rest and security; that in his arms lay sanctuary.

To both it seemed that they stood there silently, hand in hand, for a very long time, though in reality there was scarcely a moment of hesitation on the part of either. A drunken, breathless instant of uncertainty, then Alaire was on Dave's breast, and his strength, his ardor, his desire, was throbbing through her. Her bare arms were about his neck; a sigh, the token of utter surrender, fluttered from her throat. She raised her face to his and their lips melted together.

"Dream-man!" she murmured.

As consciousness returns after a swoon, so did realization return to Alaire Austin. Faintly, uncertainly at first, then with a swift, strong effort, she pushed herself out of Dave's reluctant arms. They stood apart, frightened. Dave's gaze was questioning. Alaire began to tremble and to struggle with her breath.

"Dream Man!" She Murmured.

"Are we—mad?" she gasped. "What have we done?"

"There's no use fighting. It was here—it was bound to come out. Oh, Alaire—!!"

"Don't!" She shook her head, and, avoiding his outstretched hands, went to the edge of the veranda and leaned weakly against a pillar, with her head in the crook of her arm. Dave followed her, but the words he spoke were scarcely intelligible.

Finally she raised her face to his: "No!" It is useless to deny it—now that we know. But I didn't know, until a moment ago."

"I've known all the time—ever since the first moment I saw you," he told her, hoarsely. "To me you're all there is; nothing else matters. And you love me! I wonder if I'm awake."

"Dream-man," she repeated, more slowly. "Oh, why did you come so late?"

"So late?"

"Yes. We must think it out the best way we can. I—wonder what you think of me?"

"You must know. There's no need for excuses; there's nothing to explain, except the miracle that such great happiness could come to a fellow like me."

"Happiness? It means anything but that. I was miserable enough before, what shall I do now?"

"Why, readjust your life," he cried, roughly. "Surely you won't hesitate after this?"

But Alaire did not seem to hear him. She was staring out into the night again. "What a failure I must be!" she murmured, finally. "I suppose I should have seen this coming, but—I didn't. And in his house, too! This dress is his, and these jewels—everything!" She held up her hands and stared curiously at the few rings she wore, as if seeing them for the first time. "How does that make you feel?"

Dave stirred; there was resentment in his voice when he answered: "Your husband has sacrificed his claim to you, as everybody knows. To my mind he has lost his rights. You're mine, mine!" He waved a vigorous gesture of defiance. "I'll take you away from him at any cost. I'll see that he gives you up, somehow. You're all I have."

"Of course the law provides a way, but you wouldn't, couldn't, understand how I feel about divorce." The mere mention of the word was difficult, and caused Alaire to clench her hands. "We're both too shaken to talk sanely now, so let's wait—"

"There's something you must understand before we go any further," Dave insisted. "I'm poor; I haven't a thing I can call my own, so I'm not sure I have any right to take you away from all this." He turned a hostile eye upon their surroundings.

"Money means so little, and it's so easy to be happy without it," Alaire told him. "But I'm not altogether poor. Of course everything here is Ed's, but I have enough. All my life I've had everything except the very thing you offer—and how I've longed for that! How I've envied other people! Do you think I'll be allowed, somehow, to have it?"

"Yes! I've something to say about that. You gave me the right when you gave that kiss."

Alaire shook her head. "I'm not so sure. It seems easy now, while you are here, but how will it seem later? I'm in no condition at this minute to reason. Perhaps, as you say, it is all a dream; perhaps this feeling I have is just a passing frenzy."

Dave laughed softly, confidently. "It's too new yet for you to understand—but wait. It is frenzy, witchery—yes, and more. Tomorrow, and every day after, it will grow and grow and grow! Trust me, I've watched it in myself."

"So you cared for me from the very first?" Alaire questioned. It was the woman's curiosity, the woman's hunger to hear over and over again that truth which never fails to thrill and yet never fully satisfies.

"Oh, even before that, I think! When you came to my fire that evening in the chaparral, I knew every line of your face, every movement of your body, every tone of your voice, as a man knows and recognizes his ideal. But it took time for me to realize all that you meant to me."

Alaire nodded. "Yes, and it must have been the same with me." She met his eyes frankly, but when he reached toward her she held him away. "No, dear. Not yet, not again, not until we have the right. It would be better for us both if you went away now."

"No, no! Oh, I have so much to say! I've been dumb all my life, and you've just opened my lips."

"Please! After I've decided what to do—once I feel that I can control myself better—I'll send for you. But you must promise not to come until then, for you would only make it harder."

At last he took her hand and kissed her wrist, just over her pulse, as if to speed a message to her heart, then into her rosy palm he whispered a tender something that thrilled her.

She stood white, motionless, against the dim illumination of the porch until he had gone, and not until the last sound of his motor had died away did she stir. Then she pressed her own lips to the palm he had caressed and walked slowly to her room.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Crash.

The several days following Dave's unexpected call at Las Palmas Alaire spent in a delightful reverie. She had so often wrestled with the question of divorce that she had begun to weary of it. She gave up trying, at length, and for the time being rested content in the knowledge that she loved and was loved. A week passed while she hugged her thoughts to her breast, and then one evening she rode home to learn that Ed from San Antonio.

But Ed was ill, and he did not appear at dinner. It had been years since either had dared invade the other's privacy, and now, inasmuch as her husband did not send for her, Alaire did not presume to offer her services as nurse. As a matter of fact, she considered this quite unnecessary, for she felt sure that he was either suffering the customary after-effects of a visit to the city or else that he lacked the moral courage to undertake an explanation of his hurried flight from the ranch. In either event she was glad he kept to his room.

When Austin made his appearance, on the day following his return, his bleared eyes, his puffy, pasty cheeks, his shattered nerves, showed plainly enough how he had spent his time. Although he was jumpy and irritable, he seemed determined by an assumption of high spirits and exaggerated friendliness to avert criticism. Since Alaire spared him all reproaches, his efforts seemed to meet with admirable success. Now Ed's opinion of women was not high, for those with whom he habitually associated were of small intelligence; and, seeing that his wife continued to manifest a complete indifference to his past actions, he decided that his apprehensions had been groundless. If Alaire remembered the Guzman affair at all, or if she had suspected him of complicity in it, time had evidently dulled her suspicions, and he was a little sorry he had taken pains to stay away so long.

Before many days, however, he discovered that this indifference of hers was not assumed, and that in some way or other she had changed. Ed was accustomed, when he returned exhausted from a debauch, to seeing in his wife's eyes a strained misery; he had learned to expect in her bearing a sort of pitying, hopeless resignation. But this time she was not in the least depressed. On the contrary, she appeared happier, fresher, and—younger than he had seen her for a long time. It was mystifying. When, one morning, he overheard her singing in her room, he was shocked. Over this phenomenon he meditated with growing amazement and a faint stir of resentment in his breast, for he lived a self-centered life, considering himself the pivot upon which revolved all the affairs of his little world. To feel that he had lost even the power to make his wife unhappy argued that he had overestimated his importance.

At length, having sufficiently recovered his health to begin drinking again, he yielded one evening to an alcoholic impulse, and, just as Alaire bade him good night, clumsily sought to force an explanation.

"See here!" he shot at her. "What's the matter with you lately?" He saw that he had startled her, and that she made an effort to collect her wandering thoughts. "You're about as warm and wifely as a stone idol."

"Am I any different to what I have always been?"

"Humph! You haven't been exactly sympathetic of late. Here I come home sick, and you treat me like one of the help. Don't you think I have feelings? Jove! I'm lonesome."

Alaire regarded him speculatively, then shook her head as if in answer to some thought.

In an obvious and somewhat too mellow effort to be friendly, Ed continued: "Don't let's go on like this, Alaire. You blame me for going away so much, but when I'm home I feel like an interloper. You treat me like a cow-thief."

"I'm sorry. I've tried to be everything I should. I'm the interloper."

"Nonsense! If we only got along together as well as we seem to from the outside, it wouldn't be bad at all. But you're too severe. You seem to think a man should be perfect. Well, none of us are, and I'm no worse than the majority. Why, I know lots of fellows who forget themselves and do things they shouldn't, but they don't mean anything by it. They have wives and homes to go to when it's all over. But have I? You're as glad to see me as if I had smallpox. Maybe we've made a mess of things, but married life isn't what young girls think it is. A wife must learn to give and take."

"I've given. What have I taken?" she asked him in a voice that quivered.

Ed made an impatient gesture. "Oh, don't be so literal! I mean that, since we're man and wife, it's up to you to be a little more—broad-gauge in your views."

"In other words, you want me to ignore your conduct. Is that it? I'm afraid we can't argue that, Ed."

"Humph! People don't change their minds in a minute," he cried angrily. "Is there some other man?"

Now Ed Austin had no falsest idea that his wife would answer in the affirmative, for he had long ago learned to put implicit confidence in her, and her life had been so open that he could not imagine that it held a double interest. Therefore her reply struck him speechless.

"Yes, Ed," she said quietly. "There is another man."

It was like her not to evade. She had never lied to him.

Ed's mouth opened; his reddened eyes protruded. "Well—" he stammered. "Well!" Then after a moment: "Who is it, the greaser or the cowboy?" He laughed loudly, disagreeably. "It must be one or the other, for you haven't seen any men except them. Another man! Well, you're cool about it."

"I am glad you know the truth."

Muttering to himself, Ed made a short excursion around the room, then paused before his wife with a sneer on his lips. "Did it ever occur to you that I might object?" he demanded.

Alaire eyed him scornfully. "What right have you to object?"

Ed could not restrain a malevolent gleam of curiosity. "Say, who is it? Ain't I entitled to know that much?" As Alaire remained silent, he let his eyes rove over her with a kind of angry appreciation. "You're pretty enough to stampede any man," he admitted. "Yes, and you've got money, too. I'll bet it's the Ranger. Huh! We're tarred with the same stick."

"You don't really believe that," she told him, sharply.

"Why not? You've had enough opportunity. I don't see anything of you. Well, I was a fool to trust you."

Alaire's eyes were very dark and very bright as she said: "I wonder how I have managed to live with you as long as I have. I knew you were weak, nasty—so I was prepared for something like this. But I never thought you were a downright criminal until—"

"Criminal? Rot!"

"How about that Guzman affair? You can't go much lower, Ed, and you can't keep me here with you."

"I can't keep you, eh?" he growled. "Well, perhaps not. I suppose you've got enough on me to secure a divorce, but I can air some of your dirty linen. Oh, don't look like that! I mean it! Didn't you spend a night with David Law?" He leered at her unpleasantly, then followed a step as she drew back.

"Don't you touch me!" she cried.

A flush was deepening Ed's purple cheeks; his voice was peculiarly brutal and throaty as he said: "The decree isn't entered yet, and so long as you are Mrs. Austin I have rights. Yes, and I intend to exercise them. You've made me jealous, sad—" He made to encircle her with his arms, and was half successful, but when Alaire felt the heat of his breath in her face, a sick loathing sprang up within her, and, setting her back against the wall, she sent him reeling. Whether she struck him or merely pushed him away, she never knew, for during the instant of their struggle she was blind with indignation and fury. Profiting by her advantage, she dodged past him, fled to her room, and locked herself in.

She heard him muttering profanely; heard him approach her chamber more than once, then retire uncertainly, but she knew him too well to be afraid.

Later that night she wrote two letters—one to Judge Ellsworth, the other to Dave Law.

COMMUNICATIONS

Charlevoix, as all know who have ever been here, pronounce it without fear of contradiction, one of the most beautiful places in America. The city has had a slow but healthy growth, until now her fine cottages are pointed to with pride to all our visitors, but the coming into her own was through the coming of Harry L. Oldham from Illinois, here a few years since to make his home with us. He is a silent hustler. A man of means and a man who does things. Not little small, mean things as some people do in small cities, but this man Oldham does big things, great big things, and no one knows anything about it until they are accomplished and finished. His last deal was the greatest and best of all. He sold an 800 acre farm to Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Loch for the sum of $75,000, which means an expenditure of not less than $200,000 or $250,000. We Charlevoixans claim this will be worth to us an even million dollars and the straws are now blowing our way again, which means still another big deal. We are proud and just so, that we have such a man with us, and while I know that this is not a regularly authorized newspaper article, yet I trust that you will find it within your jurisdiction to give mention of it, because of your already large list of subscribers for the Grand Rapids Press, the greatest paper in Michigan, I know that our readers here will appreciate the honor thus justly given to this great man who has come among us. Last year he formed the Beaver Island Transportation Co., and installed a fine ship running daily between here and Beaver Island, commanded by Capt. Geo. Weaver, an old veteran and reliable sailor. Place him in Charlevoix county is destined to be the home of many rich retirers, as well as several points immediately adjacent to Charlevoix. With your big circulation here, Mr. Press, can you not come up here and establish a branch.

Yours truly,
VAN PELT.

WE MUST ALL PAY

Let no man, woman or child in this country, rich or poor, imagine he can escape some manner of war tax. Framers of the greatest revenue producing bills in the history of the world now being considered by Congress play no favorites. From the time you step out of bed in the morning to the moment you say your prayers at night, you will be hit right and left by the war tax collector. Whether at work or pleasure seeking, the tax will turn up to bother you. If you die during the war Uncle Sam will take from your estate. The government proposes to take $33 for each inhabitant during the first year of the war.

Your morning cup of coffee, with sugar and other breakfast dishes, will be hit by the straight 10 per cent increase in ad valorum rates of all import duties. The clothes you wear, whether of cotton, wool or what not, will be hit in the same manner. This will yield a paltry $200,000,000.

Whether you ride in a flivver or a high priced limousine, on the way to work, you will have to pay a tribute. The tax on automobiles is to be 5 per cent of the gross price of the car, assessed by the manufacturer, but presumably passed by him to the ultimate consumer. The total tax of this will be $68,000,000.

If you have been fortunate enough to pay an income tax in the past, expect to see it boosted this year. If you have previously escaped, beware lest you be hit. The exemption for bachelors is only $1,000 and for married men $2,000. The rate runs from two per cent to 50 per cent on incomes in excess of $500,000. If you own stock in a corporation or insurance company you will be taxed at a higher rate than ever before. The government wants $372,000,000 additional from individual incomes and $161,000,000 from corporations.

Beware of your bad habits, your pleasures and amusements during war time. Every time you take a drink, whether the alcholic or soft type, you pay a tax. If you take a nip of brandy or whisky you pay your portion of a tax of $2.20 a gallon. If you are moderate and indulge only in a glass of "suds" you share in the $2.75 tax on each barrel. If you are strictly temperate, look out for the two cents per gallon on pop, ginger ale, etc. The government will get $170,500,000 additional from these sources.

You may smoke a cigar after lunch. Well, the tax runs from 25 cents to $10 per 1,000. If you prefer to "roll a pill" prepare to pay as high as one cent on every 100 cigarette papers. Snuff is also taxed, the total from this source being $68,200,000.

When you go home at night you will be reminded that electric lights, gas and domestic power is taxed. If the baby is sick and you take her a bottle of soothing syrup, that will cost additional. Chewing gum for the children, perfume and cosmetics for the wife, all will pay their tribute to the war god. If you start the phonograph to sing yourself an evening lullsby, you will pay another and final tax before retiring. The government needs $1,800,000,000 more than it raised last year.

FOOD CONTROL

The House of Representatives has done its worse once again in passing the madcap food control law in its most madcap shape. Once again the members show their total lack of sense of responsibility and their reliance upon the Senate to save the country from the consequences of their recklessness.

Perhaps in one sense this wildness of the House has some advantage; it probably has a sobering effect upon even those Senators who are ordinarily inclined to run to extremes. When they have to face a state of facts, half accomplished and depending wholly upon their votes for full realization they are more likely to think twice before plunging into the maelstrom of socialistic experiment On the whole, in spite of or perhaps because of the blindfold plunge of the House, there is room for hope that the food control measure when finally passed will be much saner than its original draft—both less "drastic" and more workable.

In the meantime it is announced in that mysterious way that things are announced in Washington with no particular backer for the utterance, that the new food administration is about to reduce the price of bread from one-third to one-half "all over the United States." Prices of meat and sugar will be forced to drop along with those of bread and breadstuffs. This is good news, if true. It will make bread from one to three cents a loaf cheaper than it was before the United States went into the war. Truly we live in an age of miracles.

Every one is bursting with curiosity to know how the feat will be accomplished—especially the millers and bakers. Incidentally we observe not without amusement, that the British government's intervention in meat prices results in the sale to consumers at 32 to 48 cents of the beef and mutton which are "delivered at the quay" in London from Australia at 13 or 13 and a fraction cents the pound by private purveyors and shippers. There are some queer kinks in State socialism.

THE SPITTING HABIT

Do you thoughtlessly or intentionally spit upon the sidewalks and pavements? If so—stop it! It is a filthy and vulgar habit. Besides being a disgusting sight to every passer-by, this is one of the most prolific means of spreading disease germ. No one who has a degree of civic pride, or a right conception of "personal liberty" will indulge in this dangerous practice.

Many cities of Michigan have an anti-spitting ordinance and policemen are authorized to arrest any person who so offends public decency. The state board of health wishes to co-operate with the people of this state against this dangerous practice and will supply placards to be placed in public places, depots, street cars and other common carriers. These placards may be had for such purposes by addressing the Secretary, Lansing, Michigan.

IT WAS EVER THUS

A 35-ounce loaf of bread in France sells for eight cents; a fourteen ounce loaf in America, ten cents and more. And yet there are congressmen down in Washington who are opposed to government food control.

Whenever you find a man who insists he cannot understand why this country went to war, if you talk with him a little you will discover he is a pro-German sympathizer.

Nashua (N. H.) Telegraph—"President Saves Poor Man's Beer"—Headline. Now who will save the "poor public's" bread?

Personally, we like to listen to a lady orator, but we always quit when her hat begins slipping to one side and her hair to the other.

Everybody ought to be for the President now. He kept us out of war and got us into war. You can take your choice and make it unanimous.

The cost of living was lower in the good old days when sweethearts were satisfied with peppermint candy.

American women who can fruit and vegetables this summer will also help to can the Kaiser.

It is all right for the girls to exhibit the flag on their stockings if they keep it at half mast,

Are you still too proud to fight?

INJURIOUS STATEMENT PROVEN TO BE UNTRUE

S. Orlowski & Son Offer Reward of $50 for Name of Guilty Party

Another instance where a false and injurious statement uttered by some person or persons without regard to its truthfullness and its resultant damage to the integrity to the people involved has been circulating about the city and rural districts for the past week or so.

The statement was to the effect that S. Orlowski & Son, had been arrested and fined the sum of $500 by the State Dairy and Food Commissioner, for giving short weights and having scales in their place of business weighing under weight.

As soon as the report reached the ears of Mr. Orlowski, he at once commenced to investigate its source and being so far unable to do so, has offered a reward of $50 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who started the slanderous statements.

On page 8 of this issue is re-produced a copy of a telegram sent to the state dairy and food department in regard to the alleged arrest and conviction, and also their answer, which completely vindicates the accused parties, and shows the report to be wholly untrue and based without facts.

It is hoped that those responsible for the statement will be apprehended and made an example of.

CIRCUS COMING!

Strange sights and strange animals will be among the many things that will be unloaded when the big show trains of the Cook Brothers World's Greatest Shows arrive in Charlevoix on Saturday, July 21. This is the date of the appearance here of this well known amusement enterprise.

Long before dawn, the railroad yards will be the center of attraction for the younger generation of town and many a household will be startled from its peaceful slumbers at an unseemingly early hour by the tinkling of an alarm clock under the pillow of the small boy.

In fact a few comfortable beds will be left undisturbed throughout the entire night, their usual occupants preferring to remain awake and thus run no risk of missing the opportunity of witnessing the arrival and unloading of these great shows.

The Cook Brothers Shows for this season have an all new equipment and brand new plethora of acts, and performances in all its departments, in fact it can be truthfully said that it is an all new show.

Two complete performances will be given here during their engagement and the assurance is made that both performances will be presented without any curtailment whatever

A grand free street parade will be given at 10:30 a. m. and is worth going miles to witness, a mile long procession, the like of which you have never witnessed before containing open dens of wild beasts, gorgeous tableaux, richly robed riders, clowns and other features. Secure an advantageous location to view this long line of dazzling color and delight.

CONSUMER TO BUY FISH FROM STATE

John Baird Says He Will Try Out This Scheme Next Winter

The tip from the nation's food controller to eat fish was received with enthusiasm by State Game Warden John Baird who proposes to furnish the people of the state with a supply of fresh fish next winter at such a small cost that they will be able to make a big reduction in their household expenses if they are willing to co-operate.

Game Warden Baird says there are several inland lakes in the northern part of the state that have been regularly stocked with whitefish for the last thirty years. The whitefish is in no sense a game fish as it will not take any kind of bait. The state fish law makes it illegal to take white fish from the inland waters with either spear or net. Consequently they have multiplied during recent years to such an extent that there are tons and tons of them in some of the northern lakes.

Baird says that these lakes are not frozen over until the latter part of January and he proposes to take the whitefish from the lakes with nets. All game fish will be returned to the water. He will have the whitefish shipped to the principal cities and villages of the state and sold under the supervision of deputy game wardens. For instance, if it should cost 10 cents per pound to place the fish on sale at Grand Rapids, Lansing, Flint or Detroit or wherever they may be shipped the purchaser will be charged that amount and no more.

THINNING REQUIRED FOR GARDEN CROPS

Plants Should Be Given Plenty Of Space in Row

Nature's law of "survival of the fittest" should be applied to garden crops, horticulturists of the Michigan Agricultural college say. Rows must be thinned, they declare, by removing the weak and puny.

"If the garden crops hnve not been thinned, stnrt now," is the advice the garden men give. "Most gnrdeners sow too many seeds in the row, with the result that the plants become crowded nnd suffer from n lack of moisture, light and plant food. For this reason, n small amount of thinning is necessary, even when the seeds are carefully spaced with the seed drill. A few plnnts well spnced in the row will yield better, and produce a higher quality product, than a larger number of plants growing under erowded conditions.

"Commence to thin just ns soon as the size of the plants and the ravages of insects will permit. Bear in mind that thinning should be a process of selection, that is all weak plants should be disenrded, leavlng only the most vigorous to mature.

"The following are the distanees to which some of the most eommon vegetables should be thinned: Beets, carrots, turnips, parsnips and salsify four to six inches, depending on the soil nnd variety; rutabagas, eight inches; wnx or string beans, four inches; lima beans, twelve inches, onions, two inches; parsley, six inches; cucumbers, four plnnts to each hill, or if in rows, allow two feet between the plants in the row; melons and squashes, two strong plants to each hill.

"She talked to him just to let him know she wasn't afraid of old bachelors."

"Yes."

"And he talked to her just to let her know that he wasn't afraid of widows."

"Well?"

"Oh, they are married now."—Boston Transcript.

FAKE DRAFT NUMBERS

Somebody Is Trying to Worry The Registered Man

Somebody is evidently trying to start a sensation for profit. He must be in the newspaper business (retail.)

Last Thursday a set of numbers, purporting to be numbers drawn in the expected military draft, were sent out from Washington. The report waa wired broadcast and bulletined in the cities, but government officials branded it as a fake when it was brought to their notice.

False reports are a natural result of the silly season which usually precedes a nation's entry into war. Everybody is suffering from atage fright and their energies are scattered at loose ends in every direction. Their concentration eomes with the later period of sober second thought.

Explaining It.

DROVE THROUGH RAIN AND MUD

TRIP TO VIRGINIA FULL OF BUMPS AND THRILLS

L. K. Clark and Party Thirteen Days on tha Road—Interesting Letter

Tha following letter from L. K. Clark who with his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ford and Miss Minnie Keith left Ellsworth on June 2nd on an auto trip to their new home at Buckner, Virginia, will be of interest to their many friends here as well as to all readers of the Courier, who are interested in motoring. Evidently from the tone of Mr. Clark's letter, this is not the only part of the U. S. A. that received frequent shower baths during the last month.

Buckner, Va., June 30, 1917.

Mr. A. L. Ely,
Ellsworth, Mich.,
Friend Art:

"Well Art, as we have gotten ourselves so that we have begun to onee more feel aa if we were living and can find a spare moment now and then, I will try and write you a letter and let you know of the haps and mishaps we had while enroute to our new home in Virginia. In the first place we were about 36 hours late in arriving, according to the schedule I had made out before leaving, due to the condition of the roads and hight water. However, taking all things into consideration, I do not think we have anything to complain of. We were a little less than 10 days coming in the car and the car of household goods was on the way 15 days. Just two weeks from the time we left there we had our goods at the house here and some conglomeration it was to stand and look at, as we had four teams hauling, and of course had to let them unload to the best advantage for making next trip.

The car of goods was between 5 and 6 days coming from Toledo to Buckner via the C. H. & D. and C. & O. The balance of the time was spent on the P. M. and its is not neeessary to say more on that.

"You remember the kind of rain we left Ellsworth in? Well we had the same or worse to contend with every day of the trip. Between Traverse and Cadillac, which we made for the first night's rest, we found our first real bad roads, near Buckley. We had a spade strapped on the side of the car but found no use for it until about 5 miles of here, when we filled in a hole before attempting to cross on account of our load. We thought several times that n good sized pail would come in better play than a spade.

"First tire trouble was just out of Tustin, a blow out, within three minutes a young lad eame into sight and told us exactly what we struck and mentioned several others doing the same thing, which sounded rather suspicious to me. I did not go back to investigate, took his word for it. Pitched our tent just out of St. Johns for the second night and on our way at 6:45 the next morning making south of Toledo before pitching tent for third night. This was best mileage made during the trip, but not the most number of hours, made 179 miles.

"The fourth night we spent with some friends of mine that I had not seen for over 20 years, and put in some time looking up others before turning in for the night. This was at Wadsworth, Ohio. Had another blow out this date. Made 176 miles.

"I do not think I ever saw it rain so hard as it did at Akron, Ohio. The streets were not to be seen at all in the flats, water from gutter to gutter. The thing that saved the bacon in northern Ohio was that nenrly every mile was paved, either brick or cement.

Had the third blow out at Youngstown, Ohio, which caused some delay Please note that all this tire trouble was with the same tire and when we nrrived here we had Michigan hot air in three of the tubes.

We intended tying up for the fifth night near Beaver Falls, Pa., but found that night driving was so much finer than day time, we decided on continuing on to Pittsburg. Say, that was some sight all the way from Beaver Falls up to Pittsburg. If you ever make that trip arrange to do it after night. It reminded me of looking over in that warmer place we have read so much and had preached to us about so much. Say, Art, right there I decided on a straighter path. You have read "Dante's Hell Up to Dnte" or some of that line? Well this was about what you would imagine those to be. Nothing but fire for nll those miles.

"Made 176 miles again this day and was compelled to stop on the mountain side on account of big rain and hail storm. Managed to creep nlong until we were alongsode of some buildings and stopped there In case anything should happen, we would be near some house If we should need any help. In the morning, when it got light enough, we looked out and found we had camped along side of an old deserted church and cemetery. No farm house in sight nt all.

"The next night we spent in the Alleghany Mountains, making two there, showing we were not crowding time any along there. Found the roads over the mountains and down the Shenandoah Valley to he of the finest Macndnm and must say the state of Pennsylvnnia certainly take eare of their end of the link.

"The next night we stopped at n fnrm house, as the ground was too damp to pitch camp. Only covered 113 miles this day. At 5:00 p. m. we were on the summit of the Blue Ridge, also in a hard rain and found the worst driving we had found so far coming down on this side, as roads were quite slick and some twists in them.

"The next evening about 6:30 we had another blow out and as the roads were rather treacherous and we had no chains and about 9 miles to next town, we again tied up at a farm house.

"Sunday afternoon about 3 o'clock we encountered our first good mud hole. After spending about 30 minutes getting things in shape to jack up the car and back out, another party came along and tied their rope to us and helped us to get out. After backing up the road for about half of a mile we, both cars, circled out through a field and after burning enough gas to run half a day, we managed to get out of it and onto the road again.

"The worst was to come. After going about a mile we were told to not attempt crossing a river ahead on account of back water. Well Mr. Barrett of Newport News thought they could make it and shot into the water. After going a few feet they died and the ladies had to crawl out on a two by four to the fence and hoof it back. The best of it was that it cost him $8 to get towed back to land.

"The two car loads, ten of us, went back to a farm house and stayed there till about five o'clock the next day. It was bad enough then, as the water ran in the car when we passed through it. Had I known it was that deep would not have attempted it, still we got through all safe.

That evening about 8:30 we met a friend from Richmond in a Ford, no lights, who had run head-on into a pile of cross ties at the side of the road. He told me to turn and go back to Mineral for the night, but as were only about 8 or 9 miles from our destination, we thought we would come on. Found out the next morning that he had stripped the gears on his new Chalmers in crossing a bridge. When we got to it we pulled up along side of the road and waited for daylight so we could repair the damaged road so we could go on our way.

"We got to Frederick Hall that forenoon and stayed there till Wednesday afternoon, as the people living in the house were to move that morning. That put us to our new home on the 13th, which we figure as one of our lucky times and dates. Found everything doing fine, considering the wet spring they have had here. Our first meal was made up chiefly of fresh garden truck from the garden here.

"I feel as if I had been here about two months instead of only two weeks. We certainly have been on the jump getting things straightened in the house as well as keeping things moving on the outside. We are pretty well caught up on work now and feel that we can stop and take a good breath now and then.

"The first planting of corn, some 20 acres is now standing about four feet high and looking fine. Could just get a good view of the mules backs as they went through it yesterday. Cut part of the oats yesterday and expect to get into the rye and wheat first of the week. Hauled in our first cutting of alfalfa last Monday. Was several days late but could not get into it sooner.

"Have been having fresh berries now for the past week and had our first ripe peach last Sunday. How does that sound to you? Expect to dig our early potatoes in a week or so—only about an acre of these. I planted an acre of beans and about half an acre of potatoes yesterday. Green tomatoes large enough to fry, if you like them that way. That melon patch I told you about is doing fine, so watch the mails.

"We went down in the woods the other day and cut a 56 foot flag pole and are planning on a pole raising soon now, and as you are manager of the Ellsworth Citizens Band, I wish you would take it up with them at the next meeting and see what they can furnish the music for, for the occasion? Well Art I see I have knocked off three pages of this so until I see if it is a knock out, I will not prolong the agony any longer. All hands join in sending their very best regards and nothing would please us better than to have a long letter from you.

"Remember me to all the boys, as ever,

"L. K. CLARK,"

"P. S.—I forgot to mention that our average was not near so good as we made last fall when we went to Kentucky. Then it was 16 1-2 miles to a gallon and this trip was only about 14 miles. Total miles this trip was about 1160. We were only about four hours behind the hail storm that hit Haggerstown, Md., that was the night we spent near the old church. Haggerstown looked like something had hit it all right, as all the glass was out of nearly every house on the one side. Hail there 3 1-2 inches in diameter. That is about as thick as the ice they put up here last winter. Only had one freeze at that to make ice.

IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if Kidneys feel like lead or Bladder bothers you—Meat forms uric acid.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

STATE LAW IS NOT CLEAR

CADET SCHOOL REGULATIONS RATHER AMBIGUOUS

Does Not Specify Course, Time Nor Credits—Two Systems of Drill Now In Vogue

While the Michigan legislature passed a law requiring every city of 5,000 or over to institute military training in its schools upon request of 25 or more of the male students, the law lays down no course of instruction in military science and does not specify the amount of time that shall be alloted to it nor the credits that shall be allowed.

The manner in which arms and equipment can be obtained is the first question which arises in each school where military training is required. Under the federal act of June 3, 1916, provision is made for supplying schools which offer military training as an elective subject, put it on the same basis as to lates, absentees, failures to pass, etc., requires that where entered upon by a student it shall be a requisite for graduation or promotion unless such a student is excused for physical disability, provides an instructor qualified to teach the course where on army officer is not available and enroll at least 100 physically fit male students over 14 years of age and see that they are uniformed. An average of at least three hours a week must then be alloted to the course as prescribed by the secretary of war.

Where there are not 100 students available, under the act of July 2, 1914, the board must enroll 10 between 14 and 18 years of age, see that they are uniformed and make application to the adjutant general of the state and be passed by the state inspection officer. They must then adopt the junior marksman course of the National Rifle Association and make their application to the chief of ordnance for arms.

Two systems of military training are best known in this country, the Swiss system preparatory to the well known Swiss plan of universal military service and the Wyoming plan, out of which has evolved the High School Volunteers of the United States.

Swiss System

In Switzerland calistchnie exercises for the younger students are directed by federal instructors while voluntary cadet corps of boys 11 to 15 years of age practice the manual of arms, marching, drills, setting up exercises and such other work as is done without firearms. Each of the cadet corps is distinctively uniformed. At 16 each school boy is furnished by the government with a light musket, and to all reaching a certain standard of marksmanship. More formal organizations than the cadet corps and regular army muskets are available for the boys past sixteen and marksmanship and gymnastics are stressed. Sunday afternoons are set aside for target practice.

Much has been written of the Swiss system of military training beyond the school age, taking a certain number of days each year up to the age of 39.

Of the Swiss who take the examination for admission to the army but four per cent are permanently rejected and 22 1-2 per cent are rejected for one year for insufficient heighth, shortage in chest measurement, or other defect which a year of special physical training will overcome.

The Wyoming plan worked out in our own country by Capt. Edgar Z. Steever of the United States army, provides for three hours a week for military classes, two of them on school time and the third after school. Exercises by competitive teams or regiments in wall scaling, wigwagging, signalling, wireless telegraphy, and drills are the spice of the plan. Already 20,000 high school boys have been interested in the work as outlined by Steever, who has introduced in Chicago, Denver, Kansas City, Rockford, Elgin, and scores of other western and middle eastern cities.

System Adopted Now

Under the Steever plan, the boys elect their squad leaders. Under the federal law the president may detail not more than 300 officers as professors of military science at institutions where cadet corps are located. The rules and orders for the governing of the corps are made by the officer detailed for instruction, and appointment of cadet officers is from junior and senior classes of the institution.

The course approved by the secretary of war follows: Close and extended order competitive drill; target designation, fire control and fire direction, administration, troop leadership competitions, map maneuvers, indoor target practice, competitive field firing, wall scaling, formal indoor cadet show, competitive reviews, competitive field maneuvers, camping and cooking, marching, personal and camp hygiene, lectures, cavalry, field artillery, tactical exercises.

NEW FREEZER IS INSTALLED

MACHINE DOES EVERYTHING AND IS MOST SANITARY

Cream Shipping Business Exceeds Expectations—Local Depot Fifth in Territory

The Charlevoix Ice Cream Co. has a brand new Progress Brine Freezer made by the Dairy Machine Construction Company, of Shelton, Connecticut.

This is considered one of the most sanitary machines on the market and is the only vertical type brine freezer in Northern Michigan. The ice does not come in contact with the freezing cylinder at all. Salt brine flows between an outer and an inner casing and the cream forms like n frost on the inside of the freezing cylinder at a temperature of 12 degreese above zero Fahrenheit, and is scraped off by revolving paddles. The handling is entirely mechanical, and there is no opportunity for impurities to get into the cream.

The capacity of the freezer is nbout 50 gnllons per hour. Anyone interested in seeing this machine work is invited to call at the factory and Mr. Lamphear, or one of his assistants will be glad to, explain it. The management's aim is to have everything sanitary and up-to-date as possible.

As was stated in a previous article, Mr. Lamphenr is now local buycr of cream for Swift & Co.'s Cadillac branch. Although the Charlevoix station has only been in operation since the 18th day of May last, Swift & Company's recent report to its buyers as to the relative standing of its many Michigan depots showed the Charlevoix depot holding fifth place in the line. This would indicate that the farmers of this locality nre well pleased with the service which Mr. Lnmphear is giving them. They get accurate tests and weights and are paid cash for their product on its delivery at the factory on Clinton street.

THEATRICAL.

THEATRICAL

Clara Kimball Young, the screen star supreme, will appear in her second Selznick Pictures offering, an adaptation of "The Foolish Virgin," Thomas Dixon's striking novel at the Mnjestic Theatre on Monday, July 16.

This production is expected to prove n worthy successor to Miss Young's first venture nt the head of her own producing company, "The Common Law," the story offering even greater opportunities in intense dramatic situations than did Robert W. Chamber's novel.

In "The Foolish Virgin" Miss Young will be seen in the role of the girl whose ideas of life are confused with the romnntic stories of the days of chivalry which she is fond of reading. Knowing nothing of renlities, the heroine is deceived into marrying n man who turns out to be a criminal. The girl exerts her influence toward the redemption of the man she loves and it is during this process of chnracter building that the tense dramatic scenes in which the story abounds develop.

As in the "Common Law" Miss Young has been aided in making the production a splendid example of motion picture art by the masterly direction of Albert Capellani, her director general, and the presence of a superlative cnst of immensely popular motion picture players. Conway Tearle, who made such a decided hit in the role opposite Miss Young in "The Common Law," will be seen to particular advantage in the leading male part of the new production and Paul Capellani, who has been seen in a number of Miss Young's greatest pictures, also has a strong role. Others in the cast are Catherine Proctor, Sheridan Tansey, the remarkably able boy actor, William Welsh, Marie Lines, Agnes Mapes, Edward Elkas, and little Jacqueline Morhange.

RUSSIA MAKES GREAT ADVANCE

PROGRESS OF THE WAR UP TO PRESENT TIME

Little Change on the West Front—America's Food Embargo—Numerous Peace Rumors

The one overshadowing event of the last week has been Russia's revival as a military force. Perhaps "illuminating" would be a better word than overshadowing, for instead of casting a shadow it lights up the entire situation with new hope.

A week ago the Russian offeasive had just begun. It was too early even to be sure whether it had begun in earnest or whether it was only a sporadic effort. But now it is clear that the Russians are at work in earnest. The Russians have always distinguished themselves by the number of prisoners taken, and again they ran true to form this time, capturing 18,000 men and a score of guns in the first two days. A number of points of local stragetic importnnce were taken.

After the first rush there was n lull in thut region, probably due to the necessity of "consolidating" the captured ground and bringing up supplies, which is a difficult matter in that region. Then suddenly a new attack was launched about 175 miles to the north near Pinsk. No details of this attack are known as yet, but the Russians report their artillery as "leveling everything;" and an infantry assault with doubtless follow.

On the west front the Germans have made several powerful counter attacks, along the "Ladies' Rond" attacks, the strongest being near Verdun and nlong the "Ladies' Road" in the Champagne country. At the former point the Germans gained only a few small front attaeks which was on a gigantic scale along a 12-mile front, the Germans gained absolutely nothing, the French holding every yard of their positions like a stone wall. The British made slight local gains on their portion of the front, and very recently the French captured some points of considerable local value in the enemy's line near Verdun.

The general character of the fighting on the west front is unchanged. It is a slow and intermittent, but unfailing ndvnnce by the allies. Every time there is a movement, the allies advance and the Germans fall back. Sometimes the Germans hold their ground, sometimes they yield only a little, sometimes they even capture a few trenches temporarily, but they never make a gain nnd hold it. Not once since February, 1916, have the German armies scored an advance, nor have the allies once failed to hold any important captured ground.

This aspect of the fighting is very strikingly brought out in recent official figures regurding captured nrtillery. Since the beginning of the wnr the British have captured 739 German field pieces. During the same period their total net loss has been 96 guns nnd out of these 96 no less than 84 were lost during those terrible weeks at the very opening of the war when Englnnd had scarcely begun to fight. Since then, only 12 British guns have been lost. Not one single British gun has been lost for two years and three months—not since April, 1915!

The submarine cnmpaign has slaekened somewhat, the losses up to last Wednesday being down once more to the average of a month ago. British experts are optimistic; Washington is much less so. The decrease may be accounted for by the fact thnt a very large number of submarines were far out at sea looking for the American transports, instead of infesting British waters. Notwithstanding the fnct that our imports and exports are greater than ever before, the submarine menace is a dendly one still. It will be difficult to win the war if it keeps up at the present rate; it will be still harder to win if it increases.

Of immense importnnce is the decree just issued by President Wilson forbidding all exports of foods nnd other articles of military importance except under iron-clad regulntion. The prohibition is nbsolute, and it extends to every country on the globe, whether ally, enemy, or nuetral. Henceforth not a bag of wheat, a ton of conl, or a bnr of iron can leave America without the permission of the secretary of commerce.

It is the trade with neutrals thnt this decree will hit with pnrnlyzing force. Of course there will be no exports to enemy countries, and there will he little curtailment of trade with our allies. But we may expect to see Holland, Denmark, Norwny and Sweden put in the "bread line." They must step up to Uncle Sam, present their tickets, and prove to his satisfaction that they nctually have eaten their last loaf of bread before they can get a fresh lonf.

Hitherto these neutral countries have been nothing but funnels thru which food and supplies hnve been pourqd into Germany. It did not all go through unchanged, but the effect was the same. Grnin, feed, nnd fodder imported hy neutrnls wns transformed into pork, beef, nnd dairy products and these got to Germany. Dutchmen, Danes, Swedes and Norwegians found it highly profitahle to feed Germany, and to take German manufactured goods in payment—thereby also helping to keep German factories running. This stream will now be choked off. It is to be hoped that it will be a thorough job. These neutrals should be allowed just enough to keep them alive, and that is all. They should even be compelled to use up their existing stocks of food and live stock; otherwise Germany would be tempted to seize these supplies.

It is a strange, anomalous situation that we are in—a situation wherein we undertake to regulate the food of the entire world, and wherein we are compelled to virtually dominate neutral nations. But we are compelled to—absolutely compelled to. Neutrals that are useful to Germany have no claim to any consideration. They have a right to live, and that is all. We ought not to force them to fight, but that is the extent of our moral duty. They may consider themselves fortunate if we allow them anything whatever, for we are under no obligations to trade with them nt all. If they want to share our advantages, let them come into the war and share our dangers and our sufferiags too. This is not merely our war; it is the world's war and the nation that eleets to stay out of the fight and make money out of the wsr, need not expect no favors.

Again there are sensational rumors about peace terms from Germany. Dispatches indicate that important political reforms are impending, and some sort of peace proposal from Berlin is expected at any time. It is to be hoped that few persons will be disturbed by any such machinations. To listen would only invite dishonor and disaster. We want no half-way peace; we want nothing but victory. If Germany's proposal is anything short of complete surrender, it is a fraud and must be rejected. Any such proposal would he a fraud because it would not be offered honestly, but

The plans contemplate a thoroughly up-to-dnte completely equipped hospital in every respect. Besides a large general ward, there will be seven private rooms with bath and quarters for the nurses. The floors will be hnrdwood throughout and the interior woodwork will be enameled white. Nothing has given us more pleasure in a long time than to be able to record the fact that a hospital for Charlevoix is assured. It is impossible to estimate the benefit tbat such an institution can bestow, not only in taking care of actual cases of sickness and accident, but along the lines of preventive work and general public health.

All subscribers who have not paid up and others who wish to help in the good work are urged to make remittance at once to Mr. Oldham, the treasurer.

SWIPE RICHARDI'S WIRE

CLEVER THIEVES DISPOSE OF COPPER "SWAG"

"Happy" Put in Bellaire Coop, Was To be the "Fence"—Entire Gang, But One, Caught

Last week, sheriff Novak received a telephone call from the authorities at Traverse City, stating that they had located two men, who had in their possession a large quantity of copper wire and that they had also notified sheriff Kettle, of Antrim county, at Bellaire, to be on the lookout for them.

Novak at once started to make inquiry concerning the ownership of the wire. Taking "Colonel" A. J. Hamilton with him in his car, the sheriff went out to the strip of woods running south from Jay Arams' place to a point near the Van Zant farm on the Ellsworth road. There they entered the woods and found that nbout a quarter of a mile of the feed wire leading from the Bellaire plant had been "snitched" and so clever were the theives that hot a trace of the theft could be noticed from either the Ellsworth road or the one that runs psst Adams' place. His discovery encouraged the sheriff to dig deeper into the mystery and it wasn't long before they came upon another stretch where the wire had been taken from the polcs, just north of the Central Lake school house and, as in the first instance, completely screened from sight by trees.

Novak at once left for Traverse City and started an investigation at a local junk shop, where it developed the theives had disposed of two lots of the wire—one amounting to $77 and the other to $56. Meanwhile a trap was set for the culprits and on Friday afternoon one of them, accompanied by his "fence," entered the woods near Central Lake nnd were caught by a police officer from Bellaire in the act of unearthfrom Traverse City in the act of unearthing about 365 pounds of the wire from the "cache" where it lay hidden. The policeman covered them with his gun and took them into custody. The two proved to be Clarence Bearss of Alden, and William ("Happy") Tando, our own cheerful "junk magnate" of 107 Belvedere avenue, who was about to receive the stolen wire from the gang.

Then the whole seamy business came to light. Four other Alden people nre implicated. Weldon Resner and his wife, together with Clnrence Bearss, had been operating the gnme at the Charlevoix county end of the line and Ole Dewey and Geo. Parks, also of Alden together with two men from Buffalo, N. Y. who were arrested Tuesday afternoon—and who had been doing the work in Antrim county. All the offenders are now in the Bellaire jail with the exception of Parks, who could not be located, and Tando, who had not completed his purchase of the wire when arrested. The greatest share of the credit belongs to sheriff Novak who discovered the theft and was most instrumental in tracing it to its source and bringing the offenders to justice. Prosecutions will undoubtedly follow.

While in Traverse City on his search for the stolen wire, he discovered, among a lot of other junk, two lubricators which, it developed, had been recently stolen from the Charlevoix Lumber Company and sold hy one of our Charlevoix dealers to the Traverse City concern in whose possession they were found. When confronted with the evidence, on the sheriff's return to Charlevoix, this local man stoutly denied having nnything to do with the stolen brasses, although the case against him is conclusive, nnd later reports state that he has admitted buying the stolen goods and shipping them to Trnverse City.

STATE GAME WARDEN WILL ENFORCE LAW

Fish Ladders for All Streams Says David R. Jones

The attention of the state game warden's department baa been directed to the fact that the law requiring the plscing of fish ladders at dams has not been observed in a great many instances and Warden John Baird says that hereafter no excuses will be accepted.

Chief Deputy David Jones, of Petoskey, has been instructed to order fish ladders placed at the various dams where chutes have not been installed and the ladders that are out of commission must be repaired at onco. As a result of this campaign it is expected that fishing in many localities will be greatly improved. Michigan's game fish seek the headwatera of its stream in the spawning season and when blocked by the dams without fish chutes they congregate in great numbers at the foot of the dam, and thousands, heavy with spawn, are taken with nets or thru other illegal fishing, while the upper stretches of the rivers which should be just as good fishing in season us the territory below the dams are nearly barren.

Inspectors will go through the country in the next few months and exnmine all roads which the rural carriers travel nnd whenever the conditions of the roads is found bad, rontes will be discontinued. Ronds which show neglect will he more apt to he condemned than those which have been put into first class conditlon.

HOW THE DRAFT WILL BE MADE

WILL NOT BEGIN DRAWING UNTIL NEXT WEEK

What is Done After the Draft is Complete—Estimated That One Man in Four Must Go

The leading topic under discussion is when and how the drawing for military service will take place and in what manner it will be done. It must be remembered that this first drawing probably will not be the only one. There is likely to be another and perhaps a third, in each case the names of all registered will be used and such additions as age increase may augument or lessen it, but these will be few. It may be that all the numbers will be drawn and the men required to report for duty in the order of the drawing.

The method of drawing is a simple one and provides a fair way in which to make the selection. The men in every registration district in the United States are numbered from one upward. The drawing will be made in Washington in presence of a committee formed to see that all is fairly done. As the numbers are drawn they will be telegraphed to local boards, who will post them, and they will be published in all newspapers.

This is the method of drawing: A number is taken from a box or other receptacle. If that number is 1, every man bearing it, in every district in the United States will be drawn and so on for all other numbers. Should a higher number, as 4,000 or greater, he drawn, it will include only men of that number in such districts as have 4,000 or more enrolled names The larger the enrolled number the greater the chance of drawing from such districts. Each number drawn will represent about 4,000 men and the total number of districts in the enuntry.

Exemptions are to be determined by the local bonrds only for the previously announced specified causes, such as responsibility for the support of relatives, and not for agricultural or industrial reasons. Seven days after designations are posted will be allowed for filing claims. Then there will be an additional ten days for filing proofs, and the hoard must decide within three days after such proof is filed. When the case of any registrant has been disposed of so far as the local board is concerned, the names of those not exeepted nor discharged will be posted. Claims for exemption for agricultural or industrial work must be made within five days after such posting and must go directly to the higher board sitting for the judicial district. Appeals from the ruling of the local boards must be made to the higher board within ten days.

September 1 has been tentatively considered as the date for assembling the first 500,000 men in cantonments for training.

Unless a shift is made in present arrangements this is the method of the draft lottery:

Squares of papers numbered serially will be placed in gelatine capsules. These will he thrown into a big transparent globe. On the day of the draft capsules will be drawn at random from the globe. Each slip indicates for draft every man bearing that number in each of the more than four thousand counties and cities in the country.

President Wilson himself has given consideration to the various plans for the drawing. It has not been fully decided whether the first drawing shall cover only enough men for the first levy or the entire 9,610,938 registered. In case the latter is done the number of every man registered will be listed in order as drawn and this list will staud for future levies, the second draft to begin at the numher in each district where first draft ended.

Draft drawing will not only determine what men are to be called at once but will show the order in which others registered are to he liable for service in formation of later new armies.

Exemptions are not permanent unless cause is permanent. In other words, a man exempted on the first call may he liable to service at the second call.

Drawing will take place probably the week of July 23.

As each number is drawn approximately 4,000 men will be conscripted or one for each registration district.

The men or draft age will be responsible for ascertaining whether they are drawn. The war department aska that in the next few weeks they be alert, scanning the newspaper announcements of the draft requirements and when in douht ask their local boards.

In brief, this is what each registrant is required to do:

Go to your exemption board and find out what your serial number is as soon as your board has finished numbering the cards for the drawing. This work has been completed in Charlevoix county.

Watch for the drawing in Washington. Then find out whether you were drawn and the order in which you must appear.

After thnt learn when you must appear for physical examination. This date and place will appear in the newspapers.

In case of douht ns to any point, ask your local board about it.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes any one look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside-bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

AMONG THE PLAYERS AND CADDIES

(A column edited by the Caddie master for the purpose of sharpening the caddies' interest in their work and keeping parents in touch with those in charge of the boys at the golf grounds.)

The time for the boys to begin depositing money in the bank is NOW. The club's ruling that the pass book at the end of the season must show that deposits have been made regularly through the season, preferably weekly, if the account is to be allowed its ten per cent. Parents, see that the boys' begin now. Also, let them bank their own money. One of the purposes of the savings prizes is to acquaint the boy with the bank as an institution in which to save his money. He will not learn much about it if others do his banking.

Some of the boys who have trouble getting through the village and past the stands with their day's earnings have tried the experiment of depositing what they earn each day with the caddie master and taking from him a signed voucher for the smount. At the end of the week they presented their vouchers and took home their week's earnings in a lump. The experiment worked well, nnd the caddie master wises to announce that he is very anxious to help boys in this way whereever he can. He suggests that tbe boys who wish to take advantage of this scheme draw out their earnings on Saturdays at noon and bank them on tha way home or at somo time before three o'clock that day. Money left with the caddie master in this plan cannot be drawn out ordinarily until the end of the week.

The caddie house will be open from 7:00 to 8:30 esch morning, from 11:00 to 12:30 at noon and from 3:00 on each afternoon. The boys who bring lunches and wish to leave them, or anything else, in the house should report before 8:30. These measures are taken that things left in the caddie house will be there when the owner's return. The drinking water is to be piped outside the building for greater convenience.

The sesson, which has been so slow to arrive at the golf grounds, seems to be coming now. We are glad to tako experienced caddies back on the job and just as glad to welcome new boys, so long as they mean business—in other words, so long as they are punctual, attentive and obedient.

SAGE AND SULPHUR DARKENS GRAY HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Restore Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Report of Charlevoix Auxiliary to Michigan Chapter American Red Cross

The Charlevoix Red Cross was organized May 12th, 1917, at a meeting in Oddfellows Hall with about thirty people present. Mrs. Harry Nicholls was elected chairman. Some plans were made for conducting the work and Capt. and Mrs. Wilbur kindly offered the use of their building which we occupied until July 8th when we moved to our present quarters in the Masonic Temple which was also generously offered us by the Masonic order free of charge. We have a Surgical Dressing class on Monday and Thursday afternoons, under the instruction of Mrs. Henry X. Strauss, of Chicago, who is a certified Red Cross teacher. These classes are well attended and a number of gauze bandgaes and compresses have already been made.

Charlevoix county plans to furnish supplies for one-quarter of a hospital unit which is quite nn undertaking. One shipment of this work has already been sent to county headquarters at East Jordan. We are most ably helped and directed in this branch of the work by Mrs. Ella Schwab, of St. Louis. The ladies of the Belvedere have organized a branch under the management of Mrs. W. H. Miller and are effectually aiding us in completing the lists of work assigned to us. There is in connection with the Red Cross work, n class in Home Nursing and Sanitation, conducted by Miss Belle Greensfelder of Chicago, in the Domestic Science room of Charlevoix high school. We have in Charlevoix one hundred and eighty-eight members at the present time. Instructions are on hand from State Headquarters that our county membership must be increased, and the month of July has been designated for that purpose.

This means much extra work for the officers and committee. Will you not help us in this? Those wishing to become members should hand in their own names and any other name they can secure, with one dollar annusl dues for each person to the secretary or other officers or to Mrs. J. L. Cranc, chairmnn of the membership committee. Becoming a member of the Red Cross enrries with it no further obligation than what is voluntarily assumed; however, there is much to be done, and all who can give of their time should take this opportunity to help their country in her hour of need. If you cannot give your time, help with your dollar.

Rosa Nettleton, Secretary.
Mabel W. Nicholls, Chairman.

The officers for Charlevoix are as follows:

On the county board of directors—Mr. A. F. Bridge, Rev. C. E. Taggart, Mr. J. L. Crane, Dr. R. B. Armstrong, Mrs. W. H. Miller, Mrs. D. C. Nettleton.

HEART of the SUNSET

By REX BEACH

Author of "The Spoilers," "The Iron Trail," "The Silver Horde," Etc.

Jose Sanchez rode to the Morales house feeling some concern over the summons that took him thither. He wondered what could have induced General Longorio to forsake his many important duties in order to make the long trip from Nuevo Pachlo; surely it could be due to no lack of zeal on his (Jose's) part. No! The horse-breaker flattered himself that he had made a very good spy indeed; that he had been Longorio's eyes and ears so far as circumstances permitted. Nor did he feel that he had been lax in making his reports, for through Rosa he had written the general several lengthy letters, and just for good measure these two had conjured up sundry imaginary happenings to prove beyond doubt that Senora Anstin was miserably unhappy with her husband, and ready to welcome such a dashing lover as Longorio. Therefore Jose could not for the life of him imagine wherein he had been remiss. Nevertheless, he was uneasy, and he hoped that nothing had occurred to anger his general.

But Longorio, when he arrived at the meeting-place, was not in a bad humor. Having sent Rosa away on some errand, he turned to Jose with a flashing smile, and said:

"Well, my good friend, the time has come."

Now Jose had no faintest idea what the general was talking about, but to be called the good friend of so illustrious a person was flattering. He nodded decisively.

"Yes, beyond doubt," he agreed.

The general laid an affectionate hand upon Jose's shoulder. "The first time I saw you I said: 'There's a boy after my own heart. I shall learn to love that Jose, and I shall put him in the way of his fortune.' Well, I have not changed my mind, and the time is come. You are going to help me and I am going to help you."

Jose Sanchez thrilled with elation from head to foot. This promised to be the greatest day of his life, and he felt that he must be dreaming.

"You haven't tired of Rosa, eh? You still wish to marry her?" Longorio was inquiring.

"Yes. But of course I am a poor man."

"Just so. I shall attend to that. Now we come to the object of my visit, Jose. I proposed to make you rich enough in one day so that you can marry."

"But first, wait!" exclaimed the horse-breaker. "I bring you something of value, too." Desiring to render favor for favor, and to show that he was fully deserving of the general's generosity, Jose removed from inside the sweatband of his hat a sealed, stamped letter, which he handed to his employer. "Yesterday I carried the mail to town, but as I rode away from Las Palmas the senora handed me this, with a silver dollar for myself. Look! It is written to the man we both hate."

Longorio took the letter, read the inscription, and then opened the envelope. Jose looked on with pleasure while he spelled out the contents.

When the general had finished reading, he exclaimed: "Ho! A miracle! Now I know all that I wish to know."

"Then I did well to steal the letter, eh?"

"Diablo! Yes! That brute of a husband makes my angel's life unbearable, and she flees to La Feria to be rid of him. Good! It fits in with my plans. She will be surprised to see me there. Then, when the war comes, and all is chaos—then what? I'll warrant I can make her forget certain things and certain people." Longorio nodded with satisfaction. "You did very well, Jose."

The latter leaned forward, his eyes bright. "That lady is rich. A fine prize, truly. She would bring a huge ransom."

This remark brought a smile to Longorio's face. "My dear friend, you do not in the least understand," he said. "Ransom! What an idea!" He lost himself in meditation, then, rousing, spoke briskly: "Listen! In two, three days your senora will leave Las Palmas. When she is gone you will perform your work, like the brave man I know you to be. You will relieve her of her husband."

Jose hesitated, and the smile vanished from his face. "Senor Ed is not a bad man. He likes me; he—" Longorio's gaze altered and Jose fell silent.

"Come! You are not losing heart, eh? Have I not promised to make you a rich man? Well, the time has arrived." Seeing that Jose still manifested no eagerness, the general went on in a different tone: "Do not think that you can withdraw from our little arrangement. Oh, no! Do you remember a promise I made to you when you came to me in Romero? I said that if you played me false I would bury you to the neck in an ant-hill and fill your mouth with honey. I keep my promises."

Jose's struggle was brief; he promptly resigned himself to the inevitable. With every evidence of sincerity he assured Longorio of his loyalty, and he affect the least intention of betraying his general's confidence. After all, the gringos were enemies, and there was no one of them who did not merit destruction.

Pleased with these sentiments, and feeling sufficiently assured that Jose was now really in the proper frame of mind to suit his purpose, Longorio took the winding trail back toward Saogre de Cristo.

CHAPTER XVII.

A Warning.

A few days after she had written to Judge Ellsworth Alaire followed her letter in person, for, having at last decided to divorce Ed, she acted with characteristic decision. Since Ellsworth had more than once advised this very course, she went to Brownsville, enlisting his willing support. She had written Dave Law, telling him that she intended to go to La Feria, there to remain pending the hearing of her suit. To be sure, she would have preferred some place of refuge other than La Feria, but she reasoned that there she would at least be undisturbed, and that Ed, even if he wished to effect a reconciliation, would not dare to follow her, since he was persona non grata in federal Mexico.

She had counted upon seeing Dave during her stay in Brownsville, and her failure to do so was a grave disappointment as she knew that he was in town attending court. Yet she told herself that it was brave of him to obey her injunctions so literally and to leave her unembarrassed by his presence at this particular time. It inspired her to be equally brave and to wait patiently for the day when she could welcome him with clean hands and a soul unashamed.

In the midst of Alaire's uncertainty of mind it gratified her to realize that Dave alone would know of her whereabouts. She wondered if he would come to see her. He was a reckless, headstrong lover, and his desires were all too likely to overcome his deliberate resolves. She rather hoped that in spite of his promise he would venture to cross the border so that she could see and be near him, if only for a day or for an hour. The possibility frightened and yet pleased her. The conventional woman within her frowned, but her outlaw heart beat fast at the thought.

Alaire did not explain her plans even to Dolores, but when her preparations were complete she took the Mexican woman with her, and during Ed's absence slipped away from the ranch. Boarding the train at Jonesville, she was in Pueblo that night.

It seemed at last that war with Mexico was imminent. After months of uncertainty the question had come to issue, and that lowering cloud which had hung above the horizon took ominous shape and size. Ellsworth awoke one morning to learn that an ultimatum had gone forth to President Potosi; that the Atlantic fleet had been ordered south; and that marines were being rushed aboard transports pending a general army mobilization. It looked as if the United States had finally risen in wrath, and as if nothing less than a miracle could now avert the long-expected conflict.

Blaze Jones took the San Antonio paper out upon the porch and composed himself in the hammock to gain the latest war news. Invasion! Troops! The Stars and Stripes! Those were words that stirred Jones deeply and caused him to neglect his work. Now that his country had fully awakened to the necessity of a war with Mexico—a necessity he had long felt—he was fired with the loftiest patriotism and a youthful eagerness to enlist. Blaze realized that he was old and fat and near-sighted; but what of that? He could fight. Fighting, in fact, had been one of his earliest accomplishments, and he prided himself upon knowing as much about it as any man could learn. He believed in fighting both as a principle and as an exercise; in fact, he attributed his good health to his various neighborly "unpleasantnesses," and he had more than once argued that no great fighter ever died of a sluggish liver or of any one of the other ills that beset sedentary, peace-loving people. Nations were like men—too much ease made them flabby. And Blaze had his own ideas of strategy, too. So during the perusal of his paper he bemoaned the mistakes his government was making. Why waste time with ultimatums? he argued to himself. He had never done so. Experience had taught him that the way to win a battle was to beat the other fellow to the draw; hence this diplomatic procrastination filled him with impatience. It seemed almost treasonable to one of Blaze's intense patriotism.

"Then I Did Well to Steal That Letter, Eh?"

He was engaged in laying out a plan of campaign for the United States when he became conscious of voices behind him, and realized that for some time Paloma had been entertaining a caller in the front room. Their conversation had not disturbed him at first, but now an occasional word or sentence forced its meaning through his preoccupation, and he found himself listening.

Paloma's visitor was a woman, and as Blaze harkened to her voice, he felt his heart sink. It was Mrs. Strange. She was here again. With difficulty Blaze conquered an impulse to flee, for she was recounting a story all too familiar to him.

"Why, it seemed as if the whole city of Galveston was there, and yet nobody offered to help us," the dressmaker was saying. "Phil was a perfect here, for the ruffian was twice his size. Oh, it was an awful fight! I hate to think of it."

"What made him pinch you?" Paloma inquired.

"Heaven only knows. Some men are dreadful that way. Why, he left a black-and-blue mark!"

Blaze broke into a cold sweat and cursed feebly under his breath.

"He wasn't drunk, either. He was just naturally depraved. You could see it in his face."

"How did you escape?"

"Well, I'll tell you. We chased him up across the boulevard and in among the tents, and then—" Mrs. Strange lowered her voice until only a murmur reached the listening man. A moment, then both women burst into shrill, excited laughter, and Blaze himself blushed furiously.

This was unbearable! It was bad enough to have that woman in Jonesville, a constant menace to his good name, but to allow her access to his own home was unthinkable. Sooner or later they were bound to meet, and then Paloma would learn the disgraceful truth—yes, and the whole neighborhood would likewise know his shame. In fancy, Blaze saw his reputation torn to shreds and himself exposed to the gibes of the people who venerated him. He would become a scandal among men, an offense to respectable women; children would shun him. Blaze could not bear to think of the consequences, for he was very fond of the women and children of Jonesville. He rose from his hammock and tiptoed down the porch into the kitchen, from which point of security he called loudly for his daughter.

Alarmed at his tone, Paloma came running. "What is the matter?" she asked, quickly.

"Get her out!" Blaze cried, savagely. "Get shed of her."

"Her? Who?"

"That varmint."

"Father, what ails you?"

"Nothin' ails me, but I don't want that caterpillar crawlin' around my premises. I don't like her."

Paloma regarded her parent curiously. "How do you know you don't like her when you've never seen her?"

"Oh, I've seen her, all I want to; and I heard her talkin' to you just now. I won't stand for nobody tellin' you—bad stories."

Paloma snickered. "The idea! She doesn't—"

"Get her out, and keep her out," Blaze rumbled. "She ain't right; she ain't—hmmm. Why, what d'you reckon I saw her do the other day? Makes me shiver now. You remember that big bull-snake that lives under the barn, the one I've been layin' for? Well, you won't believe me, but him and her are friends. Fact! I saw her pick him up and play with him. Who—ee! The goose-flesh popped out on me till it busted the buttons of my vest. She ain't my kind of people, Paloma. 'Strange' ain't no name for her; no, sir! That woman's dam' near peculiar."

Paloma remained unmoved. "I thought you knew. She used to be a snake-charmer."

"A—what?" There was no doubt about it. Blaze's hair lifted. He blinked through his big spectacles; he pawed the air freely with his hands. "How can you let her touch you? I couldn't. I'll bet she carries a pocketful of dried toads and—and keeps live lizards in her hair. I knew an old voodoo woman that ate cockroaches. Get shed of her, Paloma, and we'll fumigate the house."

At that moment Mrs. Strange herself opened the kitchen door to inquire, "Is anything wrong?" Misreading Blaze's expression for one of pain, she exclaimed: "Mercy! Now, what have you done to yourself?"

But the object of her solicitude backed away, making peculiar clucking sounds deep in his throat. Paloma was saying:

"This is my father, Mrs. Strange. You and he have never happened to meet before."

"Why, yes we have! I know you," the seamstress exclaimed. Then a puzzled light flickered in her black eyes. "Seems to me we've met somewhere, but—I've met so many people." She extended her hand, and Blaze took it as if expecting to find it cold and scaly. He muttered something unintelligible. "I've been dying to see you," she told him, "and thank you for giving me Paloma's work. I love you both for it."

Blaze was immensely relieved that this dreaded crisis had come and gone; but wishing to make assurance doubly sure, he contorted his features into a smile the like of which his daughter had never seen, and in a disguised voice inquired, "Now where do you reckon you ever saw me?"

The seamstress shook her head. "I don't know, but I'll place you before long. Anyhow, I'm glad you aren't hurt. From the way you called Paloma I thought you were. I'm handy around sick people, so I—"

"Listen!" Paloma interrupted. "There's someone at the front door." She left the room; Blaze was edging after her when he heard her utter a stifled scream and call his name.

Now Paloma was not the kind of girl to scream without cause, and her cry brought Blaze to the front of the house at a run. But what he saw there reassured him momentarily; nothing was in sight more alarming than one of the depot hacks, in the rear seat of which was huddled the figure of a man. Paloma was flying down the walk toward the gate, and Phil Strange was awaiting on the porch. As Blaze flung himself into view the latter exclaimed:

"I brought him straight here, Mr. Jones, 'cause I knew you was his best friend."

"Who? Who is it?"

"Dave Law. He must have come in on the noon train. Anyhow, I found him—like that." The two men hurried toward the road, side by side.

"What's wrong with him?" Blaze demanded.

"I don't know. He's queer—he's off his bean. I've had a hard time with him."

Paloma was in the carriage at Dave's side now, and calling his name; but Law, it seemed, was scarcely conscious. He had slumped together; his face was vacant, his eyes dull. He was muttering to himself a queer, delirious jumble of words.

President Wilson has expressed his opinion

of the duty relating to savings bank deposits in these true sentences:

"If a man does not provide for his children, if he does not provide for all those dependent upon him, and if he has not that vision of conditions to come, and that care for the days that have not yet dawned, which we sum up in the whole idea of thrift and saving, then he has not opened his eyes to any adequate conception of human life. We are in this world not to provide for ourselves, but for others and that is the basis of economy."

THEY TRIED

Some of the men who entered the First Officers' Training Camp at Fort Sheridan have been released from their obligations because of slight failings or defects, not in first character. For their neighbors who are friends of the army here is an opportunity to cheer and support. The creed of America will remember those who were willing to serve their country.

MAKING THE PUNISHMENT FIT THE CRIME

In New York the other day a man was convicted and sentenced for failure to obey the registration law. He was an alien resident, who admitted he retained citizenship in another country, and the evidence went to show that he not only willfully disobeyed the mandate of the registration law but openly had criticised this law and shown contempt for the authority of the government. Wherefore the presiding judge gave him a sentence to fit his offense by imposing both a fine and a term in prison, and adding the recommendation that at the conclusion of the sentence the man should be deported from the United States.

No fair-minded person will deny that this was a just and righteous judgment. Any alien who comes to this country to enjoy its opportunities and privileges should be willing to conform to its laws and not offend by criticising or resisting proper authority. Any one who does so offend, moreover, cannot complain if he is punished for abusing American hospitality, or if part of this punishment includes forceable deportation. And this country would be better off if it could apply this rule to all unfriendly aliens, as well as to some citizens who persist in acting like unfriendly aliens.

THE COAL PROBLEM

It is possible to tell the coal situation today in about four figures.

The production is 1,825,000 tons of coal per day.

It produces the current rate 2,215,000 tons a day.

The consumption is up, on the average, during 300 days a year.

The production crippled, last year, to only 230 days.

To make production equal consumption this year it must consume about 2 and one-half days to be made up when the mines are idle.

The figures have to do with bituminous coal only.

The question of the moment is:

Are the mines going to be able to operate steadily for 250 days this year? If they are we will get enough coal. If they are not we will have a shortage of coal.

To get out enough coal or to keep the mines running for 250 days it is necessary for the people to put in some orders during the summer. There is going to be necessary for the railroads to supply cars for moving more coal when they want it.

If we can put the mines on storage for 50 days more than we did last year, we will have enough coal to go around. One thing is sure, however. To meet the demand this year it must be the mines 250 days. That is the whole problem in a nutshell.

Perpetuation of the movement in the form of officers' training camps and the opportunity to commissioned shall be made solely on merit, without any guile or political influence sway the selection. Such is the government's pledge to the American people, and public safety as well as sentimental honor demands that it be kept to the letter. To place the inefficient in command of the flower of our young manhood, to trust the national destiny to the feeble hands of the incompetent to satisfy the political ambitions of any person or group of persons lost to a sense of their divinely imposed obligations to the nation that gives them their prosperity and protection, would be a crime far transcending the most hideous of the offenses committed by our enemies. While their cruelties are visited upon a few, the terrible consequences of such a traitorous act as this would inflict misery and destruction upon thousands who have offered their lives to their country and have every right and reason to expect to be efficiently led.

It is estimated that some 800,000 tons of British shipyard capacity is needed for repair work on vessels which have been either struck by a mine, or which escaped disastrous results from a submarine.

We are told, "Let not the sun go down on your wrath." This, of course, is best, but as it generally does I would add, "never act or write till it has done so." This rule has saved me from many an act of folly. It is wonderful what a different view we take of the same event a day after it has happened.—Sydney Smith.

only, as a device to gain time, and thus enable Germany to return afresh to completo her bloody work. Such an offer would be like a purr from a man-eating tiger.

If we get any such proposal from Germany, it will undoubtedly take the form of a compromise. A compromise is precisely what we do not want. Germany must be smashed flat. She must be left helpless. She must be left in such shape that she can not let loose hell on the world again for at least a century to come. This job must be done thoroughly. Treaties will not do it. Promises will not do it. A change of government in Germany will not do it. There is only one way to do it. That way is to leave Germany in such position and condition that she CAN NOT renew the war for at least three generations. That is what the United States wants. That is what our allies want. There is no use in being mealy-mouthed about it. That is our fixed and deliberate purpose. It is the only safe course, the only wise course. Anything less would be weak-minded; it would be treachery to our own people.

Such a result cannot be accomplished pleasantly or painlessly to Germany. Therefore Germany will never voluntarily submit. Whatever she is willing to offer or submit to, is precisely what we cannot accept; because whatever she will offer or submit to would leave the tiger in possession of his teeth and claws. The teeth and claws must come out—no mateer how much it hurts. The teeth and claws must come out, even though we have to beat the tiger into helplessness. If we were imbecile enough to let the tiger arise again with teeth and claws intact, then we should not be fit to conquer. We should be worthy only of such treatment as falls to the lot of feeble-minded among nations.

We need have no great fear of premature peace or fradulent peace. There is no danger of our allies abdicating their reason. As for ourselves, to desert our allies would be unthinkable—a piece of moral treason that can not even be imagined. We must be on our guard, however, against the clamor that will be raised by the traitors, copperheads and alien enemies in this country in favor of Germany offering a new "peace proposition." We know in advance that it will be received by the German language newspapers just how it will be applaud by the I. W. W. make-up of Chicago, just how David Starr Jordan and his sort will reach for it with their weak hands, how Scott Nearing and his anarchist and socialist admirers will welcome it, how every paid German spy will work day and night for it.

But the influence of these classes is small and rapidly dwindling. They still try to scatter poison; but little of it lodges where it can do harm. Feeble educated mollycoddles may babble learnedly, rough-neck rabbles may growl, cowards, and the snakebred of alien spies and copperheads may hiss; but the eagle flies above them all with strong and steady wings.

THE TEST OF MERIT

Charlevoix People Are Given Convincing Proof

No better test of any article can be made than the test of time and this is particularly true of a kidney medicine. Doan's Kidney Pills have stood this test and stood it well. What better proof of the merits of this remedy could you demand, than the statement of a Charlevoix resident who used it successfully and tells of lasting results.

Read the following:

Mrs. R. M. Mekeel, 214 Mason St., Charlevoix, says: "I suffered for several months with kidney trouble. My kidneys gave me a great deal of annoyance. I was bloated quite badly and was subject to weak and lame back. Doan's Kidney Pills procured from Metcalf's Drug Store, brought me relief." (Statement given October 26, 1911.)

On October 4, 1916, Mrs. Mekeel said: "All that I have said in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills holds good today. Doan's Kidney Pills completely cured me of kidney trouble and the cure has lasted."

A BAND TO BE FORMED HERE

OPEN AIR CONCERTS BEGIN SOON

Plenty of Good Material to Choose From—Support Lacking In the Past

An effort is being made by the Commercial club of Charlevoix to induce the organization of a band for the city, and a meeting of local musicians will very probably transpire within a few days to formulate plans and devise means of procedure in the matter.

Open air band concerts on the streets of Charlevoix during the summer months would be a welcome attraction to both the home people and those from a distance who spend the heated term here, and every assistance should be given the organization of a good band. No town in the state is the home of more capable musicians than is Charlevoix, and no earthly reason exists why this city should not boast of the best musical organization in the resort territory.

What Makes Business Success.

"There is always a premium in business on the man who does his work painstakingly," says J. O. Armour in the American Magazine, "with completeness and finality. He is the man who will be trusted with more and more responsibility, up to the limit of his capacity. The man who informs himself adequately about his firm, its methods, its policies and its products, who does his work so well that no one needs follow him up to patch the ragged edges, is on the safest, surest and shortest road to achievement."

The Usual Remedy.

Bobbie had been studying his grandfather's face, which was very much wrinkled.

"Well, Bob," said the old gentleman, "do you like my face?"

"Yes, grandpa," said Bobbie. "It's an awfully nice face. But why don't you have it ironed?"—New York Times.

EVILS OF ADENOIDS.

These Growths Are a Real Menace to the Health of a Child.

Not every child that is backward at school, that breathes through his mouth, has dull eyes, a short upper lip, prominent upper teeth or has a drawn, tired expression about the face has adenoids, says a state board of health bulletin. But this condition should lead a parent to suspect adenoid growth, and it should not be dismissed till a thorough examination has proved that such is not the case.

Adenoids are a small, soft, reddish growth which comes in the back part of the throat where the nose and throat join. A child who has adenoids breathes with his mouth open, has frequent colds and may have earache often or become deaf. It is not infrequent that adenoids dull the expression of the eye, destroy the resonance of the voice and distort the facial expression so as to produce a blank, idiotic stare. They hinder mental development by interfering with proper physical development. For that reason "repeaters" at school are frequently said to be afflicted with adenoids.

The best time to remove adenoids is when they are first recognizable to a physician. If they remain longer they do harm. They cause a child to have "colds" often and make him more susceptible to diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles and whooping cough. Furthermore, if he gets any of these diseases they are likely to be severe with him and leave him even worse afflicted.

Cold, fresh air breathed through the nose is needed to prevent adenoid growth. It is needed also to prevent adenoids returning after an operation. Fresh air taken in through the nose prevents as well as cures adenoids.

Temporary Inconvenience.

"I thought you were going to improve conditions," said the impatient man. "I don't see what you've done, except to get a lot of people kicking."

"A social condition," replied the reformer, "is like a street. In order to improve it you always have to muss it up for a little while."—Washington Star.

MARCHING SONG OF THE ROOKIES

MANY WILL SOON TRAMP TO ITS STRAINS

Imagine Our Home Boys, Weary and Dirty, Drilling in the Dust at Battle Creek

The following song written by William Herschell entitled "Long Boy" is intended as a marching song for the "rookies." Imagine, if you can, a dusty road near Battle Creek Mich., with Glen Townsend and Harry Feiner in the front rank, blending their voices in this touebing ditty and Jeke Klooster in the line of flle closers coming in strong on the chorua.

"LONG BOY"
By William Herschell

He was just s long, leen country gink
From sway out West where the hoptoads wink;
He was six feet two in bis stockin' feet,
But he kep' gettin' thinner tho more he'd eat.
Yet he was bravc as he wes thin;
When the war broke out he got right in,
Unhitched bis plow, put the mule away,
An' then the old folks heerd him say:

Refrain

Good-by, ma! Good-by, pa!
Good-by mule, with yer old he-haw
I may not know what the war'a about,
But, you bet, by gosh, I'll soon find out!
An,' O my sweetheert, don't you fear,
I'll bring you a king for a souvenir!
I'll git you a turk an' a kaiser too,
An' thet's ebout ell one feiler could do.

One peir of sbcks wes his only load
When he struck fer town by the old dirt road.
Hc went right down to the public square
An' fell in line with the soldiers there.
The sergeent put him in a uniform,
His gel knit mitts fer to keep him warm;
They drilled him late, they drilled him long;
Then he marched away to his farewell song:

Chorus

WONDERFUL CHANGES HAVE TAKEN PLACE

Early Settler Compares 40 Years Ago to Present Time

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Eastcott and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Himebaugh motored to Petoskey last Sunday. Mr. Eastcott, perhaps more than the average old settler of northern Michigan, can note the change in the country between Chnrlevoix end Petoskey, as when he first struck Michigan about forty yeara ago, he arrived in Petoskey on a Saturday just too late to catch the stage plying at that time between Petoskey and Charlevoix and rether than wait over Sunday he walked to Charleyoix, stopping on the way for dinner at a farm owned at thnt timc by a Mr. Ross, where he was receeived with the hospitality common at that time among the pioneers.

Mr. Eastcott's destination was the homc of his cousin, Dan Himebaugh, and arriving in Charlevoix he found Mr. Himebaugb in town and rode out to the farm behind a yoke of oxen and on the orchard now standing on the Himebaugh farm, the trees having just been received and being taken home to bc planted.

The coming forty years will probably see many changes in this part of the country, but it will be hard to convince Mr. Eastcott that the changes will be as great as those hev-

LESS MEAT IF BACK AND KIDNEYS HURT

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if Bladder bothers you—Drink lots of water.

Eating meat regularly eventnally produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the urio acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemoo juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Snlts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and theo to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

THE PUBLIC PULSE

Communications

Harry Nicholls, Dick Hammet and the writer left Charlevoix at 7 e. m. Friday the 13th for Mackinaw City, arriving there et 10 a. m., to attend the second annual meeting of the East Michigan Pike Association. We returned the same evening, having hed a good time generally, the usual fine fish dinner for which Macklnaw City is so justly noted on these occasions. Of course, the big man of the occasion was Mr. Frank J. Rogers, Michigan State Highway Commissioner, who geve us a fine address and urged the necessity of building good roade. Mr. Wm. Snydor Galbreath, gave a wonderful talk on the great beauty of the Dixie Highway. He is the fatber of thia highway and has mede many trips over this wonderful national route, extending from Miami, Florida north to Chattanooga where it branches off northwest o Chicago and extending through Michigan via Grand Rapids and Holland, where it follows the West Michigen Pike to Mackinaw City and from Mackinaw City it follows the East Michigan Pike to Detroit, Toledo and Cincinneti and on to Chattanooga, making without doubt 4000 miles of the most beautiful highway in the world, with its 800 miles of water washed air around the east end west coasts of Michigan.

Harry J. Boardman, conneeted with the Michigan Concrete Road Association, and also a large farmer and raiser of Holstein cattle, geve us a good talk.

J. W. Hannon, cditor of "Roeds and Forests" at Detroit, Michigan, a monthly peper devoted entirely to good roads, and which every man, women and child who are interested in the greatest work of the netion, that is, road building, ought to be a subseriber to, the mayor of Cheboygan, and Mr. Geo. V. Hoffman, a taxidermist of national reputation and many others were present.

Of eourse, no meeting of this kind would be complete without the presence of Michigan's father of good roads, Horatio S. Enrle, the handsomest man in Michigan. Nothing can be said that people do not already know about this great man. His monument erected lnst year in honor of the great work he has done stands in the public square, and while it is very beautiful, it really does not do the man justiee, but he is very modest and well pleased end justly proud as he has reason to be, that the people built this monument to perpetuate his memory. One of the good things about it is, that they did not wait until after he died to either send flowers or say good words but they did it while he was living.

This letter would not be complete without an extra referenee being mede to the Chairman of the Committee, the Hon. Mr. Baker, ex-member of the legislature of the great state of Michigan, but no relation to the baker, the butcher or the candlestick maker. He did himself proud in all of his introductions and proved himself a true patriot and American in urging Americans to be Americans, and those that were not Americans to shut up and get out of the country. His talk wes a corker. I think we could afford to give Mr. Baker a good salary to come down here and live with us.

It is really too bad that more people are not interested in attending these meetings. It was the best one I ever attended, and we bring you greetings from the people there assemhled and the great news that Suprintendent Rogers will recommend to the U. S. government that they grnnt Charlevoix County Federal Aid on national ronds. This means that for n mile of conerete road which can be huilt npproximntely fnr $15,000, Uncle Sam will pey $7,500, the stntc $2,250, leaving Charlevoix county to pay only $5,250 for a conerete road 16 fcet wide, and the only expense that we can he to will be 4 per cent interest on the bonds for $5,250 or a little over $200 per year per mile, which will be redueed year hy year until it nmounts to nothing. The amount allowed by the state for the upkeep will be more than it will cost to keep this road up judging from the fact that the large treffie over the two pieces of conerete road we have here, one of which has been built eight yenrs and the other seven years without one dollar of expense having been put on either. Superintendent Rogers also said he would recommend State eld on some other roads which is $6,800 for n 16 foot concrete road.

I feel that a vote of thanks should be tendered Mr. Rogers for the efficient manner in which he is conducting this, the most important and one of the greatest interest to our state. He has nenrly sixty people employed in his department nnd all necessnrily must he high grade people.

Yours truly,

Do colds settle on your chest or in your bronchial tubes? Do coughs hang on, or are you subject to throat troubles?

Such troubles should have immediate treatment with the strengthening powers of Scott's Emulsion to guard against consumption which so easily follows.

Scott's Emulsion contains pure cod liver oil which peculiarly strengthens the respiratory tract and improves the quality of the blood; the glycerine in it soothes and heals the tender membranes of the throat.

Scott's is prescribed by the best specialists. You can get it at any drug store.

NAVY IS ALSO TRAINING MEN

NEARLY 9,000 NOW AT GREAT LAKES STATION

Every Men Fired With Determination to Make Good—Station to be Largest In World

About 8,200 men are being fitted for fighting in the nation's first line of defense at the United States naval training station at Chicago.

Not unlike that in a big college football camp is the routine of their training. Chief petty officers are the coaches who drill the men up and down the fields in the final days of preparation for the big game—war.

Every minute is made to mean something. On a dozen fields the air is filled with the authorative commands of the officers and the pounding of thousands of heavily-shod feet on the turf. Commingling is the blare of the bands, which are directed by Lieut. John Philip Sousa, famous bandsman, who now has 242 musicians in training and expects to develop the finest military hand in the world.

But the spirit of the camp is as serious as that in a football camp. And, as evinced by the last days of November in any college, the statement is not meant lightly. Everywhere about the station the sentiment seems to be to stick to the team; make a good showing in the eyes of the coaches that a permanent place may be obtained in the greatest game of all. C. G. Smith, captain of this year's football eleven at the University of Michigan, expressed this when he said:

"We are going in with evehythink we have. We are going to win and make the commandant, Capt. W. A. Moffett, proud of us when we go to sea or be ground to pieces trying."

To Train 20,000 Men

Plans are under way to make the station the largest of its kind in the world. Preparationa have been made to train upwards of 20,000 men during the summer. The navy department, upon the suggestion of Captain Moffett, has asked congress to appropriate funds for this purpose.

Constructed originally for 100 men, the war and the resultant influx of recruits has necessitated the springing up of a white, tented city on the reservation and adjoining leased land. Camp Paul Jones lying immediately to the north of the station proper has been fully equipped and shelters 5,000 men, among them the naval militia from the states of Michigan and Missouri.

It is believed that the station will train five-eighths of the men who go to the navy during the war. Recruits from practically every community in the middle West are expected, men from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Kentucky, and parts of other states being sent here to learn the business of a man-o'-warsman.

Men of Every Stetion

Virile young Americans from the colleges, offices, farms and factories of tha Middle West, the men at the station seem to be trained for almost anything. Here one may see a civil engineer, enlisted as an apprentice seaman, using his transit to make bench marks, while over there on the corner of the reservation are the two slender 400-foot wireless towers from which a man is sending a wireless message to the government station in Arlington, Va. In the heterogeneous personnel there is a representative of almost every trade, profession and business.

Home-sickness is a disease that has little place at the station. There is not time for it. Lying in the sun-swept harbor of Lake Michigan, below the wooded bluffs of the reservation are United States navy warships, aboard which the men get some of their training. For the leisure hours the dimpling waters of the lake invites the more hardy to bathe.

Then there are organized athletics under the supervision of a naval officer, Regular track meets, boxing bouts and baseball games are held. Also there is a gymnasium and a fully equipped library to occuy the time.

Earn Money on Side

Many of the men earn money other than their pay by doing odd jobs for their fellows. There is a letter writer who for a small sum will write a descriptive letter to a parent or a burning love letter to a young woman for a mate who finds it less easy to express himself. Over in Camp Paul Jones is a tented barber shop in which several barbers are kept busy scraping the faces of their comrades. Alongside is a shoe-shining "parlor" and nearby is a cleaning and pressing establishment; all of them do good business for among the first things a recruit is taught are neatness and personal cleanliness.

Nor do the men want for a woman's interest. Mrs. Moffett, wife of the commandant, herself the mother of three small sons, tries to take a motherly interest in every man in the station. As president of the Great Lakes auxillary of the Navy Relief society, she has direction of the caring for the needy families in the middle West of officers and enlisted men of the navy and marine corps. Gifts, received at the station, she distributes personally, frequently offering bits of kindly advice simultaneously.

And when, finally the men are ready to take their places in the American battle fleet, each seems to be obsessed with the idea that he, personally, must make good.

ADVERTISE IN THE COURIER

BOCHES DESERT ARMY IN DROVES

HAVE GROWN WEARY OF WAR AND ITS HORRORS

No Longer Believe In Germen Victory, But Are Eeger for Peece—Beg Food

On the southern border of Holland deaertions from the German army occur on a large acale nowadays. At first it was only a single soldier here and there, then they came by threes and fives, later in groups of ten and twenty, but now as many as seventy and eighty come in at a time. A few days ago a little army tried to desert—some 500 to 600 men, mostly fusileers, marines and land-sturmers.

The Dutch report says that they attempted to cross near Cadsand, but the German military authorities got wind of it, and 200 Uhlans with two machine guns were dispatched from Bruges to head them back. A formal battle raged between the two forces; it was viewed from Holland. The machine guns got in their deadly work, and almost all the would-be deserters were either killed or captured; only eight wounded men succeeded in reaching Dutch soil and safety.

Every fresh arrival, deserter or escaped prisoner, tells the same story of famine conditions in Belgium and Germany, and depression among the soldiers, who dread being sent to the front. They no longer believe in German victory, but are eager for peace. Only one escaped prisoner had a different story to tell, and that man was a Russian general, who arrived in Maastricht accompanied by two German "flight lieutenants" who had escaped with him.

This General believed the Germans can never be reduced by hunger. "They will eat grass or the dust from the street rather than surrender on the allies' terms," he said. He told how bad the treatment and the food was in the German prison camps; he had been in seven, so he could judge. After every attempt to escape he had been transferred to a different camp, but everywhere the prisoners were treated brutally, the officers as well as the men. How he had at last succeeded in getting away with his two companions he preferred not to say—because he feared that would make escape more difficult for his comrades still in captivity. He did, however, say that what made escape very difficult was that it caused great surprise to people in German towns and villages to see three able-bodied men walking about, and he and his companions had been obliged to invent all sorts of tales about having been wounded and being now on leave to account for their absence from "the front."

German soldiers frankly beg for food on the Dutch border. The officers don't go quite as far as that.

There is a sort of neutral zone along the frontier where Germans and Hollanders can meet. There the German officers often congregate and make overtures of comradeship to their colleagues on the other side. Friendly relations exist, and when the luncheon hour comes and the Netherlanders see what poor provisions the Germans have, they invite the Germans to lunch. A picnic is held and the Germans consume incredible quantities of rolls, sausages, or ham sandwiches, and loudly praise the coffee the orderlies of their Dutch comrades serve. They say they never get good coffee any more.

Although the Dutch officer often meets his German colleagues, it must not be supposed he always agrees with their methods of discipline toward their own men. Both officers and soldiers in Holland, by far the greater number of them at least, strongly disapprove of the brutal and heartless way in which most German officers treat their men. The younger officers show this by chaffing the Germans about it.

Merchant Ranks Over Noble

How the spirit of caste still rules in the German ranks is instanced by a little anecdote told me by a Dutch officer. He had come on friendly "coffee" terms with a German officer, Von S., the personification to the very monocle, of those "schneidige lieutenants" often lampooned in Germany. One day Von S. came to lunch bubbling over with indignation for a simple "bourgeois," a former Berlin merchant had been given the post of captain in his regiment, and he himself was first lieutenant.

"Denken sie sich, lieber Kamerad!" he exclaimed. "Ich! Von S. Unter einem Kaufmann aus Berlin!" He felt disgraced. But officers are beginning to get scarce in Germany, so the reserve officers who have acquitted themselves creditably have to be promoted to positions they would never have attained in peace times.

Circus Coming

Cook Brothers World's Greatest Shows is headed this way.

Reports credit this circus with being greatly enlarged, and now one of the leaders in their line.

On Monday Mr. James M. Beach, General Advance Representative for the Cook Brothers World's Greatest shows was in Charlevoix making contracts and paving the way for the coming of the big circus.

Immense quantities of provisions of all kinds will be contracted for from our local merchants, and grounds were leased for Saturday, July 21, which is the date the big circus will exhibit here.

From now until show day hardly a day will pass, but what one or more agents of the circus will be in town looking after details, promoting public interest, and thoroughly advertising the surrounding country.

This circus employs over 50 people in the department of publicity alone.

James M. Beach, who is a very genial gentleman, has in his possession many newspaper criticisms of the show, and they all speak in glowing terms of the excellent entertainment given, and the honorable methods employed by the show and management in doing business with the public—no gambling or short change artists being allowed among the employees.

Our people will undoubtedly turn out en-masse if the weather is favorable.

A Cautious Judge.

"Safety First" seems to be the motto of some of the judges in the West Indies. When an alien prisoner is brought before them they consider the possibility of a gunboat from the culprit's native land popping in to make trouble.

It is told that a Haiti magistrate, on examining a prisoner, found that he was from Switzerland.

"Switzerland," he mused. "Switzerland has no seacoast, has it?"

"No seacoast, your honor," said the interpreter.

"And no navy?"

"No navy, your honor."

"Very well, then," said the judge, "I'll give him a year at hard labor."—Boston Transcript.

SECRETS.

To tell our own secrets is generally folly, but that folly is without guilt; to communicate those with which we are intrusted is always treachery, and treachery, for the most part, combined with folly.—Johnsen.

NEW SPEED BOAT IS HERE

"SYLVIA" BURNS A GALLON FOR EVERY MILE

Long, Low and Rakish—She Can Cut Circles Around Anything Afloat Here

Logan Thomson's new speed boat, the "Sylvia" arrived here last Sunday morning from Milwaukee at 6 o'clock, having left the Wisconsin shore at 11:00 o'clock the night before. Roy Ranger, who brought her in says that they averaged eighteen miles per hour all night long. Last Sunday they took a little spin in her up to Harbor Springs and Wequetonsing and on the way back, met the Manitou, which they circled two or three times and Roy says you couldn't tell that the old N. M. T. boat was moving at all.

The "Sylvia" is a product of the designing skill of Walter Beauvais, a former Charlevoix man who had a factory here some thirteen or sixteen years ago and is now in the employ of the Great Lakes Boat Building corporation at Milwaukee. She is 48 feet long, of the type known as wave-collecting sedan runabout and it fitted with a Dusenberg 6 3-4 x 7-3-4 inch motor, developing 400 h. p. at 1,500 r. p. m., with a speed of 38 to 42 miles per hour. She averages about 35 to 40 gallons of gas to the hour, or about a gallon a mile. The neatest way to describe her is to call her a seven passenger touring car on a keel, for her control and seating arrangement is more like an automobile than a boat.

LOEB BUYS ANOTHER PARCEL

Makes a Total of 1120 Acres For Chicago Man—Development Work Progressing Steadily

Another big slice of Pine Lake property has been added to the already large holdings of Albert H. Loeb on the south shore. Harry L. This latest purchase gives Mr. Loeb a total acreage of some 1120 acres of the finest land in this part of the country, a large portion of which is either now or soon will be under cultivation.

The development of the property is progressing rapidly. Quite a number of men and teams and a tractor are engaged in building and grading roads, clearing land and constructing ditches and drains, preparatory to the commencement of the main construction features.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY MEN WHO MUST SOON REPORT FOR DUTY

List of Men in County Who Are Included—First Two Hundred and Ninety-One Names Drawn From Draft List—County's Quota 71

The following is a list of the first 291 Cbarlevoix and Charlevoix county men, with their serial numbers, drawn in Friday's draft for the new civilian army of Uncle Sam. These men will report for examination in the order their names appear in this list.

The list is picked from tbe first 2,500 names drawn at Washington. The remaining 1008 Charlevoix county names and numbers, which were drawn at the same time as the above, will be published at a later date.

The list published in this issue of the Courier was compared with three separate lists received at this office. A number of corrections were made, and it is thought the list is as near correct as could be obtained until the local board receive the numbers officially from the governor of the state. Up to the time we go to press, notbing had been received by the local board.

As near as can be ascertained, Charlevoix county's quota of men for the first army of 687,000 will be 71. This number is a trifle lower tban some counties of the same population, but as we have furnished somewhere in the neighborhood of a hundred men previous to the draft, tbis has been taken into consideration in the apportionment, with the result that the above number (71) was apportioned to us.

However, this does not mean that the first 71 men drafted will be the only ones taken at the present time. From a statement made by a prominent government employe, who is in this vicinity on work closely connected to the present draft, we have drawn these conclusions:

First: Thirty-five per cent of the men drafted will be unable to pass the required physical examination.

Second: Fifteen per cent are subject to exemption on account of being government employees.

Third: From 20 to 25 per cent are subject to exemption from various causes, among which are those having dependents, others whose work is of importance to the community in which they live, and other causes of a like nature.

Deducting those exempt for the above mentioned reasons, it will be seen that not more than 25 per cent drawn will see actual service, or about one in every four.

Method of Lottery.

Here is the way the lottery plan works:

In each of the 4,557 districts in the country the men are numbered serially from one to the highest number of cards in that district.

A number drawn from the glass globes established the draft order of every man holding that number in every district in the nation.

In case the numbers higher than a district contains are drawn they are disregarded in making up the list in that district.

For instance, as 258 was the first capsule pulled out, the man holding 258 in every district having numbers as high as that are drafted and must report first in their district. Then as 2522 was next, the men holding 2522 in each district will be the second men on the lists.

As soon as the first 1,000 numbers were chalked up, the blackboard was taken outside and photographed "close up," thousands of copies of each picture being made.

These indelible and unchangeable records will constitute the lists for the local exemption boards.

We Must Supply Our Quota

Cbarlevoix county had 1,299 men registered and our quota is 71 men. In determining the positions of these men all numbers above 1,299 were eliminated.

In each district all numbers above the total registered are eliminated and the net result shows the order in which the men will be called to fill the quotas of the districts in the first and subsequent draft armies.

It must be remembered that each district must supply its quota according to the population estimates announced by the Michigan state authorities and the drawing of the names simply indicates the order in which the men registered will be drawn. The fact that other districts may have higher numbers that are drawn first does not relieve any district having only low numbers of filling its prescribed quota.

Earl H. Sneathen of Hayes township who drew number 258, the first number out of the black capsules, will have the honor of reporting first in Charlevoix county. His name heads the list we print today and the others will be required to report in the order their names appear below.

On pages six and seven of this issue will be found the names of all men between the ages of 21 and 31 registered in Charlevoix county. On the same pages will also be found an article explaining in detail what must be done by those drafted and who will be subject to exemption.

MEN MUST INQUIRE IF NUMBERS ARE CALLED

Urged to be On the Alert And Report If Drawn

America's men of draft age will be responsible for ascertaining whether or not they are drawn in the big human lottery. Hence the war department has asked that in tbe next few weeks they be on the alert, follow the newspaper announcements of the draft requirements, and when in doubt ask their local exemption boards.

The fate of the 9,649,938 men on the nation army registration rolls were held in a huge glass bowl filled with little gelatine capsules.

The numbers nn paper squares in each of these capsules designate the men drafted for America's armies.

Squares of paper numbered serially were placed in gelatine capsules. These were thrown into a big transparent globe. On the day of the draft the capsules were drawn at random from the globe. Each slip indicated for draft every man bearing that number in each of the more than 4,000 registration districts in the nation.

These slips were numbered from one up as high as the number of men registered in tbe largest precinct in the country.

It has not yet been fully decided whether the first drawing should cover only enough men for the first levy or the entire 9,649,938 registered. In the latter case the numbers of every man registered will be listed in the order drawn and this list will stand for future levies, the second draft to begin at the serial number in each district where the first draft ended.

HOME DRILL PLAN ON FOOT

PRELIMINARY TRAINING WOULD HELP RECRUITS

Give Your Name to Mason Rose At the Post Office If You Want to Join

In a recent communication to its branch chairman, the Military Training Camp Association of the U. S. urges the need of some preliminary training of the drafted man and the training camp applicant in the rudiments of military drill. They call upon the local chairman to organize the drafted men and those expecting to enter the training camp in the respective districts and endeavor to secure persons with previous military training to furnish the needed instruction.

If the men who expect to go have this preliminary instruction, they will at once be of great value and will have better opportunities of securing the positions of corporals and sergeants. It has been announced that no more officers' camps will be held after the one which opens August 27th at Fort Sheridan and that future commissions will be given to those who prove their merit in the ranks of the new national army. They will benefit tremendously by military drill.

Chairman Mason H. Rose, of the Charlevoix branch is considering the formation of a temporary local organization of prospective recruits, with the idea of including as well any of those not drafted who desire to avail themselves of the opportunity thus presented to learn the ABC of the soldier's profession. Whether a man is chosen by the exemption board or not he will benefit by the physical training of the drill and the knowledge thus acquired he may be called upon sooner or later to use, as it is probable that there will be other drafts and that many will have to go who are not now drawn. It will also be possible to organize a home guard later on from those whose presence is not immediately required in the concentration camps.

Chairman Rose has lined up his instructors and an effort will be made to secure wooden guns. What is wanted just now, however, is the co-operation of the men themselves. Those desiring to join this organization for drill are requested to turn in their names to chairman Dr. Frank Wilkinson at his office in postoffice block, so that plans may be perfected. Further details will be published later.

CO. I NEARING WAR STRENGTH

RECENT LOCAL RECRUITS TO SWELL QUOTA

Having Good Time In Port Huron But Will Likely Go South—Hope Not to Texas

(By HAROLD W. USHER)

Port Huron, July 19.—The word that a large number of new recruits were coming from East Jordan, Boyne City and Charlevoix was welcomed with joy by the boys of Company I now stationed in Port Huron. It will mean that we will have much nearer a war strength company and it will also show that the home town has still got a little interest in us. Tbere were many times during the past year that we thought East Jordan and the surrounding country had forgotten us and at times, when the other companies were receiving support from their home towns we felt pretty blue. In the future, possibly the people will stop to think that we are trying to keep up the name of Charlevoix county and will give us a boost once in a while.

The coming of these new men will also make the work for the small number of men now on duty much easier than before and it is needless to say that after their work on the border they deserve a little rest. This new addition will allow us to hold up our heads with the rest of the companies, all who have nearly reached war strength. Among the bunch, there will also be familliar faces which will make the going much easier as meeting a friend, away from home as we are, is better than money. The new men from Charlevoix are not here yet and are still in Detroit. We expect them here in a couple of days now.

The work here, guarding the tunnel continues to be the same thing as before. Nothing of any importance ever arises and our only amusement, when on duty, is chasing away stray dogs or cats which wander on to our posts. But, when off duty, Port Huron has proved itself a real paradise. There is always something to do and have a good time at and we are never at a loss what to do next. Remember the old saying that the girls all fall for the uniform—well, it is true to a certain extent here, so we manage to get along fairly well. But even at that, northern Michigan has got this beat and we are watchfully waiting for Kaiser Bill to pull in his horn so that we can come home again.

If the ladies of the Baxter relief corps have six more of those housewives to spare, we lack that number of having enough to go around to the Norwood, Ellsworth and other boys from near Charlevoix. Those who got them certainly did like them and we are going to write the relief corps and thank them for what they did.

Well, we are due to stay here in Port Huron until the first of October, if not longer, and then go south with the rest of the Michigan brigade. We have no idea, yet, in what part of the south we will be stationed, but I hope it isn't Texas, as I certainly hate that state, or, at least, the part of it we were in before. I would rather be sent straight to France tomorrow than to put in another six months in that God-forsaken country.

STRANGE EXPLOSION SHATTERS POCKETBOOK

Pellston Man Thought Kaiser Bill Was After Him

George Kinsley, of Pellston thought his time had come Saturday when he snapped his pocketbook shut and it exploded with a loud report. George had just returned home from the store, where he had received a new five dollar bill in change and had placed the bill in the purse and snapped it shut when the explosion followed.

Two large holes were blown through the bill, the pocketbook was nearly demolished and the boy's nerves received a severe shock.

The cause of the explosion has not been discovered, but George thinks the kaiser's agents may have doped the bill with explosive. At any rate, he is not anxious to have the experience repeated.

MUCH SMOKE RAISED BUT LITTLE FLAME

Saturday's Garage Fire Soon Out With Slight Damage

The gasoline vulcanizer in the machine shop back of Ben Brown's garage caught fire Saturday morning at 11:00 o'clock and created lively exeltement for a time, as the smoke produced was far in excess of the extent of the blaze. The wall and roof of the machine shop in the corner where the vulcanizer stood were badly scorched, the glass in the skylight burned out and one or two tires were demolished.

The cars were at no time in danger, as the fire was a good distance from the main garage, but as a matter of precaution all of them were run out of the building before the fire had fairly gotten under way. The fire lads made short work of the job.

Historical Society Picnic

The passing of Father Charlevoix along these shores (July 31, 1721,) will be celebrated on Tuesday, July 31, by a basket picnic on the beach at the west end of the park from five to eight o'clock in the evening. The members of the Historical Society and their friends are invited to assist in commemorating the 196th anniversary of "Charlevoix Day" and to bring their own lunch and serve themselves around the bonfire. The new stairs will make the beach accessible to all.

EIGHT LOCAL APPLICATIONS

TURNED IN FOR RESERVE OFFICERS CAMP

Charlevoix Well Represented On List of Aspirants for Second Lieutenancies—Exam. July 30

Charlevoix has quite a respectable representation on the list of applications for admission to the Second Officers' Training camp, to be opened the latter part of August at Fort Sheridan, Ill., where men will be trained to lead the second national army of 500,000. The Cbarlevoix applicants to date are as follows:

Dr. Frank H. Wilkinson.
Rollie L. Lewis.
Frederick V. Tyler.
George A. Crouter.
Roscoe Corbin.
Glen Warren.
Robert Bridge.
Dan W. Mather.

Most of those listed above have had either military training experience, as members of the national guard or college cadet organizations or have directed business affairs in executive capacity. One of the number, Dr. Wilkinson, was a volunteer in the Spanish-American war in 1898. Six other applications have been turned in from the Charlevoix office by men whose legal residence is in other states and so do not count for Charlevoix, among these latter being that of Ray Frantz, clerk at the hotel Charlevoix, who hails from Cambridge Springs, Pa.

According to latest advices, local candidates will be required to report at Petoskey on July 30th next for examination, as to qualifications, etc.

At The M. E. Church

The Women's Missionary Society of the M. E. church will give a stereopticon lecture Sunday evening, July 30th at 7:30 o'clock at the church. This lecture will be conducted by Mrs. McPherson, who is well known in Charlevoix and promises to be most interesting and instructive. Mrs. McPherson has very kindly given her services as well as expenses connected with the lecture, to the society. Free to all—but please bring silver offering, which will all go for missionary work.

W. R. C. Meeting

Members of Charlevoix W. R. C. met at the home of Mrs. Emmet Coulter last Friday. A very enjoyable day was spent in making "housewives" for the soldier boys. The hostess made a hit with the ladies later in the day by the good things to eat which she served.

NORWOOD MEN SEE THE LIGHT

DOUBT CLOUDS DISPELLED ON LAKE SHORE TRIP

Formerly on the Fence—Now Come Out Strong for Concrete Roads On Trunk Lines

Three Norwood citizens—Joseph Sprik, Ed Scott and Alfred VanDusen accepted the invitation of Geo. H. Van Pelt on Tuesday last, to take dinner with him in this city and later drive to Boyne City and back in the latter's car.

While on the way to Boyne, these gentlemen formed some very strong and definite conclusions regarding roads and road building. Tbey were all three absolutely unprejudiced when they started. Tbey were neither for nor against the concrete road—their attitude was simple that of "the man from Missouri." Well, they were "shown" and at thoir request the Courier gives its readers the result of their reflections.

The first point that was brought forcibly home to them was the fact that a gravel road, its oldest portion only four years in use and a good part of it built last year—a road that might stand up for seven or eight years under ordinary team traffic, is now rapidly disintegrating under the wheels of powerful tourist cars and the lighter motor vehicles that make up in number and frequency of travel for the road-punishing powers of the larger cars which they lack. They were also mindful of the fact that this road represented the best modern knowledge and skill that the school of the gravel road has produced—the last word in the road science of the past and present.

Then they considered the commercial value of the road over which they were traveling to the territory which it serves. They mentally subtracted the resort and tourist business from the aggregate of the county's revenue-producing activities and the result astonished them. They knew, also, to a certainty upon what this business depends—that it comes in automobiles and goes in automobiles and that autos are driven where roads are good and are few and far between where the roads are not good. The problem lay before them in its entirety.

The solution was there too. When they swung around the arc of their mental circle from the pressing necessity for good roads on the one hand to the enormously disproportionate up-keep expense of the present road system on the other, it became plain as a pikestaff to these men who had been keeping to the middle ground of holding to the old ideas with one hand and groping for a compromising solution with the other. They let go of Gravel for good and all and straightaway Concrete reached down her hand and pulled them up onto the high-road of Permanency.

Boiled down—this is their solemn conviction. Concrete roads for the trunk lines and approved macadam construction for the feeders until we get to a stage where all our roads may be uniformly—concrete.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous aad vivacious—a good clenr sktn; a aatural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning insido hath, what a gratifying change would take placo.

Inatead of tho thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women nad girls with pnsty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nervo wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" aad pessimists we ahould see a virile, optimistic throag of rosy-cbeeked people everywhere.

An inside hath is bad by driaking, each morning beforo breakfast, a glasa of real hot water with a teaapoonful of limestono pbosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels tho previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations nad poisons, thus cleansing, aweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick beadaehe, billousness, nsaty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particulary those who hava a pallid, sallow complexion and who nre constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstratu the quick aud remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that insido cleanliness is more important than outside because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

SALTS IF BACKACHY AND KIDNEYS HURT

Drink lots of water and stop eating meat for a while if your Bladder troubles you.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you hava been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. Whea your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, alse you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you hava rheumatic twinges. Tha urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

THEATRICAL.

Norma Talmadge who reached the heights of fildom with the Vita-graph and Triangle companies, will make her first appearance as a Selznick-Pictures star at the Majestic Theatre on Monday, July 30, in an adaptation of the noted drama "Panthea" by Monckton Hoffe. This is the play in which Mme. Olga Petrova starred so successfully on the American stage several seasons ago and which created a furore throughout Europe, being acclaimed one of the strongest dramas of the age. It was chosen as Miss Talmadge's first vehicle under her new management, as the title role affords the beautiful and talented young player the greatest opportunity of her career for emotional acting.

The story is that of a young Russian pianist, who, suspected of Nihilism, escapes to England, where she falls in love with a struggling composer. They are married and settle in Paris, where Panthea's husband tries in vain to get a hearing for his opera. The many disappointments impair his health and the physicians declare that he will die unless his ambition to have his opera produced is realized. For the sake of her husband Panthea makes a compact with an elderly admirer who has great influenee in musical circles. Her sacrifice brings about the triumphant produetion of her husband's opera, but at the moment of his great success he discovers the manner in which Panthen induced her friend, the Baron, to exert his influence.

This situation leads to one of the strongest dramatic climaxes ever seen on the screen and in the end Panthea and her husband are reconciled just as the long arm of the Russian secret police stretches out from Petrograd to seize its prey in Paris.

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. No alcohol in Scott's.

AMONG THE PLAYERS AND CADDIES

(A column edited by the Caddie master for the purpose of sharpening the caddies' interest in their work and keeping parents in touch with those in charge of the boys at the golf grounds.)

The weekly saving plan, explained in last week's Courier, is used mostly by boys who do not need it. Boys who get their money home without any trouble each day do not need any help. The plan means a considerable amount of book-keeping for the caddie master, and if the boy is not helped the work is useless. Accordingly, savings will be kept only for boys who bring a written request from their parents. The plan is that the boy deposits his daily earnings with the caddie master, receiving in return a signed voucher for the amount. At the end of the week the boy presents his slips and receives his money for that week. It is designed to help caddies who spend their money on the way home, and not to train the caddie-master in arithmetic.

The wise caddie does his banking every week. The ten per cent prize will not be added this fall to any account that has not been built up by deposits made frequently during the season. The bank pass book will be the evidence. A sack or a saucer or behind the clock is the worst place on earth to save money. Put it in the bank and let it work for you.

The matter of chartering the "Columbia" for the Fourth Annual Excursion on August 19, has been taken up with Captain Weaver, and definite information concerning it will probably be given in this column next week. North Manitou Island is being considered as a point of visit.

There were 125 players on Monday morning and hardly enough caddies to keep them supplied. There are certainly many boys in and about Charlevoix who are able to caddy and should be getting their share of the hundreds of dollars being spent for caddie services. Parents are asked to remember that the conditions in which the caddies work are different now from what they once were. The new and younger boy has a chance with the rest, and measures taken for his welfare that were unthought of two or three years ago. The caddie-master is always glad to make the acquaintance of parents, to talk to them and listen to suggestions concerning the boys and their work.

Carl Gordon (21) Harold McCafferty (22) and Jerald McCafferty (40) have deserted the caddie ranks for the farm of Peter Block.

As usual circus day was a trial and a tribulation to everyone—but the boys. Nearly all of them who didn't work at the circus carried doubles at the golf course. Thirty doubles for somebody!

Chas. Curtis (50) is working at the Beach Hotel.

Frank Nowland (75) has been working for some time at Hine's Drug Store.

George Bacon and Chas. McFarlane joined the caddie force last week and were given numbers 100 and 98 respectively. But a week satisfied George. The Western Union office at Manistee needed him too, so he's working there now. Chester See (83) has been given a berth at the local Western Union office.

Gordon Palmer (85) is helping to sweeten the world by dealing out cold drinks at the Sugar Bowl.

The list of personal items in this column should be longer, but comparatively few bits of news regarding the boys reach the caddie-master. He, the Courier, and a large number of the people who read the Courier, will appreciate it if the boys will report to him things that happen to themselves and their fellow caddies.

HEART of the SUNSET

By REX BEACH

Author of "The Spoilers," "The Iron Trail," "The Silver Horde," Etc.

"Oh, dad! He's sick—sick," Paloma sobbed. "Dave, don't you know us? You're home, Dave. Everything is—all right now."

"Why, you'd hardly recognize the boy!" Bluze exclaimed; then he added his appeal to his daughter's. But they could not arouse the sick man from his coma.

"He asked me to take him to Las Palmas," Strange explained. "Looks to me like a sunstroke."

Paloma turned an agonized face to her father. "Get a doctor, quick," she implored; "he frightens me."

But Mrs. Strunge had followed, and now she spoke up in a matter-of-fact tone: "Doctor nothing," she said. "I know more than all the doctors. Paloma, you go into the house and get a bed ready for him, and you men ing him in. Come, now, on the run, all of you! I'll show you what to do." She took instant charge of the situation, and when Dave refused to leave the carriage and began to fight off his friends, gabbling wildly, it was she who quieted him. Elbowing Bluze and her husband out of the way, she loosed the young man's frenzied clutch from the carriage and, holding his hands in hers, talked to him in such a way that he gradually relaxed. It was she who helped him out and then supported him into the house. It was she who got him upstairs and into bed, and it was she who finally stilled his babble.

"I'm Going to Pack His Head in It."

"The poor man is burning up with a fever," she told the others, "and fevers are my long suit. Get me some towels and a lot of ice."

Bluze, who had watched the snake-charmer's deft ministrations with mingled amazement and suspicion, inquired: "What are you going to do with ice? Ice ain't medicine."

"I'm going to pack his head in it."

Bluze was horrified. "Do you want to freeze his brain?"

Mrs. Strange turned on him angrily. "You get out of my way and mind your own business. 'Freeze his brain!'" With a sniff of indignation she pushed past the interloper.

But Bluze was waiting for her when she returned a few moments later with bowls and bottles and various remedies which she had commandeered. He summoned sufficient courage to block her way and inquire:

"What you got there, now, ma'am?"

Mrs. Strange glared at him balefully. With an effort at patience she inquired: "Say! What ails you, anyhow?"

Jones swallowed hard. "Understand, he's a friend of mine. No magic goes."

"Magic?"

"No—cockroaches or snakes' tongues, or—"

Mrs. Strange fingered a heavy chain bowl as if tempted to bounce it from Bluze's head. Then, not deigning to argue, she whisked past him and into the sickroom. It was evident from her expression that she considered the master of the house a harmless but offensive old busybody.

For some time longer Bluze hung about the sickroom; then, his presence being completely ignored, he risked further antagonism by telephoning for Jonesville's leading doctor. Not finding the physician at home, he sneaked out to the barn and, taking Paloma's car, drove away in search of him. It was fully two hours later when he returned to discover that Dave was sleeping quietly.

Dave slept for twenty hours, and even when he awoke it was not to a clear appreciation of his surroundings. At first he was relieved to find that the splitting pain in his head was gone, but imagined himself to be still in the maddening local train from Brownsville. By and by he recognized Paloma and Mrs. Strange, and tried to talk to them, but the connection between brain and tongue was interfered with, and he made a bad business of conversation. It seemed queer that he should be in bed at the Joneses'. When he had recovered from his surprise he turned his head and saw Mrs. Strange slumbering in a chair beside his bed; from her uncomfortable position and evident fatigue he judged that she must have kept a long and faithful vigil over him.

A little later Paloma, pale and heavy-eyed, stole into the room, and Dave's cheerful greeting awoke Mrs. Strange with a jerk.

"So! You're feeling better, aren't you?" the latter woman cried, heartily.

"Yes. How did I get here?" Dave asked. "I must have been right sick and troublesome to you."

Paloma smiled and nodded. "Sick! Why, Dave, you frightened us nearly to death! You were clear out of your head."

Mrs. Strange broke into his frowning meditation to ask, "How long since you had a night's sleep?"

"I— Oh, the prosecutor at Brownsville ain't let me alone a minute for a week."

"Umph! I thought so. You puzzled that pill-roller, but doctors don't know anything, anyhow. Why, he wanted to wake you up to find out what ailed you! I threatened to scald him if he did."

"I seem to remember talking a good deal," Dave ventured. "I reckon I—said a lot of foolish things." He caught the look that passed between his nurses and its significance distressed him.

Mrs. Strange continued: "That's how we guessed what your trouble was, and that's why I wouldn't let that fool doctor disturb you. Now that you've had a sleep and are all right again, I'm going home and change my clothes. I haven't had them off for two nights."

"Two nights!" Dave stared in bewilderment. Then he humbly apologized for the trouble he had caused, and tried to thank the women for their kindness.

He was shaky when, an hour later, he came downstairs for breakfast; but otherwise he felt better than for many days; and Bluze's open delight at seeing him did him as much good as the food he ate.

Dave spent part of the morning sunning himself on the porch, reading the papers with their exciting news. During his absence Paloma had done her best to spoil Montrosa, and among other marks of favor had allowed her free run of the yard, where the shade was cool and the grass fine, and where delicious tidbits were to be had from the kitchen for the mere asking. In consequence, Dave did not remain there long until he was discovered. Montrosa signaled, then trotted toward him with ears and tail lifted. Her delight was open and extravagant; her welcome was as enthusiastic as a horse could make it. Gone were her coquetry and airs; she nosed and nibbled Dave; she rubbed and rooted him with the violence of a battering-ram, and permitted him to hug her and murmur words of love into her velvet ears. She swapped confidence for confidence, too; and then, when he finally walked back toward the house, she followed closely, as if fearful that he might again desert her.

Phil Strange met the lovers as they turned the corner of the porch, and warmly shook Dave's hand. "Teeny—my wife—told me you was better," he began, "so I beat it out here. I hung around all day yesterday, waiting to see you, but you was batty."

"I was pretty sick," Dave acknowledged. "Mrs. Strange was mighty kind to me."

"Sick people get her goat. She's got a way with 'em and with animals, too. Why, Rajah, the big python with our show, took sick one year, and he'd have died sure only for her. Same with a lot of the other animals. She knows more'n any vet I ever saw."

"Perhaps I needed a veterinary instead of a doctor," Dave smiled. "I guess I've got some horse blood in me. See!" Montrosa had thrust her head under his arm and was waiting for him to scratch her ears.

"Well, I brought you some mail," Strange fumbled in his pocket for a small bundle of letters, explaining: "Blaze gave me these for you as I passed the post office."

Dave took the letters with a word of thanks, and thrust them carelessly into his pocket. "What seems to be the trouble?" he inquired.

"You remember our last talk? Well, them Mexicans have got me rattled. I've been trying everywhere to locate you. If you hadn't come home I'd have gone to the prosecuting attorney, or somebody."

"Then you've learned something more?"

Phil nodded, and his sallow face puckered with apprehension. "Rosa Morales has been to see me regular."

Dave passed an uncertain hand over his forehead. "I'm not in very good shape to tackle a new proposition, but—what is it?"

"We've got to get Mrs. Austin away from here."

"We? Why?"

"If we don't they'll steal her."

"Steal her?" Dave's amazement was patent. "Are you crazy?"

"Sometimes I think I am, but I've pumped that Morales girl dry, and I can't figure anything else out of what she tells me. Her and Jose expect to make a lump of quick money, jump to Mexico, get married, and live happy ever after. Take it from me, it's Mrs. Austin they aim to cash in on."

"Why—the idea's ridiculous!"

"Maybe it is and maybe it ain't," the fortune-teller persisted. "More than one rich Mexican has been grabbed and held for ransom along this river; yes, and Americans, too, if you can believe the stories. Anything goes in that country over there."

"You think Jose is planning to kidnap her? Nonsense! One man couldn't do such a thing."

"I didn't say he could," Phil defended himself, sullenly. "Remember, I told you there was somebody back of him."

"Yes, I remember, but you didn't know exactly who."

"Well, I don't exactly know yet. I thought maybe you might tell me."

There was a brief silence, during which Dave stood frowning. Then he appeared to shake himself free from Phil's suggestions.

"It's too utterly preposterous. Mrs. Austin has no enemies; she's a person of importance. If by any chance she disappeared—"

"She's done that very little thing," Strange declared.

"What?"

"She's disappeared—anyhow, she's gone. Yesterday when I saw you was laid up and couldn't help me, I phoned her ranch; somebody answered in Spanish, and from what I could make out they don't know where she is."

Dave wondered if he had understood Strange aright, or if this could be a trick of his own tired brain. Choosing his words carefully, he said: "Do you mean to tell me that she's missing and they haven't given an alarm? I reckon you didn't understand the message, did you?"

Strange shrugged. "Maybe I didn't. Suppose you try. You take the flago."

Dave went to the telephone, leaving Phil to wait. When he emerged from the house a few moments later, it was with a queer, set look upon his face.

"I got 'em," he said. "She's gone—left three days ago."

"Where did she go?"

"They wouldn't tell me."

"They wouldn't?" Strange looked up sharply.

"Wouldn't or couldn't." The men eyed each other silently; then Phil inquired:

"Well, what do you make of it?"

"I don't know. She wasn't kidnaped, that's a cinch, for Dolores went with her. I think we're exciting ourselves unduly."

The little fortune-teller broke out excitedly: "Yes we are! Why do you suppose I've been playing that Morales girl? I tell you there's something crooked going on. Don't I know? Didn't I wise you three weeks ago that something like this was coming off?" It was plain that Phil put complete faith in his powers of divination, and at this moment his earnestness carried a certain degree of conviction. Dave made an effort to clear his tired brain.

"Very well," he said. "If you're so sure, I'll go to Las Palmas. I'll find out all about it, and where she went. If anybody has dared to—" He drew a deep breath and his listlessness vanished; his eyes gleamed with a hint of their customary fire. "I reckon I've got one punch left in me." He turned and strode to his room.

As Dave changed into his service clothes he was surprised to feel a new vigor in his limbs and a new strength of purpose in his mind. When he stood in his old boots and felt the familiar drag of his cartridge-belt, when he tested his free muscles, he realized that he was another man. Even yet he could not put much faith in Phil Strange's words—nevertheless, there might be a danger threatening Alaire; and if so, it was time to act.

Phil watched his friend saddle the bay mare, then as Dave tied his rifle scabbard to its thong he laughed nervously.

"You're loaded for bear."

The horseman answered, grimly: "I'm loaded for Jose Sanchez. If I lay hands on him I'll learn what he knows."

"You can't get nothing out of a Mexican."

"No? I've made Filipinos talk. Believe me, I can be some persuasive when I try." With that he swung a leg over Montrosa's back and rode away.

CHAPTER XVIII.

A Surprise.

Law found it good to feel a horse between his knees. He had not realized until now how long Montrosa's saddle had been empty. The sun was hot and friendly, the breeze was sweet in his nostrils as he swept past the smiling fields and out into the mesquite country. Heat waves danced above the patches of bare ground; insects sang noisily from every side; far ahead the road ran a wavering course through a deceitful mirage of rippling ponds. It was all familiar, pleasant; it was home. With every mile he covered his strength and courage increased.

Such changes had come into his life since his last visit to Las Palmas that it gave him a feeling of serenity to discover no alteration in the ranch. He had somehow felt that the buildings would look older, that the trees would have grown taller, and so when he finally came in sight of his destination he reined in to look.

Behind him he heard the hum of an approaching motor, and he turned to behold a car racing along the road he had just traveled. The machine was running fast, as a long streamer of choking dust gave evidence, and Dave soon recognized it as belonging to Jonesville's prosecuting attorney. As it tore past him its owner shouted something, but the words were lost. In the automobile with the driver were several passengers, and one of these likewise called to Dave and seemed to motion him to follow. When the machine slowed down a half-mile ahead and veered abruptly into the Las Palmas gateway, Dave lifted Montrosa to a run, wondering what pressing necessity could have induced the prosecuting attorney to risk such a reckless burst of speed.

Dave told himself that he was unduly apprehensive; that Strange's warnings had worked upon his nerves. Nevertheless, he continued to ride so hard that almost before the dust had settled he, too, turned into the shade of the palms.

Yes, there was excitement here; something was evidently very much amiss, judging from the groups of ranch-hands assembled upon the porch. They were clustered about the doors and windows, peering in. Briefly they turned their faces toward Law; then they crowded closer, and he perceived that they were not talking. Some of them had removed their hats and held them in their hands.

Dave's knees shook under him as he dismounted; for one sick, giddy instant the scene swam before his eyes; then he ran toward the house and up the steps. He tried to frame a question, but his lips were stiff with fright. Heedless of those in his path, he forced his way into the house, then down the hall toward an open door, through which he saw a room full of people. From somewhere came the shrill wailing of a woman; the house was full of hushed voices and whisperings. Dave had but one thought. From the depths of his being a voice called Alaire's name until his brain rang with it.

President Wilson has expressed his opinion

of the duty relating to savings bank deposits in these true sentences:

"If a man does not provide for his children, if he does not provide for all those dependent upon him, and if he has not that vision of conditions to come, and that care for the days that have not yet dawned, which we sum up in the whole idea of thrift and saving, then he has not opened his eyes to any adequate conception of human life. We are in this world not to provide for ourselves, but for others and that is the basis of economy."

OLD GLORY

The Colors
That Do Not Run

CLEAR THE TRACK

Bill Haywood—chief torch bearer for the infamous I. W. W.—indignantly protests that the rumors of German money and German influence behind the incipient I. W. W. rebellion in the west are utterly without foundation.

Bill wastes his breath. The American people are not in the slightest concerned over Bill's protestations of lily white virtue; nor do they give so much as one tinker's dam whether "German money and German influence" are behind the eloquent coincidence of I. W. W. terrorism and German-American war. They know tbat the net result of this sudden, general and manifestly well planned and well financed I. W. W. revolt throughout America will "lend aid to comfort the enemy." Wherefore they are not primarily inquiring into Bill Haywood's conscience (whatever that is and wherever it may bave been anciently stored) nor are they primarily interested in dissective inquiry to discover whether or not the leopard has changed his spots. They are primarily intent upon planting a hobnailed heel on tbe neck of any movement which would devitalize America in her hour of crisis, disorganize home solidarity and hearten the Prussian foe.

America needs metals to panoply herself for war. The I. W. W. would close her mines. From Arizona on the south and California on the west to Upper Michigan upon the north, majority American manhood says the mines shall do their bit. America needs grain. The I. W. W. would destroy her crops. And the farmers of two patriotic Dakotas—grimly armed—insist that the grains shall grow into harvests that shell bulk big for liberty.

Bill says "the attorney general is investigating outrages on tbe I. W. W." To Bill's sense of logic, an "outrage" would be the sort of recent experience undergone by Brother Alex and Sister Emma, now on their way to penitentiary vacations and later slated for probable deportation. We suspect that if the attorney general is "investigating," as Bill says, he is "investigating" outrages on Columbia.

So far as rights of patriotic labor are concerned, they shall be uncompromisingly protected in the United States, war or no war. No one shall take advantage of a "war" excuse to crucify the wage world upon a cross of thorns. But, by the same token, no one shall take advantage of our "war" necessities to crucify the Republic upon the cross of anarchy and domestic revolution. Labor knows full well that the I. W. W. never won it so much as a petty skirmish; and the I. W. W. knows that it takes true Labor's name in vain when it excuses sabotage by using "Labor's" brand.

Wherever the I. W. W. open fire in America these perilous days, it may expect to find patriotic citizenship prepared and ready. We shall not fight the Hun in Europe only to be overwhelmed by him at home.—Grand Rapids Herald.

We have many enemies, but not too many, says von Hindenburg. It does seem that Germany is entitled to have more and likely to get them.

Pershing's men have moved forward to a camp near the front lines. There'll be something doing when they make their next advance.

America, according to the government crop reports, will be the world's fodderland.

It seems up to US to take the "ill" out of Bill.

NORTH SIDE RESORTER WINS LITERARY FAME

Sara Teasdale's Poetry Voted Best Of American Efforts

Mrs. Ernest B. Filsinger (Sara Teasdale,) St. Louis poetess, now of New York and one of our regular summer visitors, has been awarded by the poetry society of America its annual prize for the best unpublished poem read at its montbly meetings during the 1916-1917 season.

The poems that won tbe prize were a group entitled "Songs Out of Sorrow." It was one of 16 to which the contest narrowed down. These 16 were printed and sent to the members of the society scattered all over tbe country. Their votes determined the award. Mrs. Fillsinger had two on the list of 16.

Sara Tessdale has won an undisputed place as one of the foremost contemporary American poets. Her poems have appeared for years in magazines of the first rank and three volumes of them have already been published. Tbe last one, "Rivers to the Sea," published in 1915, evoked enthusiastic comment.

W. Stanley Braithwaithe, in reviewing a year's poetry for the Boston Transcript, named one of her poems as among the twenty-one best specimens of verse published in 1911 in American magazines. The poem was "Helen of Troy." She is a member of the advisory board of the Poetry Society of America

BANKER'S LITTLE GIRL DIES

FINALLY SUCCUMBS AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Skilled Medical Aid Fails to Save Infant Daughter of A. D. Crimmins—Funeral Saturday

Marjorie Gertrude, the three year old daughter of A. D. Crimmins, died last Wednesday night, July 18th, at seven o'clock.

The little girl suffered from sugar diabetes and had been ill since the 15th of last May. Every effort was made to improve her condition, and she had been taken several times to a Chicago specialist, but, as it so sadly proved, without avail.

The funeral was held Saturday morning at nine o'clock from St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, amid a great profusion of beautiful floral offerings from the family's many friends. The little body was then laid in its final resting place in Brookside. The deepest and most sincere sympathy of the community goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Crimmins in their hour of bereavement.

BATHERS, ATTENTION TO THIS APPEAL

New Spring Board Needed For Light House Dock

Lovers of the exhilerating morning "dip," will, we are sure, rally to the assistance of our little local band of swimming enthusiasts who are endeavoring to provide the light house dock on the west side of the channel in Lake Michigan with up-to-date diving equipment.

Through the efforts of these gentlemen, a fine, big cypress spring board has already been secured and is on its way to Charlevoix. But another is needed, as is also a diving ladder and a slide should be built into the lake as a further assistance to the sport. But this will take more money than the local boosters of the idea have at their command. Won't some one or ones who appreciate what these conditions will mean to the attractiveness of our bathing beach kindly come across? Contributions may be left with W. C. Bellinger, at his store on Bridge street, or with Walter Real at Sears' garage.

M. E. Sunday School

There was a very interesting program at the M. E. Sunday school last Sunday. The opening exercises were conducted by Class 12, composed mostly of young married people, known as the "None Such" class. There were thirty members present and on the platform when the orchestra began playing the opening selection.

The program consisted mostly of music and songs by the class and a selection by the None Such male quartette. Everybody was in the best of spirits and reported a fine time.

You cannot afford to miss these interesting programs. Next Sunday, Mrs. Beeman's class will give the opening exercises, which you can be assured will be fine, so everybody come.

ALGERIA A NEW FRANCE.

Result of a Century of Work Against African Savagery.

After a vast expenditure in lives and treasure France is beginning to reap its reward from the conquest of Algeria. A hundred years ago the northern African country was the abode of barbarism, and piracy was the principal occupation of its people. The United States was the first nation to revolt against the payment of tribute to the dey of Algiers for "protection" to commerce, and after a brief but thrilling conflict the buccaneer chieftain was brought to his knees.

In 1827 the French took up the white man's burden in Algiers and after a struggle of thirty years subdued the country. Under the monarchy and the second empire the government of Algeria was based solely on force, but the republic won the allegiance of the Algerians by withdrawing the military government from all the settled portions of the country, which have since been treated very much as if they were a part of France, each department sending one senator and two deputies to the French chambers. Algerians, save for a few of the tribesmen in the remote interior, are now loyal Frenchmen, regardless of color, race or religion. Algeria also supplies vast quantities of foodstuffs and metals to France.—New York World.

What Tipping Means.

Fourteen thousand six hundred per cent is a pretty high rate of rent! But it's just what you pay when you hand the cloakroom pirate a jitney for watching your hat for an hour. Do you get us? Well, it's just like this: When you pay 10 cents for the loan of a dollar for a year you pay 10 per cent. But if you pay 10 cents for the loan of a dollar for a day you pay 365 times as high a rate, or 3,650 per cent. It's just the same way with your $3 hat. When you pay 5 cents on it for an hour you are paying the rate of $438 a year, counting only twelve business hours a day. And this is at the rate of 14,600 per cent. Tell this to the cloakroom girl today and get her "comeback." But don't blame us if she's a bit saltpy.—Worcester Post.

Pirates and Steamships.

It was the advent of the steamship that finally gave the pirates their death-blow in Malayn. Every schoolboy ought to know the story of the first steamer off Borneo. Some pirate ships saw a steamer in the distance and, observing the smoke from its funnels, thought the ship was on fire and therefore helpless. They gave chase, but they were amazed to see the strange sea beast come up steadily against the wind and vomit fire from its guns. It was generally agreed in polite pirate circles that the white man had played a mean trick upon a successful and honorable body of traders.

Safe.

Miss Fortyold awoke in the middle of the night to find a burglar ransacking her effects. Miss Fortyold did not scream, for she prided herself, among other things, upon her courage.

Pointing to the door with a dramatic gesture, she exclaimed:

"Leave me at once!"

The burglar politely retreated a step and said, "I had no intention of taking you."—New York Times.

Relief.

"What's your opinion about votes for women?"

"It's a great proposition," replied Mr. Meekton. "It has smashed all the arguments Henrietta used to give me about the precious hours I spent talking politics."—Washington Star.

Appearances.

"Is he henpecked?"

"I think he must be. His wife is a very sweet, delicate, inoffensive, tactful woman, who never says 'Boo!' to an outsider."—Life.

The Kind.

"The gardener said the housekeeper have the same but contrary cry."

"What is that?"

"My flower is out."—Baltimora American.

WHAT DRAFTED MEN MUST DO

PERSONS DRAFTED AND WHO CLAIM EXEMPTIONS

Must Make Claim in Person—Drafted Men Must Make Exemption Claims Within Seven Days

Persons subject to exemption, either because of physical disability or included in the president's proclamation of those who are automatically to be released from the draft, must themselves establish their claims. Some fine distinctions too, are drawn in setting forth a valid claim.

This is the general scheme of the draft operation and applies to every person whose name is on the list as copied from the registration cards made June 5.

Immediately the numbers are announced in Washington the local boards will mail at once a card notifying the men selected for physical examination. The boards have the authority to appoint additional examining physicians, one for approximately each eighty persons to be examined daily. Forms supplied by the provost marshal's office will be used, and each person notified, unless sick or unavoidably absent from the district must report in person to the headquarters. The one exception is in the case of persons automatically subject to exemption. But, they, too, must report if in the district.

Two Exemptions Possible

In all cases where the examining physician holds the registrant physically deficient, the board has the authority to order a re-examination by another physician, and if he agrees with the former examination then the board may, in its discretion, discharge the persons. In all cases, the local boards have authority to overrule the physicians.

Ten days are given the local boards to make the physical examinations, the regulations suggesting that one-third of those called report on the fifth day after the notices are mailed, one-third the sixth day, and the last third the seventh day.

If absent from the district, or unavoidably detained elsewhere by sickness or other valid reason, the registrant may ask his board that he be examined by some other board in whose jurisdiction he happens to be. This notice must be sent to the home board within ten days. The examining board's findings must be sent back to the home board.

In Case of Illness

In case of sickness within the district the patient must so notify the board within the ten days. The board then may send a physician to the sick man to look him over or it may, upon his recovery order him to headquarters for the examination.

In all cases where no reply is received from persons notified within the ten days the board is compelled to list the persons as physically fit and subject to the draft.

The physical examination may be postponed, subject to further regulations, in the cases of claims for exemption filed by alien enemies, men in the war service of the United States, legislative, judicial or executive officers of the United States, any state of territory of the United States and of the District of Columbia, or friendly alien who hasn't taken out his first naturalization papers.

Make Claims in Person

In all such cases, however, it is incumbent on the person so subject to exemption to make the claim himself.

If any such claim for exemption under this classification is not allowed by the local board then the person is cited to appear not earlier than five days nor more than seven days after receiving the notice for the physical examination.

It is within the discretion of the board to issue three classes of exemption certificates—absolute, conditional and temporary.

One very important point to remember is that the claims of exemption set forth on the registration cards of June 5 have no standing before the local board. All claimants for exemption must fill out the new forms that will be supplied them on appearing before the board.

Seven Days of Grace

All claims for exemption must be made on or before the seventh day after the person has received his notice to appear before the board for the physical examination.

Neither a board member or an examining physician will be permitted to participate in the examination of any person called who is related to him by blood or marriage nearer than second cousin.

Some fine definitions are drawn in describing the persons who are subject to the automatic exemption.

In the list of officers of the United States and the states and territories the law defines "officer" as any person holding a "legislative, judicial, or executive office, created by the constitution or laws of the United States or any of the several states or territories."

All such persons, too, must file with the local boards within ten days after claiming exemption an affidavit, under oath, setting forth the office held, the date of election or appointment, and the date his office expires.

Other Exemptions

Other classes subject to the automatic exemption are thus defined:

"Regular or duly ordained ministers of religion"—Each such person must file his claim within ten days. He must give the name of church, religious organization by which ordained, the time and place of ordination, and must still be in the business regularly as a "vocation." He must present corroboratory affidavits also from heads of two families residing within the district over which he ministers.

The regulations read:

"The words 'regular or duly ordained ministers of religion' do not include a person who irregularly or incidentally preaches and teaches the principles of religion of a church, religious sect or organization; nor do the words include a person who may have been duly ordained a minister in accordance with the ceremonial rite or discipline of a church, religious sect, or organization, but who does not regularly, as a vocation, preach and teach the priciples of religion and administer the ordinence of public worship as embodied in the creed or principles of the church, sect or organization."

Students of Divinity

Students of divinity—They must file an affidavit from the president, dean or head of the theological or divinity school setting forth that on May 18, 1917, they were regular students in such schools. As in all other cases of exemptions, the affidavits must be filed within ten days after being notified to report.

Persons in the military or naval service of the United States—They must file an affidavit setting forth in what branch of the service they are engaged, the date of enlistment or commission that they were so engaged at the time of receiving the notice to appear before the board.

In this class are included the following:

All officers and enlisted men of the regular army, the regular army service, the officers' reserve corps, and the enlisted reserve corps; all officers and enlisted men of the national guard and national reserves organized by the military bureau of the war department, all officers and enlisted men of the navy, the marine corps and the coast guards; all officers and enlisted men of the naval militia, naval reserve force, marine corps reserve, and national naval volunteers recognized by the navy department; all officers of the public health service detailed by the secretary of the treasury for duty either with the army or the navy, and all of the personnel of the lighthouse service and the coast and geodetic survey transferred by the president to the service and jurisdiction of the war department or of the navy department.

Alien Enemy Exemptions

Subjects of Germany residing in the United States—All such must present an affidavit, setting forth the date and place of birth, date of immigration into the United States, whether he has taken out his first papers, and his present address. No subject of Germany residing in the United States, whether he has taken out his first papers or not, will be accepted for service.

All other residential aliens who have not taken out their first papers—Affidavits must show date and place of birth, date of immigration into the United States, whether first papers have been taken out, and present address.

The local boards are given authority to issue conditional exemption and to recall exemption certificate entirely if in their opinion the cause of the temporary exemption has been removed. In case temporary exemption certificates are issued the person holding may be required to report at stated intervals to the local boards.

Other Officials Exempt

The boards also are authorized to issue certificates of exemption to all county and municipal authorities other than appointive officers, who must present an affidavit showing the date of election by popular vote. This class includes all elective officials of towns, villages and smaller divisions throughout the state.

Also persons employed in the United States mail service, upon presentation of a statement for the foreman or higher officers that their services are required in the proper handling of the mails.

Also artificers and workmen employed in the armories, arsenals, and navy yards of the United States, upon presentation of affidavits signed by the commandant or officer in charge of the plant that the services of such are required.

Also all employees of the United States government in every department of the service, upon the presentation of affidavits from the heads of bureaus or departments that such men are needed in the service.

Miscellaneous Class

The miscellaneous class subject to exemption includes, furthermore, pilots and mariners actually employed in the service of any citizen or merchant within the United States. In all such cases proper affidavits must be presented from the head of the firm or corporation setting forth the exact duties of the person seeking exemption. It is then within the discretion of the boards to determine whether such person actually is required for such service.

Need Three Affidavits

Those with a wife, child or children dependent upon them for support must file three affidavits with the exemption board. Their own affidavit, to be filed within ten days must give name, age and place of residence of self, wife and children, must state that he is the husband and father and that they are dependent upon his labor for support.

There must be an affidavit from his wife giving the above facts and stating the amount of her own income and that of the children exclusive of any sums received from him that her husband's income from which she receives her support is mainly the fruit of his mental or physical labors.

The third affidavit must come from a head of the family living in the district. It must contain the above information and state the grounds for his belief in the information.

Wife May File Claim

It is possible for a wife to claim exemption for her husband. In that case the affidavits of two heads of families must accompany her affidavit. A third person outside the family may claim exemption for the man. His affidavit must be supported by that of the wife and two heads of families and must be accompanied by the marriage certificate, or certified copy, or the affidavits of two persons stating they were present at the marriage ceremony.

Sons of widows dependent upon them may claim exemption. They must file an affidavit giving the name, age, and place of residence of self and mother, the approximate amount expended the previous year for her support, and the amount of her own income and must state that his income from which she was supported was mainly the fruit of his mental or physical labor. She must make a similar affidavit and there must be one from a head of a family in the district.

Mother May File Claim

As in the case of a wife, the mother may claim exemption. Her affidavit must be supported by heads of two families. When an outside person claims exemption for the son of a widow, his affidavit must be accompanied by that of the widow and heads of two families.

The provisions of the law regarding sons of aged or infirm parents are practically the same as in the case of a widow. The character of the infirmity, if any, must be stated. The same provisions hold for claim to exemption by the parents or by an outside party.

BUILDING A HOTBED.

Valuable Aid to Getting An Early Start With Vegetables.

"As an adjunct to the growing of vegetables the hotbed is almost invaluable," says Professor M. F. Abearn, Keuses Agricultural college. "It enables the gardener to grow crops that require a long season to mature, such as tametoes, celery, peppers and egg plants. The hotbed also may be used to advantage in starting early cabbage, salsa, cucumber and muskmelon plants.

"Hotbeds may be constructed in a number of ways. One of the most common and serviceable is the pit method. The hotbed should be placed on the south side of a building or other good windbreak. Care should be taken that it has good drainage. Three feet by six feet is a convenient size for a sash and as many of them are used as desired. The frame should be twelve to fifteen inches high at the back and eight to ten inches in front. The sash may be glass or muslin.

"The best for hotbeds is commonly supplied by the fermentation of horse manure. That from highly fed horses is desirable. Straw to the amount of from one-third to one-half of the mixture should be added, as the manure will not heat if it is too solid. It should be piled in a long, narrow, square topped pile and if very dry should be moistened.

"If the weather is cold and the manure does not ferment readily add a little hen manure or warm water to one part of the pile. In order to insure uniform fermentation the pile should be turned occasionally and all lumps broken. When the pile is steaming throughout, which is usually in from ten to twelve days, it is ready for use.

"Dig a pit two to three feet deep, depending on the time of year the bed is to be used, and the same size as the bed desired. For common use, such as growing early tomatoes, radishes and lettuce, early in March is the time to start the hotbed. Hotbeds prepared after the first week in March should have an eighteen inch pit.

"Upon the bottom of the pit place a layer of straw or leaves two or three inches deep. Next place a layer of the fermented manure eighteen or twenty inches thick. Above this put a layer of loam soil four to eight inches deep in which the plants are to be grown."

AT A CHINESE INN.

The Scene In the Interior of the One Roomed Mud Hut.

The building was a long, one storied mud hut, with thatched roof. We entered. Behold what the frontiersman had created! The long room was the scene of homely industry. From the center rafter hung a big oil lamp, shedding its rays over a patriarchal family as busy as a hive of bees. By the clay stove sat the grandfather feeding the fire with twigs and leading a brood of children playing on a dirt floor packed hard, swept clean. From one corner came the merry whir of grinding millstones as a blindfolded donkey walked round and round, while a woman in red with a wonderful headdress gathered up the heaps of yellow cornmeal that oozed from the gray stones. More women in red threw the bright meal high in the air, winnowing it of its chaff; others leaned over clay mortars, pounding condiments with stone pestles.

Men were hurrying here and there with firewood, cooking for the travelers. One end of the room was reserved for these wayfarers, but the kang at the other end was divided into sections. From each rafter over each section swung quaint little cradles. In each cradle was a little brown baby, each baby tended by a larger child. Far away from the loud clamor of the western world we fell asleep in a clean inner room, to the soft sound of swinging cradles and grinding millstones.—Atlantic Monthly.

She is painted a battleship gray like other boats of her class in the government service and has a rapid fire gun mounted forward, like the first two craft that visited this port recently. She is also fitted for wireless.

The "Raboco" is about 65 feet long, of "whale-boat" type and is equipped with a 75-85 h. p. kerosene burning Kahlemberg engine. While not a speedy craft she is entirely seaworthy. The nature of her commission is of course not known, but it is safe to say that she will give a good account of herself wherever she meets up with enemy craft.

CAUGHT THIRTY BASS IN ABOUT FOUR HOURS

Wonderful Catches of Fish Being Made in Intermediate Lakes

A party consisting of Drs. Jones, Diamond, Thomas and Lemley, together with landlord VanSkiver and guide "Rock" Miller, fishing in the lakes at Ellsworth last Tuesdny forenoon brought in one of the most beautiful catches ever seen in northern Michigan.

The party left the hotel at eight o'clock and returned in time for dinner with thirty bass, the entire bunch averaging n trifle better than two pounds each.

If the members of the party had been of the class commonly called fish-hogs, they could easily have secured their limit of ten bass each, but being good sportsmen, they decided they had plenty snd quit while the fish were still biting good.

Michigan is full of good fishing points and Ellsworth ranks second to none, as any one who has spent n dny on the surrounding lakes will testify.

HOW

To Run Furnace Smoothly and With Comfort

ONE house owner writes: In our heater we have a damper in funnel, one at top of heater, one in fuel door aad one in ash pit door; also at top of heater is a small door whicb whea open allows air to get into funnel, thus checking draft. This is between funael damper snd oae top of heater. Wo have foarteen radiators in a house of twelve rooms and two bathrooms.

Assuming your radiators are large enough and full of water, yoa should have ao great trouble. However, it is very important to keep the air out of the radiators in the top floor, and we test ours oa that floor every day by opeuing the little air valve on radiator uutil the water flows in each one, then closing. If the water does not come there is quite likely not enough in the system to fill all. We then run more in until it shows in overflow pipe.

Another important thing is to keep the ashes from off thn shelves nt the top of heater. We have a small door for each shelf admitting of cleaning, which we do with a wire brush on long handle. We brusb shelves every morning, taking onn miuute to do it. While doing this have every damper wide open so as to draw the ashes away. The damper in funael at all other times wo keep closed just as tight as wn can get it, there being sufficieat space by hole in middlo of it and nround it to take off gas and mako fire burn. We are particular to keep heater well shaken aud well cleaned out in ashpit, as we get the best results by good bottom draft. Shake durlug day if necessary, but surely late in the evening, getting fire in good condition for night and putting on fresh coal on retiring. We then leave the dampers as follows: Fuanel closed, top of henter closed, little door betweeu slightly open, allowing some air into fuanel; nsh pit damper open the very least. The water now in heater is nbout 170 degrees aad in the morning should be about 130 degrees.

In the moruing close little door at top, open damper at top of heater, open nsh pit door, leaving damper in funnel closed tight, and while we are getting the kitchen rauge a-going the heater is warming up nicely, and when next we go to the cellar we find 150 to 170 degrees of heat. We then open some of the radiators on the lower floor that we closed the night before. This we always do, as we think our plants do better if not in too hot a place at night. As for manaaging the heater during the day, it depeuds on the weather, but anyway we endeavor to obtain results hy use of dnoper in ashpit door, believing bottom draft most economical and carries less waste heat into the chimney. Hope this will be of some use to you.

FOOT TREATMENT.

Why Your Feet Go to Sleep and How to Wake Them.

There is hardly n man or womnn who has uot experienced the strange feeling of having his or her foot asleep. Few of them really know what is taking place. Though the pain is a straage one, the cause is explained readily.

The strangeuess of the "foot golag to sleep" is duc to a mechanical ob struction of the great sciatic nerve. When we sit for a long time with onr legs crossed or with the back of the thigh pressing upou the edge of a chair the sciatic nerve is sqaeezed.

The sciatic nerve is the largest in the body. It springs from the small of the back and supplies nearly the whole of the nerves of tho leg and foot. Thn sciatic, like all other uerves, is really a great bundle of nerve fibers, each of which has its own sheath.

The whole nerve is elastic, and pressure on it will flatten it, as a rubber hose is flattened by pressure. The nerve fibers nro like bundles of thrend, but finer. They run longitudiually, each thread having its endiug somewhere lu n muscle or in the skin and passing, without branching or communicating with the other threads with which it is wrapped up, straight to its nucleus in some nerve center of the brain or spinal cord.

How these uerves carry sensation is not known, but the operatiou is similar to that of messages passlug hy electricity over n telegraph wire. If a nerve fiber be cut it no longer enries sensation. Sensatiou can niso be cut off by compressing n nerve, for the nerve matter that does the work is soft, aad tho sheaths that inclose it are firm, bnt elastic. Pressure at one polat on a aerve is similar in its results to pressure on a ruhber hose through which water is passing. In the latter case the flow of water is stopped. In the former thn soft nerve matter within the sheath is pushed apart, so that the continuity is actually broken and the messages can no longer pass to or fro over it.

When the pressure on the nerve is released the soft contents of the sheath gradually return to their place.

Abandoned Alfred—They say that steady dripping of water 'll wenr away a stone. Dreamy Pete—Jes' think, then, wot'd happen to a man's stomach hy ponrin' glassfals inter it!"

We are made for co-operation, like feet, like hands, like eyelids, like the rows of the upper and lower teeth.—Marcus Aurelius.

AGENTS REPORT BACKWARD CROPS

MAGGOTS RAISING HAVOC WITH BEAN CROP

Much Buckwheal Being Sown in Some Sections—Corn Late on Account of Weather

Our resders may be intersted in the reports of some of the county farm agents sa just published by the war preparedness board. They present a not aitogether attractive picture of crop conditions due to the long cold spring and continued wet.

Emmet and Charlevoix Counties
(Geo. A. Kilborn, Agent)

Weather has been pretty good for the last week, hardly warm enough for corn, but other crops making good growth. Considerabie hay cut, mostly sweet clover, alfaifa and orchnrd grass. Hay a big crop. Rye beginning to turn in aome fields. Late potatoes just nicely up for cultivating. Appears to be a good stand. Generally had good stands of beans but the bean maggot and eut worma are doing considerable damage. Corn very slow—very little growth except in a few sheltered places. Saw a field or two in south part of Charlevoix county that were about knee high, but most of it is about 6 inches tall. Farmers are all busy with cultivation at present.

Antrim, Otsego, Montmorency
(R. D. Bailey, Agent)

Grains looking normal. Potatoes very encouraging. Too much being charged for Paris Green and arsenate of lead. Prices probably advanced unnecessarily by some retailers to consumer and by some wholesalers to dealers under scare of war prices. Because of what he will have to put into the crop in expensive seed, expensive labor to plant, care and dig, expensive living for himself while crop is growing, and unnecessarily high priced insecticides and fungicides, the farmer should have been guaranteed a mimimum price for potatoes of one dollar a bushel. Should potatoes bring much less there will be a lot of farmers who will be in severe financial straits, and there will be too few potatoes planted in 1918. Haying began Monday morning. Doubtful if there will be a ripe ear of corn in my territory. The farmers with a silo will be fortunate this year.

Manistee County
(Frank Sandhammer, Agent)

Corn planting was much delayed in this section and so corn is small. Hay is being made. Clover is heavy but timothy not so good. Prospects for a good crop of potatoes are excellent. Beans have been injured some by the heavy rains which washed some seed out and covered some. Cut worms and bean maggots have done some injury. Prospects are good for apples and cherries.

Wexford County
(G. E. Piper, Agent)

Crop conditions much more favorable—due to a few days warm weather. Corn is very backward yet, and but little will ripen unless we have unusually good fall weather. The bean fields uf the county do not average over 75 per cent of a stand. Potatoes are growing in good shape.

Grand Traverse and Kalkaska
(M. E. Duckles, Agent)

Weather conditions are now favorable for nearly all crops. Potatoes are doing especially well, but corn and beans have not yet recovered from the early setback. Hay harvest is in full blast with good crop. Cherries have continued to drop and are ripening unevenly. Strawberries are of good quality and yielding well, although area planted to that fruit in this section is at present small, due to serious failures in the past. Interest in Red Rock wheat indicates that wheat growing will be revived on a larger scale this fall. Many farmers are asking for pedigreed seed.

Leelanau and Benzie Counties
(A. W. Meberl, Agent

Part of this week very cool. Corn and beans need more warm weather. Corn on lighter soil making some headway bnt not what it ought to for this period of the season. Late planting of potatoes coming up and looking good. A few old bugs showing on volunteers. Strawberry picking in full swing—a good crop and fine quality. Haying fully two weeks later than usual. Oats and fall wheat looking good.

Making Life Pleasant.

"Surely you don't wish to be rich beyond the dreams of avarice?"

"Oh, no," replied Mr. Dubwaite thoughtfully. "I'm not greedy by nature. I'd merely like to be rich enough to have a private physician who would play golf with me every day and let me beat the socks off him for fear of losing his job."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Mr. Farmer:

Don't forget that we are selling five shovel cultivators. They are priced to sell and we can convince you, if you give us a chance.

We have some binder twine on hand that was bought last winter which we are selling at about the wholesale price today. Don't delay buying until you have to use it. Buy now and save money.

Why Some of Us Are Color Blind.

That part of tho eye called the retina is divided into little structures, some of which can perceive a slowly moving ray of light. Others can see only medium or rapidly moving waves. The slow waves look red, the medium green or yellow and the rapid waves blue or violet. When any of these delicate eye structures loso the power of visualizing the colors which they were destined to see the eye'a owner becomes color blind, being unable to differentiate between red or green or blue.

Dressing For Grass Lands.

Manure as a top dressing for grass lands may be applied whenever conditions in the field will permit, but the Pennsylvania State college experiment station recommends that the application be made in the fall or winter rather than in the spring.

A Woman Did It.

A lesson to landlords is this. A woman did it. She wanted the house papered. The landlord talked about the paper shortage and took his rent and went.

The next month when he called he found the house beautifully papered. He was pleased and said so. The woman smiled. She walked to the wall and moved a picture aside. Beneath the picture was a grimy square of the old paper. The woman had papered around every picture in the house. As she paid the month'a rent she gave notice that she would move the next month.—Philadelphia North American.

SUCCESS.

Show me a young man who has not succeeded at first and has then gone and risen and I will back that man to do better than those who succeeded at the first trial.—Charles James Fox.

SAGE TEA BEAUTIFIES AND DARKENS HAIR

Don't Stay Gray! It Darkens So Naturally that Nobody can Tell.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

LOTOWANA II HAS TO BE DRAGGED THROUGH MUD

Future Patrol Boat Here From Alton, Ill., A Staunch Craft—Rated A-1 by Government Experts

The Lotowana II (Lotowana, by the way, being the Indian name for the lotus flower,) owned by George H. Grussing, a Chicago architect, lies at Sears' dock in Round Lake, having come all the way from Alton, Ill., with the owner and his wife as sole crew. The craft has been passed on by the naval department of the U. S. government and will be taken into the service shortly as a patrol boat. This is not the first time she has been in this port, having come through from New York last year on her way from St. Augustine, Fla.

The Lotowana is 65 feet long with 12 foot beam and 5 1-2 foot draft and is officially rated at twenty-two tons. She is mucb more stoutly built than her size requires, her timbers being 2 1-4 inch by 8 iach white oak. Down in St. Louis on her Florida cruise a year ago last fall, they called her an ice breaker. The government have pronounced her tbe best built boat on Lake Michigan for her size. She is equipped with twin screws, driven by a pair of ninety h. p. Sterling gasoline engines. She is a one man boat—being electrically controlled and lighted the juice furnished from storage batteries charged by a generator driven by the engine. Under the after deek, she carries two 80 gallon capacity gasoline tanks and a 100 gal. fresh water tank, as she was built originally for use on the coast. Her rudder and screws and their bearings are bronze and cost nearly as much as though they had been cast out of gold.

She is a comfortable, roomy craft, with sleeping accommodations for eleven persons, including her crew. Inside woodwork is mahogany throughout. Aft is the owner's cabin toliet ahead of this, then main saloon with berths and galley forwnrd, with combined motor room and crew quarters and crew toilet forward of the galley.

The Lotowana has the honor of being the only boat that has passed through the Illinois-Michigan canal, between LaSalle nnd Joliet, work on which was abandoned by the government some time ago. She came through this way from Alton on the trip north, completing her journey by way of the Chicago drainage canal. It took five days to get through the abandoned canal, a distance of 55 miles. She made 44 miles of the distance in four hours nnd the rest of the way she had to be dragged through the mud, which cost her owner about $250.00. When she passed through the locks on the Chicago canal she was boarded, as is the custom now in these wnr times, by a squad of ten soldiers, who remained on board until the locks had been passed. This practice is to mimimize the danger of hypenated citizens tampering with the main arteries of our commerce, canal locks being extremely vitnl points in our communication lines.

THREE HUNDRED WILL GRADUATE

TO BECOME OFFICERS IN UNCLE SAM'S NEW ARMY

Some Changes Made in Location of Camps—Michigan's Quota Will Go To Fort Sheridan, Ill.

Two forward steps were taken last week at the Reserve Officers' Training camp, Fort Sheridan, Ill., toward the formation of the great new armies of the United States.

It was announced that the Illinois men, who were to be sent to Leon Springs, Texas, Aug. 27, will go to a second camp to be conducted there under Colonel W. J. Nicholson, Wisconsin and Michigan men also will attend.

Sunday night a list was announced containing 300 names, men recommended for appointment to provisional second lieutenancies in the regular army. The men are attending the camp at present.

There will be about 2,000 candidates in the second camp. It is possible that the size of the companies will be reduced to sixty-five, in order that the instructors may give greater attention to the individual.

Other Camps Changed

Sweeping changes in plans for the location of the second series of officers' training camps were announced by the Secretary of War at Washington on the recommendation of Adjutant General McCain.

Wisconsin-Michigan candidates will be sent to Fort Sheridan, Ill., instead of Fort Logan H. Roots, Ark.

Efforts will be made to have the government extend the number of candidates to be admitted to the camps as there are about 75,000 applicants and less than 20,000 places to fill.

Among the 300 names of men recommended for appointment from the present Fort Sheridan camp to provisional second lieutenancies, appears that of our former high school principal and fellow townsman, L. B. Aseltine.

In a letter received this week from H. A. Craig, who is now in Chicago, he states that he visited the camp about a week ago and says of Mr. Aseltine, whom he met there, that, except for the addition of a military mustache, he looks as if Uncle Sam's service agreed with him.

ANOTHER CHIMNEY SPARK FIRE

FIREMEN QUICKLY SMOTHER ROOF BLAZE

Cottage of Mrs. S. M. See on Dixon Avenue Only Slightly Damaged Last Thursday

An unusually strenuous alarm of fire Thursday morning at about ten o'clock brought a large crowd of curiosity seekers, insurance men and firemen to 428 Dixon Avenue—the cottage owned and occupied by Mrs. S. M. See.

The blaze was in the shingles around the chimney and although the wind was very slight, a large portion of the roof adjacent to the chimney had been damaged to a point calling for considerable repair before the department was able to reach the scene. No attempt was made to remove any of the furniture as the absence of wind made it evident that the flames would be quickly controlled. Mrs. See, was, however, taken from the house in her wheeled chair and removed to a place of safety.

We spoke of an absence of wind. This is partially true. A great deal of valuable breath was wasted by some of our sophisticated summer visitors in criticising the judgment of the fire officers in extinguishing the fire, commenting rather sneeringly that a garden hose was used in smothering some of the last smouldering bits of shingles. As a matter of fact, no great amount of water was necessary, as the fire was on the outside of the roof and was practically out at the first dash of the big stream. Excellent judgement was used throughout. As a matter of entertainment for our young visitors the affair was, of course, a frost.

LIGHT PROBLEM SERIOUS

LIKE THE POOR—ALWAYS WITH US

Genaral Shermao Said—Well You Koow—But Theo, He Never Lived in Charlevoix

When ths Courier started on the last lap of preparation for going to press this morning, ye ed thought for a wbile that it would be neceasary to call a special meeting of tbe council, as the machinery suddenly started to turn backwards and then atopped altogether. Today happens to be one of tbe off days for the city's denuded "saw-mill" and let us pause here to remark that nearly every day or some part of it, has been an off day for this antiquated mess of junk for some time past. Not siace the loss of the city printing has so much quiet and gloom settled down over the press room on a publication day.

However, word has come of "aetion" taken Monday nigbt at tbe council rooms, which may indieate that some faint glimmer of hope may be seen around the next corner. Meanwhile, hotels, mills, stores, printing offiees, factories and summer visitors wait in anxious, if somewhat irritating suspense. Here is a transcript of the momentous step:

"Moved by Alderman Benton, and acconded by Alderman Paddock that the reeommendation of a majority of the eleetrie light committee consisting of Aldermen Washbarn and Glassford (Alderman Geiken disaenting) to purehase one 120 h. p. Ingeo, semi-Diesel, two cycle, twin-eylinder crude oil engine of the Wortbington Pump and Machinery corporation for $7,598.00, be accepted and that the mayor and deputy city clerk be, and are hereby instructed to exeeute a proper contract for the purchase of the same."

Good—but in view of the three words in parenthesis abovc, we opine that at least one of the august body would render a signal scrvice to the constituency which he is presumed to represent by staying out on the lake in his boat for a very indefinite period of time—possibly approximating eternity.

Speaking seriously, though, what do you think of the situation, Mr. Man-About-Town, or haven't you thought. In the first place we are not guaranteed power from any source beyond the first of October. In the next place, even if the Rock Produet company should pass into other hands, it is not at all likely—in fact, it is almost a certainty that the new owners will not care to be burdened with the local light and power supply job—they will be making plenty of money from the rock business and will not need to hobble on a crutch. Then, we have the Richardi bogey staring us as malevolently in the eye as it was at this time last year. And meanwhile our light and power service ls of the "make and break" variety, like the motive impulse of a door bell. And the "brèak" part of it won't always be confined to the current either. It will ultimately break our summer business, break our merchants and such industries as we hsve been fortunnte enough to secure.

Wouldn't a few hundred picture post cards of the city plant in its present condition distributed around the country make a fine ad for the "Best Little City Anywhere," especially if accompanied by the statement that the largest government fish hatchery in the United States has been delayed in the erection of its buildings since the first of July, through failure of the city to keep the promises made at the time it leased the property to the government?

Renlly, it is about time that we came out of our Rip Van Winkle sleep and realized that our very livelihood is hanging on a matter, which, if talked of at all, is usually mentioned with a light laugh, ond dismissed as lightly as it is discussed.

STEERED FROM WAUGOSHANCE WITH A PAIL

Booth Compaoy's Boat Has Rough Going But Many Hands Halp Her Ioto Port

The Arbutus—fish tug belonging to the Booth Fiaheries Co., met with a mishap last Sunday when off Waugoshance.

She left here Saturday for St. Ignace and on her return trip Sunday morning she lost her rudder in the heavy seas and had to steer into Charlevoix by means of a pail at the end of a line. When she got into the channel here Sunday afternoon the crew got a line out and some of the bathers and coast guards towed her through. No other damage except to the rudder.

Don't be a business slacker, either.

MANY ACTIVITIES AT BEACH

RED CROSS WORK BRISKLY PROGRESSING

Several Social Functioos and Baneflts Precada Vaudeville Which Will be Chief Affair

A number of cbildren, who with tbeir parents are gueats at the Beach Hotel, held a bazaar there last Friday, where the little tots, all of whom were under nine years of age, displayed sewn and knitted articles of their own manufacture. Tbey very modestly planned only to raise $25.00, but the results exceeded their expectations as they took in over $100.00 which was turned over to the Red Cross society. They bave been industriously sewing and hour eaeh morning for some time and it is surprisingly how well made were the results of their faithful efforts. Many grown-ups would be put to shame.

At 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon of Friday, August 3rd and at 8:30 p. m. on August 4th, vaudeville performanees will be given at the Beach casino under the auspices and for the benefit of the Charlevoix auxilliary of the Red Cross association, from which it is expected a thousand dollars will be raised for the great work of mercy. Tickets are now on sale at the hotel offiee. Mr. Mahler of St. Louis is stage director and as excellent talent has been secured, a fine performanee is assured. The casino stage is being enlarged for the occasion.

As a supplement to the vaudeville itself, advertising spaee has been provided on the programs of which local merchants may avail themselves but prompt action is necessary. A few pages and half pages are still open.

Several parties have been given at the Beach hotel reeently among the most notable being that given by Mr. Walkenheim of New Orleans last Sunday evening at which about 30 people were present in the casino, and a birthday party given by Mr. Sam Molner, of Chicago, Tuesday evening, in honor of his daughter, Mrs. Reinhold. A large social affair is also planned for this evening.

The new swimming raft, which the proprietors of the Beach hotel had made and anchored out in front of the hotel, has proven immensely popular with the bathers: In fact time was hardly given for completing the raft by the eager enthusiasts.

Miss Doris Dunham, a nlece of Mrs. Shanahan's joined the party at Pontiac and eame on to Charlevoix with them, where she will spend the remainder of the summer.

Mr. Shanahan left here the forepart of last week with his car to bring Mrs. Shanahan and the boys home from Edwardsburg, Michigan, where they have been visiting relatives for some time past. He was accompanied on the down trip by R. W. Paddock, "Bowery Bill" Gallagher and James Parsons, aa far as Grand Rapids. Richard Shspton, who also made one of the party, went through to Cassopolis with him.

Mr. Shanahan says that thsy found no better roads anywhere than in Charlevoix county, with the exception of the cement boalovards in Ohio and Indiana. This is inspiring, but at the same time, we don't want Ohio and Indiana to "have anything" on us.

BAD FIRE NEAR IRONTON TUESOAY NIGHT

Tenant Cottage on Breezy Point Farm Burns

Tuesday evening, at 8:30 o'clock tbe tenant cottage on the Breezy Point farm caught fire from causea unknown and burned to the ground. The contents as well as the bullding were a total loss. A water bucket brigade was formed among the neighbors and residents of the farm, but their efforts proved ineffectual, owing to the atrong wind blowing. All inmates of the house were absent at the time. There waa an oil stove in the building, but it is not known whether or not the fire atarted from this.

The cottage was formerly the Sears cottage and was moved from the end of the point to the farm for use of tenant help some time ago. Eye-witnesses say that the blaze was most spectacular, the flames lighting up the surface of the lake for a great apace.

TURTLE DIP NOW THE RAGE

CAN YOUR LIZZIE DO A FLIP-FLOP?

If You Cao't Land Upside Down and Escape the Undertakar, You're No Driver

Tho city's garages have been working overtime lately, trying to keep pace with the owners of Lizzies aad other popular makes of gas wagoa, who seem to bo bent on destroying their possessions, presumably that they may purchase later models for future misuse.

An alarming number have beea reported for this week and last. Here are a few:

Ford with bent radius rod fails to answer the belm and goes in tbe ditch turning completsly over oa road near the Paddock farm.

Between county and Norwood roads, west of cemetery, Ford with a fellow and his girl in it turns over on its side and switches complstely around, facing in direction from whieh it cams. Probably got too mushy for Liz and she tried to go back. The girl was all cut up over it (or perhaps we should say ander it.) Not seriously though.

Big Buick struck tho railroad crossing near John Martin's on the Petoskey road and tore off a wheel. Speeding again.

Two delivery Lizzies tried to run a race on Dixon avenue. Result—one hits a tree and smashes lights. Drivers pay fine of $8.80 apiece and the unlucky one foots the repair bill to boot.

Monday morning, Ed. Johnson, of Muskegon, out on a pleasure trip with his wife and baby and a boy of about ten or twelve, tried to pass a string of wagons on the Petoskey road near the Pine Lake resort and turned turtle in the ditch. Liz landed on a couple of timbers that lay in the ditch and the family were able to crawl out from under with no serious casualties. Defective steering gear was given as the reason, but we suspect something else was defective as well—possibly judgment.

They say the average life of an aeroplane is 500 hours at the front. If it wasn't for the way Henry builds 'em, we wouldn't gamble on an Elizabeth lasting 500 minutes aroaad Charlevoix, the way some of tbese amateur Bob Burmans handle 'em.

LOCAL DOCTOR GETS ORDERS

MUST REPORT FOR TRAINING AUGUST 10TH

Dr. A. M. Wilkinson Will Go to Fort Banjamin Harrison, Indiana—Appointed 1st Lieutenant

Dr. A. M. Wilkinson received notice of his appointment as 1st lieutenant in the Medical Officers Reserve Corps about two weeks ago. Last Saturday morning he received a wire from the War Department ordering him to be prepared to go to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, Medical Officers' Training camp, August 10.

He has no knowledge of the length of his stay or kind of duty he will be required to do but is willing to do or go whatever or wherever Uncle Sam thinks he needs him. He feels that every good American who can be of service (and that means most everybody in some capacity or other) should put himself at the disposal of his country in this trying time. The sooner the Kaiser finds out that Uncle Samuel has his sleeves rolled up and is ready for business the sooner this awful carnage of bloodshed and depredation will be over. The doctor will announce next week what temporary disposal he will make of his practice during his absence.

Notice

Having received orders to report for aervice in the United States Army it becomes necessary for me to collect all bills from persons owing me before the 8th of August. Please assist me to get my affairs all atraight before I leave without putting me to the bother of seeing each person separately. Approved notes accceptable if neeessary—Adv. 31t1.

Tho only contracts that have been let in the state of Colorado for bard surfaced roadways have been for concrete.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with bilious-ness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.

WHAT CATARRH IS

It has been said that every third person has catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh often indicates a general weakness of the body; and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.

To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by enriching your blood with the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building-tonic, free from alcohol or any harmful drugs. Try it.

AMONG THE PLAYERS AND CADDIES

(A column edited by the Caddie master for the purpose of sharpening the caddies' interest in their work and keeping parents in touch with those in charge of the boys at the golf grounds.)

The caddies, the employees at the golf grounds and many of the players who know the Hyek boys, feel deeply sympathetic with them in their recent bereavement. The reliability and thriftness of the boys constitute a marked tribute to the mother. Three of the boys, Yettow, Louis and Henry were at work at the time of their mother's death. The youngest son, John, had lately been given caddie number 106. We trust that the four brothers will all continue their work on the links.

The raising of crops is a good deal more important than the playing of golf. For that reason we never attempt to bring pressure to bear on boys who quit caddying to go to work on the farms around Charlevoix, just as no especial effort is made to get them to work on Sunday against their inclination or the will of their parents. But boys who are not working in the interest of the nation's food supply, as has been said in this column before, should get their share of the hundreds of dollars being given the caddies on six days of the week at least. There is one more month of good opportunity for everybody. Then the opportunity will be gone for months. Now, as the fellows say, "hop to it."

The weather is unusually hot and the swimming unusually good. There is plenty of time at noon each day for a good swim in one lake or another. But the boy who lets a two or three hour swim knock him out of a chance to make money is about as wise as the fellow who raises his umbrella when it's raining dollar bills.

During the last week several of the boys have appeared at the links again after short periods of work on nearby farms: Floyd Hull (79) from Washburn's farm; Harold Daniels, (86) and Airel Cooper (65) from the farm of Don Matthews; Carl Gordon (21) from that of Peter Block.

Harold Hallett (46) and Ted Loper (18) have gone to work for a few days at the Hallett farm. Walter Harvey has been on the Waller farm north of the city for some time.

Clayton Hull (38) works at Crane's in the afternoons.

Laurence Taylor (27) jumps around so that no track can be kept of him. He was working for the city, but he has come back to golf. Clyde Solomon, who was number 27 once upon a time, is helping the "good roads" cause out somewhere southeast of town. We suspect if walking was better, he would be back on the job too.

Again the caddies are asked to report to the caddie master any bits of news they may be in possession of, concerning themselves or others of the boys.

George Bacon (100) went to Manistee a week ago only to serve while another Western Union man took his vacation, and is now back in Charlevoix. He works from 5 p. m. to 1 a. m. at the local Western Union office, and at the links after he has his "shut eye."

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

She mixed Sulphur with it to Restore Color, Gloss, Youthfulness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Complete Dixie Highway

The importance of the early completion of divisions of the Dixie highway for military service has been strongly emphasized in letters received from Secretary of War Baker and Maj. Gen. Wood, commanding the southeastern department by Judge M. M. Allison, president of the Dixie Highway association. Secretary Baker urges that every effort be made to persuade the state and through roads, stating that their importance at this time cannot be overestimated.

HEART of the SUNSET

By REX BEACH

Author of "The Spoilers," "The Iron Trail," "The Silver Horde," Etc.

A bed was in the room, and around it was gathered a group of white-faced people. With rough hands Law cleared a way for himself, and then stopped, frozen in his tracks. His arms relaxed, his fingers unclenched, a great sigh whistled from his lungs. Before him, booted, spurred, and fully dressed, lay the dead body of Ed Austin.

Dave Stood Staring at the Master of Las Palmas.

Dave was still staring at the master of Las Palmas when the prosecuting attorney spoke to him.

"God! This is terrible, isn't it?" he said. "He must have died instantly."

"Who—did it?"

"We don't know yet. Benito found him and brought him in. He hasn't been dead an hour."

Law ran his eyes over the room, and then asked, sharply, "Where is Mrs. Austin?"

He was answered by Benito Gonzales, who had edged closer. "She's not here, senor."

"Have you notified her?"

Benito shrugged. "There has been no time, it all happened so quickly—"

Someone interrupted, and Dave saw that it was the local sheriff—evidently it was he who had waved from the speeding machine a few moments before.

"I'm glad you're here, Dave, for you can give me a hand. I'm going to round up these Mexicans right away and find out what they know. Whoever did it hasn't gone far; so you act as my deputy and see what you can learn."

When Dave had gained better control of himself he took Benito outdoors and demanded full details of the tragedy. With many lamentations and incoherencies the range boss told what he knew.

Ed had met his death within a half-mile of Las Palmas as he rode home for dinner. Benito, himself on his way to the house, had found the body, still warm, near the edge of the pecan grove. He had retained enough sense to telephone at once to Jonesville, and then—Benito hardly knew what he had done since then, he was so badly shaken by the tragedy.

"What time did it happen?"

"It was noon when I came in."

Dave consulted his watch, and was surprised to discover that it was now only a few minutes past one. It was evident, therefore, that Benito had indeed lost no time, and that his alarm had met with instant response.

"Now tell me, who did it?"

Benito flung his hands high. "God knows! Some enemy, of course; but Don Eduardo had many."

"Not that sort of enemies. There was nobody who could wish to kill him."

"That is as it is."

"Haven't you any suspicions?"

"No, senor."

"You say Mrs. Austin is gone?"

"Yes."

"Where?".

"I don't know."

Dave spoke brusquely: "Come, Benito; you must know, for your wife went with her. Are you trying to keep something back?"

"No, no! As God is my judge!" Benito declared. "I didn't know they were going until the very last, and even then Dolores would tell me nothing. We were having bad times here at Las Palmas; there were stormy scenes yonder in the house. Senor Ed was drinking again, you understand? The senora had reason to go."

"You think she ran away to escape him?"

"Exactly."

Dave breathed more easily, for this seemed to settle Strange's theory. The next instant, however, his apprehensions were doubled, for Benito added:

"No doubt she went to La Feria."

Law uttered an incredulous exclamation. "Not there! Surely she wouldn't go to La Feria at such a time. Why, that country is ablaze. Americans are fleeing from Mexico."

"I hadn't thought of that," Benito confessed. "But if she didn't go there, where did she go? Saints above! It is a fine condition of affairs when a wife keeps secrets from her husband, eh? I suppose Dolores feared I would tell Don Eduardo. God rest his soul! This much I do know, however: not long ago there came a letter from General Longorio, offering settlement for those cattle he stole in his government's name. Dolores told me the senora was highly pleased and was going to Mexico for her money. It was a mark of Longorio's favor, you understand me? He's a great—friend, an ardent admirer." Benito winked. "Dolores told me all about that, too. No, I think they went to La Feria."

Dave remembered his first conversation with Phil Strange and the fortune-teller's insistence that some powerful person was behind Jose Sanchez. More than three weeks ago Strange had forecast something very like the murder of Ed Austin. Dave felt as if he were the victim of an hysterical imagination. Nevertheless, he forced himself to ask, quietly:

"Is Jose Sanchez anywhere about?"

The range boss shrugged. "I sent him to the east pasture this morning."

"Did he go?"

"Eh? So! You suspect Jose of this, God in heaven! Jose is a wild boy—But wait! I'll ask Juan if he saw him; yes, and Victoria, too. That is Victoria you hear squalling in the kitchen. Wait here."

Benito hurried away, leaving Dave a prey to perplexity; but he was back again in a few moments. His face was grave.

"Jose did not go to the east pasture," he said.

"Where is he now?"

"No one seems to know."

Law walked to his horse, mounted, and galloped away. Benito, who watched him, saw that he turned toward the river road which led to the Las Palmas pumping plant.

The more Dave thought about Ed Austin's death, the more certain he became that it was in some way connected with Alaire's disappearance; and the loose end by which the tangle might be unraveled, it seemed to him, lay in the hands of Rosa Morales, Jose's sweetheart. That Sanchez was the murderer Dave now had little doubt; but since the chance of apprehending him was small, he turned his attention to the girl. He would make Rosa speak, he told himself, if he had to use force—this was no time for gentle methods. If she knew aught of Alaire's whereabouts or the mystery of her departure from Las Palmas, he would find a way to wring the truth from her. Dave's face, a trifle too somber at all times, took on a grimmer aspect now; he felt a slow fury kindling in his breast.

Years of experience had taught him to be always alert, even during his moments of deepest preoccupation, and so, from force of habit, when he came to the pumphouse road he carefully scanned it. In the dust were fresh [illegible] toward the river. Now [illegible] to be seldom used, and therefore he wondered who could be riding it at a gallop in this blistering midday heat. A few rods farther on and his quick eye detected something else—some tiny object that brought him from his saddle. Out of the rut he picked a cigarette butt, the fire of which was cold but the paper of which was still wet from the smoker's lips. He examined it carefully; then he remounted and rode on, pondering its significance.

Dave loped out of the thicket and straight across the clearing to the Morales house. Leaving Montrosa's reins hanging, he opened the door and entered without knocking. Rosa appeared in the opening to another room, her eyes wide with fright at this apparition, and Dave saw that she was dressed in her finest, as if for a holiday or for a journey.

"Where's your father?" he demanded.

"He's gone to Sangre de Cristo. What do you want?"

"When did he go?"

"This morning, early. He—"

"Who's been here since he left?"

Rosa was recovering from her first surprise, and now her black brows drew together in anger. "No one has come. You are the first. And have you no manners to stride into a respectable house—?"

Dave broke in harshly: "Rosa, you're lying. Jose Sanchez has been here within an hour. Where is he?" When the girl only grew whiter and raised a hand to her breast, he stepped toward her, crying, "Answer me!"

Rosa recoiled, and the breath caught in her throat like a sob. "I'll tell you nothing," she said in a thin voice. Then she began to tremble. "Why do you want Jose?"

"You know why. He killed Don Eduardo, and then he rode here. Come! I know everything."

"Lies! Lies!" Rosa's voice grew shrill. "Out of my house! I know you. It was you who betrayed Panfilo, and his blood is on your hands, assassin!" With the last word she made as if to retreat, but Dave was too quick; he seized her, and for an instant they struggled breathlessly.

Dave had reasoned beforehand that his only chance of discovering anything from this girl lay in utterly terrorizing her and in profiting by her first panic; therefore he pressed his advantage. He succeeded better than he had dared to hope.

"You know who killed Senor Ed," he cried, fiercely. "The fortune-teller read your plans, and there is no use to deny it."

Rosa screamed again; she writhed; she tried to sink her teeth into her captor's flesh. In her body was the strength of a full-grown man, and Dave could hardly hold her. But suddenly, as the two scuffled, from the back room of the house came a sound which caused Dave to release the girl as abruptly as he had seized her—it was the clink and tinkle of Mexican spurs upon a wooden floor.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Water-Cure.

Without an instant's hesitation Dave flung himself past Rosa and through the inner door.

Jose Sanchez met him with a shout; the shock of their collision overbore the lighter man, and the two went down together, arms and legs intertwined. The horse-breaker fired his revolver blindly—a deafening explosion inside those four walls—but he was powerless against his antagonist's strength and ferocity. It required but a moment for Law to master him, to wrench the weapon from his grasp, and then, with the aid of Jose's silk neckscarf, to bind his wrists tightly.

From the front of the little house came the crash of a door violently slammed as Rosa profited by the diversion to save herself.

When finally Jose stood, panting and snarling, his back to the wall, Dave regarded him with a sinister contraction of the lips that was almost a grin.

"Well," he said, drawing a deep breath, "I see you didn't go to the east pasture this morning."

"What do you want of me?" Jose managed to gasp.

There was a somewhat prolonged silence, during which Dave continued to stare at his prisoner with that same disquieting expression. "Why did you kill Don Eduardo?" he asked.

"I? Bah! Who says I killed him?" Jose flung defiance. "Why are you looking at me? Come! Take me to jail, if you think that will do any good."

"It's lucky I rode to Las Palmas this morning. In another hour you would have been across the Rio Grande—with Rosa and all her fine clothes, eh? Now you will be hanged. Well, that is how fortune goes."

The horse-breaker tossed his head and shrugged with a brave assumption of indifference; he laughed shortly. "You can prove nothing."

"Yes," continued Dave, "and Rosa will go to prison, too. Now—suppose I should let you go? Would you help me? In ten minutes you could be safe." He inclined his head toward the muddy, silent river outside. "Would you be willing to help me?"

Jose's brows lifted. "What's this you are saying?" he inquired, eagerly.

"I would only ask you a few questions."

"What questions?"

"Where is Senora Austin?"

Jose's face became blank. "I don't know."

"Oh yes, you do. She started for La Feria. But—did she get there? Or did Longorio have other plans for her? You'd better tell me the truth, for your general can't help you now." Dave did his best to read the Mexican's expression, but failed. "Senor Ed's death means nothing to me," he went on,

"Shoot."

"but I must know where his wife is, and I'm willing to pay, with your liberty." In spite of himself his anxiety was plain.

Jose exclaimed: "Ho! I understand. He was in your way and you're glad to be rid of him. Well, we have no business fighting with each other."

"Will you tell me—?"

"I'll tell you nothing, for I know nothing."

"Come! I must know."

Jose laughed insolently.

Law's face became black with sudden fury. His teeth bared themselves. He took a step forward, crying:

"By heaven! You will tell me!" Seizing his prisoner by the throat, he pinned him to the wall; then with his free hand he cocked Longorio's revolver and thrust its muzzle against Jose's body. "Tell me!" he repeated. His countenance was so distorted, his expression so maniacal, that Jose felt his hour had come. The latter, being in all ways Mexican, did not struggle; instead, he squared his shoulders and, staring fearlessly into the face above him, cried:

"Shoot!"

For a moment the two men remained so; then Dave seemed to regain control of himself and the murder light flickered out of his eyes. He flung his prisoner aside and cast the revolver into a corner of the room.

Jose picked himself up, cursing his captor eloquently. "You gringos don't know how to die," he said. "Death? Pah! We must die some time. And supposing I do know something about the senora, do you think you can force me to speak? Torture wouldn't open my lips."

Law did not trust himself to reply; and the horse-breaker went on with growing defiance:

"I am innocent of any crime; therefore I am brave. But you—the blood of innocent men means nothing to you—Panfilo's murder proves that—so complete your work. Make an end of me."

"Be still!" Dave commanded, thickly.

President Wilson has expressed his opinion

of the duty relating to savings bank deposits in these true sentences:

"If a man does not provide for his children, if he does not provide for all those dependent upon him, and if he has not that vision of conditions to come, and that care for the days that have not yet dawned, which we sum up in the whole idea of thrift and saving, then he has not opened his eyes to any adequate conception of human life. We are in this world not to provide for ourselves, but for others and that is the basis of economy."

CODDLING THE I. W. W.'S.

The United States of America is probably the only nation on earth that rounds up a bunch of anarchists and, instead of punishing them, feeds, clothes and protects them and otherwise coddles them with the money provided by taxation of the very people who have suffered through their anarchistic depredations. It is indeed a strange thing that when the I. W. W.'s robbed, beat and terrorized the peaceful citizens of various towns in the West, the war department, instead of taking the part of the peaceful citizens, establishes comfortable camps for the outlaws, provides them with army rations and prevents outraged citizens from chasing away those who have outraged them.

The menace of the I. W. W.'s has caused great alarm throughout the districts exposed to their activity. Kansas City had some unpleasant experience with these undesirables and there are indications that other cities are about due for visitation from them. In the face of this unhappy situation it is exasperating for the people to feel that they can expect no sympathy or co-operation from the war department. Out in Arizona are more than a thousand of as detestable a lot of outlaws as ever got together. And these men, fresh from their dastardly work among the miners and citizens of Arizona towns and camps are now resting—and building themselves up at government expense, so that they may be in trim for fresh depredations among the farmers, miners and citizens generally. The prospect is exceedingly unpleasant. This country is at war with a great and powerful foe. We are drafting a million men for service abroad and every citizen is being taxed heavily to maintain this great army in the field.

What right has the government of this country to uphold and support I. W. W.'s? If the government cannot afford protection to its citizens at home, then it ought as a matter of decency to keep its hand off when the citizens provide their own system of protection. What the government ought to do is to act exactly as any other nation would act under similar circumstances when it finds an organized band of enemies within its borders. The time for simpering sentiment is past. There is no reason why we should deal any more leniently with the enemies within our borders than with those outside them. In fact, the open enemy is preferable to one who sneaks about, harassing and killing the innocent and unprotected people at their homes. It is the boast of the I. W. W. leaders that there are not enough jails in this country to hold them. If that is so, then stockades should be built where these outlaws can be made to work, not six hours a day, but ten or twelve hours a day until they learn that this is a land of law and order. Let the government show some backbone in this matter.

ACCURACY

Women sewing for the Red Cross have been learning, many of them for the first time, what accuracy means. The woman at home may intend to hem her sheets three inches wide, but if one turns out finished to be two and seven-eighths or three and a quarter wide she just lets that go. It is near enough. And some of them may be stitched close to the edge, and more of them an eighth of an inch back, and some of the stitching may be rather crooked. But if it's not too bad she calls the article done and passes along to the next job.

Time sometimes may be worth more than fine finish. But too many women acquire a mental attitude of inaccuracy and carelessness. It's too much trouble to fininsh the job exactly right. And then this attitude works out all over life. It's too much trouble to correct the children's English. Too much trouble to make the child who has slammed the door come back and close it softly to learn how it is done. And the loss of time due to a careless mind is greater than from any other cause.

In the Red Cross women learn that slipshod work of any kind does not pass inspection. The seam to be sewed on the edge must be sewed on the edge. Sewing it an eighth of an inch back might mean the difference between life and death. And the Red Cross takes no chances of that kind. If there must be a space of four inches between the padded parts of a fracture pillow, three and seven eighths won't do. The work must come out and be done over.

Fussy? Yes. If there are twenty five sponges in a package instead of twenty-four, one may be left in a wound. The count of the surgeon, the nurse and the package must tally. It's life and death fussiness.

Soldiers in action are learning this lesson, too. Men who have been careless on their jobs heretofore are now learning what perfect work, perfect obedience to orders means.

It's as easy to form the mental habit of doing work well as poorly. And perhaps when we have all acquired it we will no longer let our cities and governments and social conditions be run inaccurately—with their consequent loss of life and health and happiness.

SOLIDIFIED SENTIMENT WILL WIN

The war against Teutonic autocracy may be won by the United States, within the United States. In fact, that's really where the victory must be achieved. And it must be accomplished through the organization of public sentiment.

The spirit of the nation is the spirit of the army. There are innumerable channels for spiritual communication between the nation to-wit, the people, and its army in the field. The conscience of the one is the conscience of the other. The determination of the one is the determination of the other. The crystalization, or lack thereof, of the one means the success or failure of the other.

Healthful sentiment at home is as necessary to military efficiency at the front as is the military organization itself. For upon it depends adequate provision for carrying military measures into effect.

Ergo, if the nation shall be seduced by insidious counsels into an attitude or state of mind that reads in hesitation the morals of the army—that imponderable essence which wins battles against odds and suffers apparently impossible ills and stabs with equanimity—must suffer. Our initiative will be lost, our powers of resistance will decline and we will fall an easy, flaccid prey to our enemies.

The duty of our citizens, therefore is plain. Away with academic or racial discussion! Let us be wise and discreet in the matter of "war talk." Or, better yet, let our only war talk relate to the winning of it, always remembering this—organized patriotic sentiment will give us an army and navy that will prove unbeatable Organized public sentiment will destroy the confidence and spirit of the enemy. It will win the war in short order. A division of sentiment would menn a costly, tedious process.

THE PRESIDENT'S ORDER

In these days when one hears so much about beer and wines being "foods," etc., it is inspiring to note the position in which they are placed by President Wilson. The president on Tuesday issued an order declaring dry and moral zones for a distance of five miles around military camps. The order says:

"No person shall, in or within five miles of any military camp, sell or barter, directly or indirectly, any alcholic liquor, INCLUDING BEER, ALE OR WINE."

How ufortunate it is that the President hasn't become convinced of the superior food value of beer, and the superior fighting ability of the soldiers who get beer with their rations.

And if beer and wine are bad for the young manhood of the country when they become soldiers, why isn't it bad for the same young manhood before they enter the army? It is the rotten booze of all kinds that is unfitting thousands of boys and young men for military service. Why not lock the barn before the horse is stolen?

What Germany really needs isn't a chip off the old block, but a new block altogether.

I. W. W. members may be trying to get into jail to keep out of the trenches.

Yes, the higher the shoe the higher the price.

Peace talk in Germany takes warlike tones.

Mrs. Beeman's class gave a very interesting program last Sunday at the opening of the Sunday school. They sang for the opening selection, "Everybody can Help Just a Little," which gave us a thought to take home with us.

The arrangement of the program and the way it was handled was simply fine. It proves there is good talent growing up in the Sunday school.

Last Sunday was one of the warmest days of the season and at that, we had 17 visitors. The total membership is 153—79 more than we had a year ago.

Next Sunday, Mr. Walker's class will lead the opening exercises and they are sure to please everybody. You are welcome to our Sunday school.—Contributed.

A NEW MODEL STOCK RANCH

INDIANA MAN HAS 890 ACRES OF LAND

Will Start Raising Sheep and Cattle On His Place North of Waller Farm Next Spring

Charlevoix is to have another model farm. Howard E. Barrett, of Rushville, Ind., who is the owner of some 890 acres purchased some time ago from J. M. Felts of this city and located just north of and adjoining the Waller farm, will sell his property in Indiana and locate here permanently in the spring of 1918.

Mr. Barrett is here in town this week looking over the ground, and is very much enthused with the prospect. He intends to raise sheep and cattle on a large scale and is also an expert in the poultry game, although he has not definitely stated that the production of eggs and chickens will be a part of his program. He believes that this part of the country is peculiarly suitied to stock farming and avers that the transportation problem will have no terrors for him. More power to his arm! We need him.

EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts before breakfast if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

JUDGE FOR YOURSELF

Which is Better—Try an Experiment or Profit by a Charlevoix Citizen's Experience

Something new is an experiment.
Must be proved to be as represented.
The statement of a manufacturer is not convincing proof of merit.
But the endorsement of friends is.
Now suppoeing you had a bad back,
A lame, weak, or aching one,
Would you experiment on it?
You will read of many so-called cures.
Endorsed by strangers from faraway places.
It's different when the endorsement comes from home.
Easy to prove local testimony.
Read this Charlevoix case:

Barney Herington, cement contractor, 108 W. Garfield Ave., Charlevoix, says: "About eight years ago my back gave out on me. It became so lame and sore that I could hardly bend or stoop. When I did, sharp knifelike pains caught me in my back and I could hardly straighten up. My kidneys were out of fix also. As I had often read about Doan's Kidney Pills I tried them. Three boxes of this medicine cured me of the attack and fixed me up in good shape. Since then whenever there has been occasion to use a kidney medicine, Doan's Kidney Pills have always done good work."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Herington had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

There are men of strength and men of weakness. We meet them both in every walk of life. Their birth or education or general surroundings may be the same, but a notably sharp line divides those who govern their inclinations from those whose inclinations govern them. WAVES PROVE TOO STRONG FOR ELLSWORTH BATHER

Promising Army Candidate Attempts to Lower Waters in Bay by Internal Consumption

The good old U. S. A. came near losing one of its most promising candidates for military service at just about nine minutes to eleven o'clock last Sunday forenoon, when said candidate, Harry Feiner, with a couple of companions visited Grand Traverse Bay near Antrim for a plunge in the brineless deep.

The waves at that time were rolling high, due to the stiff wind and Mr. Feiner thinking and wondering perhaps who would lead his Sunday school class during his absence, had wondered beyond his depth and got out where the water was nearly up to his shoulders.

Then came the awakening, "Bluey" and a wave washed over his decks and rolled on towards land, being badly broken up however, by the impact with his teeth, his mouth having been open at the time of the collision. Mr. Feiner shook himself and set the pumps working and had managed to get most of the water out of his throat and ears when he saw another wave bearing down on him. This time he was prepared and proceeded to duck and clinch, realizing too late that he was out classed when it came to in-fighting. He was a badly battered athlete when he finally came up at the count of nine and was in no condition to continue the battle, so started an orderly retreat, having covered however, not over six feet when once again there were "doin's." Mr. Feiner claims he would have fought it out on that line if it had taken all day but he claims he stepped in a deep hole, caused he thinks by the heavy rains of last spring and having taken on board a good share of the contents of Lake Michigan, he wigwagged for help. G. C. Townsend, one of his companions, waded out and towed him ashore.

Mr. Feiner had fully recovered the next morning, but said there was more water in the bay than one man needed for a bath and that here after he would stick to the tub.

INFAMOUS PLOT REVEALED IN MENOMINEE

Peddler Sells Poisoned Court Plaster While Making House to House Canvas

A nation-wide plot to ascertain the exact status of the German population of the United States is seen as a result of the discovery in Menominee of sample of courtplaster thought to have been inoculated with tetanus germs, and distributed widely over the twin cities, says the Menominee Herald.

The latest development in the investigation is the fact that the peddler who distributed the small packages of court plaster inquired frequently of housewives whether or not they were German or of German sympathy.

The peddler was accompanied by a small boy, whom he claimed was crippled, and in some instances based his plea for help on that fact. In other instances, he told housewives he was looking for a German family who would take the boy and care for him. With this as an excuse, he inquired at nearly every house at which he stopped whether or not they were Germans.

House to House Spying

The plot, which it is believed is nation-wide is one of the shrewdest moves made by the friends of Germany since this country became involved in the European war.

With probably hundreds of German spies circulnting throughout the country ln the guise of house-to-house peddlers, the extent of their espionage would be almost unlimited. The specific reason for the plan is thought to have been to learn the exact status of the feeling among German residents or those of German antecedents.

The German espionage system is known to have been the most thorough in the history of the world, and the desire to learn the extent of pro-German sympathy is not improbnble.

When the peddler learned that a family was not German, he tried to sell the court plaster on the plea that the money was to be used to send the boy to the hospital for treatment. Through this method the inoculation of bitter enemies of Germany was planned, it is believed.

Epidemic Averted

A wide-spread epidemic of lockjaw, from the inoculation of courtplaster is believed to have been averted only by the fact that the tetanus germs generally do not live long after exposure to the air or light. In almost every sample submitted for examination by the prosecuting attorney it has been found that the black courtplaster was placed on top. An attempt to shield the plaster from light is seen in this precaution. Each package contained three small sheets of the plaster, one black, one white and another flesh-colored.

Samples have been sent to the state board of health at Lansing for examination by expert bacteriologists Whether or not the germs still live, it will be possible to determine if they were inoculated.

Kills "Made in Germany" Products

These revelations mean the death of "Made in Germany" products in this country, as well as a more careful scrutiny of the persons who travel over the country in various disguises.

The extent of Germany's operations in the United States will probably never be known, but it is certain that they are greater than we have imagined. Germany will lose no opportunity to gather information or spread terror, and the discovery of the courtplaster in Menomines may lead to a general investigation all over the country."

A million dollar highway triangle is being built by Volusia County, Florida, running from New Smyrna to Daytona, over to Deland and then back to New Smyrna a total of 60 miles.

Practically all types of materials in competition in Florida are represented along the route. These types include shell, asphaltic concrete on a shell base, asphalt block on sand, penetration, grouted block on sand penetration, grouted brick and brick with sand filler on sand, and concrete. These contracts were started practically at the same time for the purpose of testing the wearing qualities of the various types. Stretches wearing out will be replaced, as money is available, with the type that has proven most successful.

Commissioner L. B. Bouchell and other leading citizens of New Smyrna insisted on having concrete in their district, having a personal knowledge of the success which concrete roads have attained in other states. As a result of their determination to have concrete, others who were opposed have reversed their position and now know the splendid appearance of a first-class concrete pavement. County Commissioner L. B. Bouchell does not hesitate to say that he believes New Smyrna is the place in Volusia County that is getting its money's worth out of the present bond issue for pavings. This road he declares will be giving excellent service when other types around are beyond repair.

How to Kill Moths, and Other Useful Household Hints.

Here is an excellent way to kill moths in carpets which never fails: Wring a coarse crash towel out of water and spread it smoothly on the carpet, iron it dry with a good hot iron, repeating the operation on all parts of the carpet infested with moths. There is no need to press hard, and neither the pile nor the color of the carpet will be injured, and the moths will be destroyed by the heat and steam.

Irons wiped on a cloth dampened with kerosene will not scorch clothes.

Kerosene used to moisten stove polish makes stoves look like new.

Salt and water removes the lime in new curtains and makes washing easier.

Washing fabrics that are inclined to fade should be soaked and rinsed in very soft water to set the color before washing in suds.

To clean a burned pan dip a hard crust of bread in kitchen salt and rub the burned portion, then wash in hot soda and water.

A Good Recipe For Cinnamon Rolls

Roll out bread dough to one-half inch thickness. Spread generously with melted butter.

Mix 1 teaspoon cinnamon with 1 cup brown sugar, and a little grated lemon rind. Spread over dough and roll it into a cylinder. Cut into slices one and one-half or two inches thick, and place into buttered tin with cut side down. Touch sides with butter so they will separate easily. Let rise and bake.

Cinnamon Rolls are not only very nutritious but a delight to the appetite.

Serve them occasionally in place of white bread. They are very healthful and add variety to wheat foods.

If you follow the above recipe and bake with you are bound to have splendid success.

Dr. Varden has made a number of professional calls hereabouts the past week. He was drafted in the first draft, but we hope he will be exempted as it would leave us without a doctor if he had to go.

A great many of the farmers hereabouts have forgotten about last year's hay crop on account of having a greater crop this year. Some have their barns full and are trying to sell some in the field to save stacking it and leaving it exposed to the weather.

Jake Veenstra, one of Paul Veenstra's sons, was taken to Petoskey by Dr. Varden of East Jordan to be operated on for appendicitis. He had been ill a few days and they decided on removing the cause of his illness, as he had frequeat attacks of appendicitis.

Mr. A. DaVries, one of Banks Township's pioneer residents, passed away at his home here last Wednesday. The deceased was eighty years old and death was due to a paralytic stroke. He leaves a widow, one son and three daughters to mourn his departure. We all extend our sympathy to the bereaved ones.

HELP CARE FOR THE KIDDIES

THOUSANDS WILL BE LEFT HOMELESS

Saturday is Tag Day for the Little Ones Who Will Miss "Daddie" Soon

In time of preparation for war, we are apt to neglect the equally necessary humanitarian work that must be done at home.

The Michigan Children's Home society, with headquarters at St. Joseph, Michigan, are taking care of an average of 150 children all the time, there now being in the home nearly 30 cases from Charlevoix County alone. This work is non-sectarian and depends wholly upon free will gifts for its maintenance. It comprehends not merely the care and cure of crippled little ones but the finding of decent homes for those who have none, and the society is preparing to meet the extra burden in this respect that the ravages of war will place upon it. Hundreds of women will be left with the support of families upon their hands and where the task is too great, the people who stay at home must help to shoulder the load.

As a sample of the way the society is meeting its new task, we quote an instance, details of which were furnished the Courier by Mrs. V. M. Bristol, a representative of the society, who is now in this city. A picture of the two children accompanies this article. Is is not a splendid work?

"Everyone on the train knew that they were twins; aside from this most of the people supposed that they were just ordinary babies. In reality their story is different from that of any other children in the state.

Two years ago a Belgian family fled to Michigan. The father found employment in a laundry, where he did two men's work until the strain caused his death. The mother, left with four children, tried to support them all, but finally was forced to ask for help. Homes for the two older children were found in the neighborhood. A few days ago the traveling nurse of the Michigan Children's Home society, brought the twins to the receiving home at St. Joseph.

The mother knows nothing of her relatives at home, except that they are "somewhere in France" but she has found that Michigan people are ever ready to help the Belgian babies (Last year 532 such cases were under the care of the organization.)

The mother of the Belgian twins is hoping to help support her children and in time be able to bring them together again, thanks to the aid which the Children's Home society is giving her now. The best kind of charity is that which helps unfortunate people to help themselves and thus preserve their self-respect."

With the co-operation of several local women—Mrs. O. E. Wilbur, Mrs. John Burns, Mrs. A. E. Mason, Mrs. R. B. Armstrong and Miss Ione Swinton; Mrs. Bristol, the society's agent, will hold a flag sale tag day on Saturday next (August 4th) and all who contribute will be decorated with little flag pennants to show that their heart is in the right place. The Camp-fire Girls, of whom Miss Swinton is the local leader, will receive honor heads for their share in the work of disposing of the little flags. Remember the kiddies.

Church of God

The church of God camp meeting will begin at the camp grounds, two and a half miles south of Charlevoix, Friday evening, August 3rd, and will continue over two Sundays. There will be three meetings a day and all are cordially invited.

ALL DOG OWNERS MUST PAY THEIR TAX

Owners Residing in Rural Districts As Well as Those in Cities

One of the most beneficial measures ever enacted in Michigan for the protection of the sheep industry of the state become operative on August 1. This is the law enacted by the last legislature which requires that henceforth owners of dogs in the rural districts must pay an annual license fee of $2 for each male animal and $5 for each female in their possession.

The act also enlarges the powers of deputies and police and makes it possible for officers to kill off, without so much as a by-your leave, any unlicensed dogs roaming at large in districts to which the law applies. These districts, it may be added, include all the state with the exception of cities in which charters or ordinances provide otherwise for the disposition of fees derived from the tax upon dogs.

How to Make a Watch Dial Luminous.

The first thing to do is to procure an ounce of calcium sulphide, luminous. The cost since the war is $1 or more an ounce, but you can fix fifty watches with that amount. This element absorbs light and after being exposed to any bright light for five minutes will glow with a purple light for about four hours, says the Popular Science Monthly.

Remove the crystal from the watch to be treated and with a pea dipped in shellac go over the numerals and the hands. Some may prefer to make dots only at the numerals. Pour out the calcium on a clean piece of paper, dip your finger in it and press some on the moist shellac. Allow about five minutes for it to dry. The calcium not used may be returned to the bottle.

DRAFTED MEN RUSH TO ARMY

GREAT WAVE OF PATRIOTISM SWEEPS NATION

Volunteers Increase from 50 to 70 Per Cent—Want to go to France

America's men of fighting age are flocking into war service. An unprecendented wave of enlistments in the army, navy and marina corps is sweeping the country.

Men of conscription age, whose numbers were drawn far down in the master list, and who fear they may not be called for army duty, are crowding recruiting stations throughout the nation. The first rush came immediately after draft day, recruiting officers declare. In addition to men who want to make sure of seeing service, many whose numbers were drawn well up in the list are volunteering in the hope of being able to select the branch of service with which they will fight.

50 Per Cent Increase

During the last few days 333 men have volunteered, been examined and sent to Fort Slocum for training in New York. This is an increase of 50 per cent.

Chicago reports 300 enlistments during the last two days, an increase of 70 per cent. Applications for enlistment in the marines there have increased 400 per cent.

At Kansas City 105 men enlisted in the regular army the first two days of this week, a 50 per cent increase over the daily quota before the draft. Application for enlistment in the navy trebled.

Would Choose Service

At Detroit, where thirty-three enlisted, the men said they were volunteering in order to be able to choose their branch of the service.

Pittsburg reported 103 enlistments in all branches in two days.

In Philadelphia applications for enlistment are coming in at a rate of 180 a day. This is almost double the rate before the draft.

Boston reports similar conditions. Enlistments in the army there totaled 157 for Monday and Tuesday.

Recruiting figures for Monday and Tuesday at St. Louis show more than a 100 per cent increase.

MOST SENSITIVE NERVES.

The Two That Can Cause the Greatest Agony of Pain.

Which part of the human body is the most sensitive to pain?

A sharp definition must be drawn here between irritation and pain. Irritation is not pain, but only a frequent cause of it. Thus a crumb lodged in the larynx near the vocal cords produces violent irritation and prolonged coughing, which often result in actual pain. So, too, an insect or speck of dust in the eye sets up violent irritation and inflammation, followed by acute pain.

Of the surface of the body the finger tips and the end of the tongue are most sensitive. For instance, a burn on the fingers is much more painful than one on the back would be, while one on the tongue would be more painful still.

Deep wounds are not painful, as a rule, save as regards the surface injury.

Of pains not caused by external injuries neuralgia of the fifth nerve, the one which supplies the skin of the head and face, is the most intense. It has frequently driven people mad for the time being, and sufferers have been known to cut and even burn the flesh in desperate attempts to relieve it.

The rupture of the branches of the dental nerve in tooth drawing also causes agony so intense that it has been stated that no human being could endure it for more than two seconds at a time.—Pearson's Weekly.

Roumanian Superstitions.

It is considered lucky to arrive in Roumania accompanied by rain. It means abundance, fertility, the hope of a fine harvest—wealth. Sometimes the peasant women put large wooden buckets of water before their threshold; a full vessel is a sign of good luck. They will even sprinkle water before one's feet, because water means abundance. "I have seen," says the queen of Roumania in an article about the people of her country, "tall, handsome girls step out to meet me with overflowing water jars on their heads; on my approach they stood quite still, the drops splashing over their faces so as to prove that their pitchers were full. It is lucky to meet a cart full of corn or straw coming toward one, but an empty cart is a sure sign of bad luck."

The available water power of the United States, including the territory of Alaska, amounts to more than 28,000,000 horsepower, of which approximately 7,000,000, or 25 per cent, has been developed.

The male heart weighs from ten ounces to twelve ounces. Its average size is about five inches long, three and one-half inches wide and two inches in greatest depth.

SEE WHAT FARMERS CAN BUY WITH THEIR PRODUCE

The above ad appeared in the Mancelona Herald for Wisler & Co. A few years ago we sold a man a Milburn wagon for $60.00. He gave us 600 bu. of potatoes in payment. Now his 600 bu. potatoes would give him—

Milburn Wagon, box & seat	$90.00	10-18 Disc Harrow	$38.00
Dort Automobile	745.00	16 Tooth Wood Frame Spring Tooth Harrow	10.00
John Deere Manure Spreader	145.00	3 h. p. Fairbanks Morse oil eng.	77.50

One Minute washing machine	12.00	Steele Range	40.00
Land Roller	32.00
Ohio Riding Cultivator	35.00

AND IN ADDITION THREE HUNDRED DOLLARS IN CASH

Now we have printed all the above to show you that while cement, brick, plaster have advanced in price you can better afford to build now Mr. Farmer than you could before. The advance has been very small in proportion to the advanced price of farm produce. Build of cement.

ROAD MEET A WHIRLWIND

BOYNE FALLS ENTERTAINS CHARLEVOIX "BOOSTERS"

Asst. Highway Commissionar Neilson Was Guast of Evening and Let Light Into Dark Corners

One of the livest and most instructive-good roads meetings ever held in this county, took place last Saturday evening at the hotel Marsh in Boyne Falls, where "boosters" from Charlevoix, Boyne Falls and Walloon Lake got outside of a "corking" good supper and inside of the good roads problem.

"Uncle George" Van Pelt, headed the Charlevoix contigent, composed of Lisle Shanahan, R. C. Hammett, A. D. Crimmins, T. G. Finucan, R. W. Paddock, Harry Nicholls, J. Milo Eaton and F. V. Tyler. Boyne Valley Township was represented by Hon. W. J. Pearson, Frank Pierce, H. C. Myer, Dr. G. C. Conkle, Frank House, W. A. Davoll, H. S. Shaffer, and our old friend and fellow citizen E. S. Stacks, now a resident of Boyne Falls, who very gracefully did the honors as chairman of the meeting. Chandler and Melrose townships appeared in the persons af Roy B. Brown, F. Shepherd, W. H. Ransome, H. E. Bardwell and E. H. Thomas, all of Walloon Lake, and W. H. Benjamin, af Springvale, F. G. McBride, of Detroit, a summer visitor at Boyne Falls was also present at the meeting.

After the estables were safely out of the way and the cigars had been lit, chairman Stacks called upon Frank Pierce af Boyne Falls, who welcomed the visiting road enthusiasts and put Boyne Falls on records as unanimously in favor of good roads.

R. C. Hammett of Charlevoix voiced the pleasure which it afforded himself and athers from Charlevoix to be able to get together with their friends of the Boyne Valley and become better acquainted. He was followed by Supervisors Shepherd of Melrose and Benjamin of Chandler township. Mr. Benjamin said that Chandler township had banded by unanimous vote of the township in the sum of $10,000 and are now building four miles of state reward road. "We want the county to have good ronds," he said, "but we want to spend our money in our own township." He nverred, however, that Chandler was willing to do anything in the bounds of reason to help along the cause of good roads.

Supervisor Shaffer of Boyne Valley and Hon. "Bill" Pearson next addressed the meeting. Mr. Pearson said that if "we are going to boost for a road, let's boost for a good one." He expressed himself as in favor of going the other counties in the state one better on good roads and beating them all.

H. C. Myer and Frank House of Boyne Falls came next. Mr. House said he had never been in favor of the nine foot road. He expressed himself in the belief that the Dixie Highway and Mackinaw Trail, carrying as they will a tremendously henvy nuto trnffic, must be differently built from those we are now building. In the long run, he said, the concrete road is cheapest on account of its permanence.

Dr. Conkle stated that in Ohio they had been up against the same problem as we are now facing. Crushed stone ronds, he said, soon became pitted and as it cost too much to tear them up they had surfaced them with concrete and widened them out.

Lisle Shanahan followed and said that on his recent trip through eastern Michigan, Indiana and northwestern Ohio, he had found roads 15 or 16 feet wide, built of concrete and many miles in length. The concrete portion, he said was wide enough for two cars to pass and on the shoulders a horse and rig might travel without difficulty. In this state, he found no gravel roads anywhere superior to those in Charlevoix county.

W. A. Davoll of Boyne Falls and Harry Nicholls of Charlevoix also made short talks. Mr. Nicholls said, among other things, that the people of the county need not be afraid to vote a $300,000 bond issue, as the increase in valuations due to the improved roads would make it no more burdensome than $100,000 would be now.

George H. Van Pelt was next called an by the chairman and responded with a gingery and interesting talk on the subject which every one knows is nearest his heart. He placed specinl emphasis upon the fact that when we start building concrete roads we must build them right, for, as he said, "One piece of poor road means condemnation for a lot of good road in the future." He also quoted Frost, of East Jordan, who recently stated it as his belief that a concrete road around Pine Lake would pay for itself in five years time. Mr. Van Pelt pointed out the fact that we are placing the broken stone on our roads and letting the automobile owner make a road out of it by wearing it down at a cost of many thousands of dollars in tires and wear and tear on machinery.

His address was followed by the reading of a poem by Lisle Shanahan—one of Frank Adam Mitchell's, and several of the members recalled anecdotes of "Uncle George" that provoked much merriment.

Asst. State Highway Cammissioner Nielson, who was the evening's guest of honor and who had come in late, having finished his supper now addressed the meeting. Space will not permit us to reproduce all that he said or his answers to the many questions that were put to him.

The traffic which is daily passing aver a road, Mr. Nielson said, is the only criterion for the building of any style of road and it must be first ascertained what this traffic is before a certain type of construction is adopted. It is absolutely out af the question to build an expensive road to carry a light traffic and it is just as unwise to build a road that will not stand up under a heavy traffic, as in both cases the outlay required—on the one hand interest and an the other upkeep expense, is out of proportion to the results obtained. A golden mean between these two extremes, he said, must be aur goal.

One thing we lack, of the highest importance, said the commissioner, is an adequate and efficient road patrol system to keep up the roads we have built. In bis opinion, some work should be done somewhere on every gravel road during each tweaty-four hours when the snow is not covering the ground.

Mr. Nielson advocated keeping the gravel roads we have in good repair and replacing them with concrete where the traffic warrants, removing parts af the crown of the gravel road and filling in with the cement, which will thus have a better and more permanent foundation than if the concrete be laid in a new fill where climatic changes would probably cause the material to crack and seam. The material removed from the crown of the road to make way far the concrete, he said, could be thrown back to serve as the shoulders for the new road.

Spenking of construction on lateral roads where traffic is light, Mr. Nellson was af the opinion that the sand and clay mixture would play an important part in the solution of this problem, as he said a material having some of the good qualities of concrete might be obtained by such a mixture in the proper proportions.

Mr. Nielson's answers to questions regarding drainage, road drags and the application af tarvia were also very illuminating. Where tarvia was used, he asserted, the road must be watched for chuck holes and where found they must be filled at once, as when tarvia is applied the aurface hardens and the drag is of no effect in smoothing out the depressions, while every passing wheel digs out the hole a little deeper.

In conclusion, the commissioner stated that there is a type of construction for every road and there is a road for every type. It is just a question of picking out the most economical type for a given location, figuring maintenance on the one hand and cost on the other. It is the desire of the state highway department, he averred, to help the people of Michigan to get the right kind of a road in the right place.

The meeting closed at a late hour and the various delegations departed for their homes on foot and by auto, feeling that two results had been accomplished; a healthy stimulation of interest in the good roads cause and a better understanding between the people of the west and east sides of the county.

DRILL SQUADS TO BE FORMED

MEN MAY LEARN RUDIMENTS OF DRILL

Preliminary Training Will Give Recruit Better Chance for Early Promotion

All drafted men who passed the recent physical examinations and candidntes for the officers' training camp are requested to meet at the Masonic hall in Charlevoix on Friday evening next, August 10th, at 7:30 for the purpose of forming an organization for practice drill in the military manual of arms, preparatory to the call to service which will probably be issued about September 1st.

Steps have been taken, looking to the preliminary training of such men as are liable for war duty, on advices received from Washington, to the effect that such training is desirable and will be of great help to the drafted man when he goes to camp. Men who know the rudiments of military drill will be especially valuable and stand far better chances than the man who has no military knowledge whatever of being appointed to the higher paid non-commissioned offices and the chance of getting this knowledge in the brief time that is now left before the chosen ones are called to camp, is too valuable to be overlooked.

It is to be hoped that many will avail themselves of the opportunity and be on hand Friday night to form the organiznticn above outlined. Any others, whether drafted or not, desiring to participate will be welcome, as it is possible that a home guard will be formed later and the training will stand them in good stead.

Notice

Beginning September 1st, all masons of Charlevoix and vicinity will receive 80c per hour for their work.

RED CROSS GETS $1,300

AFFAIR AT BEACH HOTEL A COMPLETE SUCCESS

Summer Visitors Are Generous Patrons—Knitting Class Formed to Knit for Marine Corps

The benefit vaudeville at the Beach botel last Friday and Saturday evenings proved a success both socially and financially. About $1,300 were netted for the Red Cross work and much credit is due Mr. Jacob Mahler, Mrs. Rosalind Pufeles and her daughter, Dorothy, of St. Louis, Mr. Bernard for the business management and Mrs. Baker for her kindness in permitting the use of the casino, and to the others for their time and talent. The program consisted of fourteen numbers, comprising music, dancing, tableaux and circus "stunts" and was one of the most elaborate affairs ever attempted in this city. The talent was found exclusively among our summer visitors and proved to be of a high order.

The Charlevoix Auxiliary greatly appreciates this much needed and more than generous support and wishes to express gratitude for this and also for the efforts of the dear little folks, who have met each morning for four weeks at the Beach hotel and prepared articles for the bazaar benefit, which was held the past week, the proceeds of which were turned over to our local "Red Cross;" amounting to $101.18.

Other donations for the week past are from Mrs. Lydia Heaton, of Detroit, $25.00 and F. A. Butler, secretary of the Rural Letter Carrier's assaciation, $11.50, which amounts are intended to be turned over to the national Red Cross. The contributions also received from Mrs. Elizabeth R. New, $72.50, and Mr. Henry X. Strauss, $2.00 are designed for the local arganization.

Our summer visitors are more than generous not only with their time but with their financial support.

Among the activities at the Red Cross rooms is the knitting class which has just been formed with competent instructors to knit for the marines. All are welcome.

OUTRAGE ON FLAG IS A SIGN OF DANGER

We Need Vigilantes For Home Protection

We received word this morning that a large American flag, which has recently been raised at some point on Pine lake (just where, our informant did not state) was torn down yesterday by some unknown miscreant, ripped into ribbons and then the tattered shreds were raised again to the top of the pole. We have not been able to verify this report, but if true, an iden occurs to us strongly and that is the need of a mounted police or vigilante body for defense against the many hundreds of hyphenated scorpions that we know, from what experience we have had so far, are getting in their dirty work in countless ways that the ordinary civil authorities are powerless to prevent.

Straws show which way the wind blows and the outrage above alluded to points very plainly to the presence of undesirable citizens "in our midst." The quicker we hunt them down and get rid of them the easier will be our task of preparing for the struggle abroad.

HAYES WOMAN DIED OF HEART FAILURE

Mrs. James A. Wood Passed Away Last Sunday Night

Mrs. James A. Wood died Sunday evening last at her farm home on the Petoskey road, adjoining the James O'Brien place. She was 63 years of age and had been suffering for some time with valvular disease of the heart.

Mrs. Wood was a long time resident of Hayes and will be sadly missed by her relatives, friends and neighbors. She leaves a husband and one daughter.

Short services were held at the house Tuesday afternoon and the remains were taken that evening to White Pigeon, her old home and where her daughter lives, for burial.

BIG BARGAINS MAY BE HAD

RUMMAGE SALE AT BLOCK'S OLD STORE

August 18th Is the Date—For Benefit af Children's Memorial Hospital, Chicago

On Saturday, August 18th, the ladies of the Chicago Club will hold a rummage sale in the Martin Block building, 323 Bridge street, this city, for the benefit of the Children's Memorial hospital, Chicago. Remarkable bargains may be obtained in household furniture, wearing apparel, carpets, rugs, pictures, lamps, etc., from the homes of summer guests of this locality.

Apart from the exceptional opportunity thus offered to secure high grade articles at low prices, Charlevoix people should be interested in the end to which the proceeds af this sale will be applied.

The Children's Memorial hospital, founded in 1884, is one of the largest and best equipped institutions of its kind in the city af Chicago. Every bed is free and the work of the hospital is largely supported by donation and bequest.

Four Charlevoix girls are graduates of the hospital's school for nursing—Miss Eva Cram, Miss Lula Krulik, Miss Marguerite Woods (who, by the way, is head nurse at the hospital) and Miss Marion Swartz. Two others—Miss Beulah Bowdish and Miss Bernice Pulcipher are members of this year's senior class.

The call of the Red Cross for competent registered nurses to go to France has resulted in a real shortage in the number required for the equally necessary work at home. Efforts are being made to enroll new members in the school for nursing to take the places of those who have gone and are going to the front and Miss Martha Wilson, of the Chicago Club, who is president of the hospital's Women's Auxiliary Board, would like to see Charlevoix well represented in the list of candidates for admission. Any young woman, who has the necessary physical good health and desires to take up nursing as a profession, should communicate with Miss Wilson at her residence on the Chicago club grounds. No better training can be secured anywhere than at the Children's Memorial Hospital, and the nurse's profession stands high in the value scale of woman's work at the present time.

TEN MEN TO GO OUT OF 35

REJECTIONS AND EXEMPTIONS LEAVE FEW

Result of Examination Shows Poor Physical Average in Community

The result of the examination of drafted men held at the county bank hall Tuesday and up until noon Wednesday at the Court house, is not very encouraging, when one considers our pressing need for troops. Out of 84 men examined since Tuesday morning, only 35 were able to pass the physical examination. Out of this handful must be counted 25 exemptions already filed, and as our county quota is 71, many more must be examined.

Examinations are being held this afternoon in the courthouse and will be continued on Thursday until the full quota is secured. Below is a list of those who passed the physical tests on Tuesday:

Arthur Luft.
William Patrick.
Lester Davidson.
William Pack.
Clyde Cadwell.
Joseph Gordon.
Edward Potter.
Frank Davis.
Lawrence Mayville.
E. LaCroix.
George Ramsey.
L. Barber.
Leslie Evarts.
Mason Rose.
Herbert Wakefield.
Claude Myers.
John Whitlay.
Samuel Johnson.
James Richards.

Nothing, theoretically, could be fairer than the present draft but practically it does not seem to be panning out much better than the volunteer system. Substantial married citizens seem to be passing the physical test better than the single ones. We are yet in danger of being stripped of our best timber while various and sundry individuals, who are foot free, without home ties and whom we could do very well without are left behind. A good stiff grilling in the trenches might possibly make men out of some of them.

"LIZZIE" IS WORSTED IN RECENT AUTO SCRAP

"U. S. Navy" Too Much For Bantam Lightweight To Handle

Last Saturday evening, at about 8:00 o'clock a Franklin roadster, owned by the Skinner family of the Belvedere resort and driven by Albert Trankle, who was accompanied by one of the girls of the family, ran into a Ford driven by Billy Winnick of Hayes and both cars were badly smashed.

Winnick was going north on the Petoskey road and the Franklin car was coming towards town. The roadster was running an the wrong side of the highway and started to turn out too late to avoid collision with the smaller car, which struck the Franklin amidships. The Ford is a total wreck, while the other car also suffered severely. Winnick was badly bruised, while the occupants of the other car suffered no injury. First time we ever heard of Lizzie getting the worst of it in a scrap. The other car bore a sign with "U. S. NAVY" in large letters, and has one of those battleship ram prows. This probably rattled her.

LINING UP ALL GLEANER TEAMS

MAKING BIB PREPARATIONS FOR CONVENTION

Mancelona, Harbor Springs, Alanson, Conway and Ironton Teams to Take Part

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Marvin, of Detroit have been holding a series of special meetings at Glenner Arbors of Charlevoix county during the past week, lining up teams for drill and degree work at the one-day Federation convention to be held at Petoskey on Tuesday, September 11. Among the teams to take part in the rally are: Mancelona, Harbor Springs Alanson, Conway and Ironton. All the new ritualistic work of the Order will be conferred by specially instructed teams.

The Gleaner Order has started the biggest compaign for revival of interest among old Arbors the organization has ever before undertaken. In this part of the State a staff of organizers are at work and will pull off three big rallies, one at Thompsonville on September 8, at Petoskey on the 11th and another at Cheboygan on the 13th. The estimated attendance at each meeting will be not less than 600 Gleaners. The special features will be very attractive and the co-operation of the general public of the respective communities assures successful events. At each rally there will be a forenoon afternoon and evening session.

The specific purposes of the campaign are for an increase in the benefit membership and to improve the lecture service in the subordinate arbor. In his address before Quality arbor, five miles south of this city, Friday night, Mr. Marvin, who is supervisor of the supreme Federation department said: "preparations for the future of the order are under way, that Gleaner protection may be permanently strengthened and safeguarded. The day of the slacker is passing rapidly and we turn to the volunteer for loyalty and practical co-operation naturally. The dormant arbor will be removed from the membership rolls, that more attention may be given to the active arbor. In this way the liabilities of the organization are to be materially decreased."

Special Announcement

Next Sunday morning at 10:40 o'clock, Dr. J. Percival Huget, formerly of Detroit, but now of Brooklyn, N. Y., will preach at the Congregational church. Dr. Huget has lately accepted a call to the pastorate of the Tompkins Avenue Congregational church in Brooklyn, the largest Congregational church in the world. His summer home for a number of years has been at Sequanota. Nearly every summer he has given one Sunday morning service at the Charlevoix Congregntional church, and no preacher is heard with more delight and profit. His largeness of heart quite equals his eloquence. It is hoped that he will continue to make his summer home in this vicinity for many years to come.

Rebekah Lodge

The members of the Charlevoix Rebekah lodge, No. 293, are requested to be present at the next meeting August 14th. Assembly president, Mrs. Myrta Rhenfrank, of Battle Creek; also assembly conductor, Mrs. Alma Critchell, of Petoskey, will be present. A good attendance is desired.

PROGRESS OF THE GREAT WAR

MUST UNITED STATES FIGHT IT NEARLY ALONE

Defense Measures Proposed—Situation Serious—Entered War Two Years Late

As to the general war outlook, the most illuminating light during the last week has come, not from the fighting fronts of Europe, but from Washington. It came in the form of a new demand from the war department for five billion dollars of which no less than $2,468,613,000 was for "armament of fortifications."

That item is startling, and it may prove to be of profound signaficance. It carries with it the darkest shadow that has fallen upon us yet. It spells not only for a long and desperate conflict, but the possibility of a losing fight. It raises the spectre of the United States standing alone against Germany—our allies defeated and North America in a state of siege the last outpost of democracy fighting for life against triumphant brutality.

This is not a positive statement of fact; it is only an interpretation. But is it not a plain and logical interpretation? We are surprised to see how very few newspaper writers seem to have grasped the significance of that portentious item for the "armament of fortifications." In the ordinary times of peace the appropriations for this purpose have run from 15 to 25 millions. The 1916 law, though of unprecendented size and passed under the shadow of the coming war, appropriated only about 35 millions for this purpose. Our first great appropriation bill after we had entered the war carrying about three billions, devoted about half a billion to fortifications. Now this huge sum is multiplied by five! The whole national debt incurred during the civil war would hardly be enough to pay for this one appropriation for this one purpose, to be spent in one year. And this whole item, let it be noticed, is not designed to carry the war into Germany but purely for the defense of our own soil against physical attack.

The conclusions are easy to draw. First it is plain that our government believes we are involved in a very long and very desperate conflict. If that is their view, they surely have reasons for it—abundant reasons, based on inside information. This five billion defense bill, with its two and a half billions for fortifications, does not point to any one-year war, nor even a two-year war; it points to four or five years, and the possibility of even more.

But more serious still, it does not point to easy or certain victory. If the ultimate result were certain, then we should not have to prepare for a siege. If it were simply a war of "attrition," our government would put more money into the channels of offensive action. But it is very clear that our government sees something through the battle-smoke that starts a shiver. What is it? France weakening? Italy about to collapse? England beginning to slacken? Or are our leaders fearful that Russia's sickening failure is not temporary and curable, but permanent and hopeless?

Washington certainly is in possession of alarming facts, and apparently the outlook has grown more alarming recently. Indeed just at this time the general aspect of the war is peculiarly dark, even to an outsider. One can not even make a confident guess, or hold an decided opinion, in regard to Russia. The worst possible may come to pass in that region. There is a suspicion that Germany may launch a great offensive against Italy, and rumors from Italy raise grave fears that she may be almost at the length of her chain.

On the western front the allies are safe—for the present. That is to say, we are confident that by no conceivable effort could the Germans break the allied front seriously. Nevertheless it must be admitted that the allies are making no progress. Even though the crown prince has squandered a hundred thousand lives and has failed to regain any ground along the Aisne heights, still we must admit that the French had very hard work to beat him off. In a large sense, the British and French advances early in the season have been rather useless, despite the great captures of German prisoners and guns.

On the sea there has been no crisis, but it is clear that events move steadily toward an ultimate crisis which will be a hopeless disaster unless we can gain the upper hand in a certain limited number of months. Even in the air, where the allies long have reigned supreme, there is uncertainty. Just now reports indicate that the Germans are fully equal to the allies and perhaps a little superior to them. The recent raid on Paris—the first for more than a year—is an alarming corroboration of the rumor that the Germans have obtained at least a temporary ascendancy in aviation.

On the whole, then, the prospect is anything but satisfactory. It is not black, because it would be base cowardice even to think of defeat when we still possess a hundred million people and the resources of a continent. But all hope of easy or early salvation has vanished. Many

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks batho isternal'y now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible materini left over in the body which if not eliminated every day, become food for the millions of bacteria which infest tha bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into tha blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

It's Grandmother's Recipe to keep her Locks Dark, Glossy, Beautiful.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A WORD FOR MOTHERS

It is a grave mistake for mothers to neglect their aches and pains and suffer in silence—this only leads to chronic sickness and often shortens life.

If your work is tiring; if your nerves are excitable; if you feel languid, weary or depressed, you should know that Scott's Emulsion overcomes just such conditions.

It possesses in concentrated form the very elements to invigorate the blood, strengthen the tissues, nourish the nerves and build strength.

Scott's is strengthening thousands of mothers—and will help you. No alcohol.

DEATH TAKES OLD PIONEER

JOHN E. DARRAH, CLARION, CALLED TUESDAY

Moved to Homestead at that Place in 1876—Was Civil War Veteran and Mason

John Edward Darrah, pioneer Clarion man, member of the Masonic fraternity in Petoskey, and a Civil war veteran, died late Tuesday after a long illness. He was seventy-one years old.

Mr. Darrah was born in New York Jan. 1, 1846, served through the Civil war with a Pennsylvania regiment, and later came to Michigan. Mr. and Mrs. Darrah were married at Rockford, Michigan, Jan. 1, 1870.

They moved to Clarion in 1876 when that region was a vast wilderness. They erected a small cabin on a homestead, their present farm home, and later erected a pretty residence and large barns, making their farm one of the finest in that region. At the time of their arrival there their nearest neighbors resided on the north arm of Walloon Lake.

Mr. Darrah served for some time as a deputy state factory inspector in this district and held other offices. He was financially interested in various manufacturing undertakings in Petoskey and other places.

He was a member of Ivanhoe Commandery, No. 36, K. T.; Petoskey Council, No. 52; R. & S. M., Emmet chapter, N. 104; R. A. M., and Durand lodge, No. 344, F. & A. M.

Besides the widow he is survived by one daughter, Mrs. John Colden, of Clarion. Fred Darrah, of Petoskey, is a nephew and for some time made his home with his uncle at Clarion.

The funeral was held at 1:30 o'clock Thursday from the home and under the auspices of Ivanhoe Commandery, No. 36, K. T., of Petoskey. Burial at Clarion cemetery, which is located on the Darrah homestead.

COMMUNICATION

We have just received a copy of our fellow townsman's, F. A. Butler's speech at the convention of the State Rural Letter Carriers' association, at Battle Creek, on July 26th last, where Mr. Butler was again honored with the secretaryship of the association. As the speech is a dandy and full of "pep" we reproduce it herewith—Ed.

"Mr. President and Brother Carriers:—In appearing before you today to dedicate our monument, as I look upon it, to the memory of the wise officials of our great government who established the system of free delivery and parcel post, I do so rather reluctantly because of the sense of feeling that I lack ability to do the subject justice. I regard our branch of the great Post Office department as one of the most important in the United States, extending as it does throughout the entire length and breadth of our land. In our daily visits along our routes we take to our patrons unexpected news. We see the signs of sadness as they come for their mail caused by the letter of yesterday, and again we see joy and gladness. One extreme follows another. We dedicate this, the 20th anniversary day of the R. F. D. system in the great state of Michigan, with a full appreciation that upon us here assembled, as well as those left behind to carry on our work during our absence, that the great responsibility rests upon us of doing this work and of doing it right. Sums of money, valuable packages of merchandise, letters of loved ones, answers and acknowledgements are to be returned, and it is up to each and every one of us, individually and collectively, to see that no dishonesty occurs. No failure in the performance of our daily duties. To be polite, attentive, courteous and obliging to all, thereby demanding from them their respect, and we to be worthy of the confidence they repose in us. I am sorry not to be able to present our Uncle Geo. H. Van Pelt, of Charlevoix, to you today. He fully expected to be with us but his pressure of good roads business was so great that he could not come. He is our only honorary member and I had hoped up to the last minute that I could convine him that the proper thing for him to do was to come and renew his friendship with the new friends he made at Charlevoix last year, but I failed. He however, sends you his very best gilt edged love and said 'tell the boys I am still fighting your battles just the same as I was last year.' He talks good permanent concrete roads all the time because he says "tell the boys the same two pieces of concrete road he showed them while they were here are still there just exactly as good today as they were the day they were put down seven and eight years ago respectively.' That they are not only the best, but that they are much cheaper in the long run, and what Uncle George says goes with us. No one party of men can be, nor are they, greater exponents of good roads than are R. F. D. men. We have to travel these roads 300 days every year and it is for our interest to have the roads in good condition every day, all the way. Dirt roads or gravel roads will not stand up and they cannot be made to do so without continual expenditure of money in repairs. And like a rope being just as strong as its weakest place, so is it with a road. Our parcel post business is constantly increasing and making an increased demand for good roads. Remember that a kicking man, like a kicking mule is using his motive equipment for something besides progress. Therefore, be it resolved: First, that this conference urge the national and state administrations, city and highway departments, county commissioners, surveyors, township trustees, the city council and all such people to adopt and to go forward progressively in this road building scheme.

Second: We feel proud of what our state has already done in the building of good roads and recommend wherever possible concrete roads built 16 feet wide, using federal and state aid in so doing on all national roads. On others, state aid. We say concrete because they are good 365 days in the year and our experience in Charlevoix with these two stretches that wa already have, which as I said before, have been down seven and eight years respectively, has been that they have not cost the city one cent of expense from the day that they were put down.

"I thank you."

Indifference

I am of the opinion that there are quite a lot of men who do not care whether they have concrete roads or not. If they are brought to them and they can get them, it is all right, and it is equally all right if they do not get them, but mark my words, they will be the first fellows to squeal when they learn that they have lost out by their own disinterestedness and indifference. Indifference is a thief and should not be tolerated for a moment. Indifference has lost many a man a good thing and will continue to do so just as long as they continue to indulge in it. A disinterested man is a mighty hard man to talk to or to have anything to do with. I would rather have a man get up and howl, like some of us do, than to sit back in a lazy, good for nothing sort of way, or whistle while you are talking, or stand on one foot leaning up against the side of a barn or walking away eight or ten foot to a box and sit down. You can bet that the cows, if they have any (which is doubtful) belonging to such men, are never milked on time.

HEART of the SUNSET

By REX BEACH

Author of "The Spoilers," "The Iron Trail," "The Silver Horde," Etc.

But the fellow's hatred was out of bounds now, and by the bitterness of his vituperation he seemed to invite death. Dave interrupted his vitriolic curses to ask harshly:

"Will you tell me, or will yoo force me to wring the truth out of you?"

Jose answered by spitting at his captor; then he gritted an unspeakable epithet from between his teeth.

Dave addressed him with an air of finality. "You killed that mao nod your life is forfeit, so it doesn't make much difference whether I take it or whether the state takes it. You are brave enough to die—most of yoo Mexicans are—but the state can't force you to speak, and I can." Jose sneered. "Oh yes, I can! I intend to know all that you know, and it will be better for you to tell me voluntarily. I must learn where Senora Austin is, and I must learn quickly, if I have to kill you by inches to get the truth."

"So! Torture, eh? Good. I can believe it of you. Well, a slow fire will not make me speak."

"No. A fire would be too easy, Jose."

"Eh?"

Without answer Dave strode out of the room. He was back before his prisoner could do more than wrench at his bonds, and with him he brought his lariat and his canteen.

"What are you going to do?" Jose inquired, backing away until he was once more at bay.

"I'm going to give you a drink."

"Whisky? You think you can make me drunk?" The horse-breaker laughed loudly but uneasily.

"Not whisky; water. I'm going to give you a drink of water."

"What capers!"

"When you've drunk enough you'll tell me why you killed your employer and where General Longorio has taken his wife. Yes, and everything else I want to know." Seizing the amazed Mexican, Dave flung him upon Morales' hard board bench, and in spite of the fellow's struggles deftly made him fast. When he had finished—and it was no easy job—Jose lay "spread-eagled" upon his back, his wrists and ankles firmly bound to the corners and foot posts, his body secured by a tight loop over his waist. The rope cut painfully and brought a curse from the prisoner when he strained at it. Law surveyed him with a face of stone.

"I don't want to do this," he declared, "but I know your kind. I give you one more chance. Will you tell me?"

Jose drew his lips back in a snarl of rage and pain, and Dave realized that further words were useless. He felt a certain pity for his victim and no little admiration for his courage, but such feelings were of small consequence as against his agonizing fears for Alaire's safety. Had he in the least doubted Jose's guilty knowledge of Longorio's intentions, Dave would have hesitated before employing the barbarous measures he had in mind, but—there was nothing else for it. He pulled the canteen cork and jammed the mouthpiece firmly to Jose's lips. Closing the fellow's nostrils with his free hand, he forced him to drink.

Jose clenched his teeth, he tried to roll his head, he held his breath until his face grew purple and his eyes bulged. He strained like a man upon the rack. The bench creaked to his muscular contortions; the rope tightened. It was terribly cruel, this crushing of a strong will bent on resistance to the uttermost; but never was an executioner more pitiless, never did a prisoner's agony receive less consideration. The warm water spilled over Jose's face, it drenched his neck and chest; his joints creaked as he strove for freedom and tried to twist his head out of Law's iron grasp. The seconds dragged, until finally nature asserted herself. The imprisoned breath burst forth; there sounded a loud gurgling cry and a choking inhalation. Jose's body writhed with the convulsions of drowning as the water and air were sucked into his lungs. Law was kneeling over his victim now, his weight and strength so applied that Jose had no liberty of action and could only drink, coughing and fighting for air. Somehow he managed to revive himself briefly and again shut his teeth; but a moment more and he was again retched with the furious battle for air, more desperate now than before. After a while Law freed his victim's nostrils and allowed him a partial breath, then once more crushed the mouthpiece against his lips. By and by, to relieve his torture, Jose began to drink in great noisy gulps, striving to empty the vessel.

But the stomach's capacity is limited. In time Jose felt himself bursting; the liquid began to regurgitate. This was not mere pain that he suffered, but the ultimate nightmare horror of death more awful than anything he had ever imagined. Jose would have met a bullet, a knife, a lash, without flinching; flames would not have served to weaken his resolve; but this slow drowning was infinitely worse than the worst he had thought possible; he was suffocating by long, black, agonizing minutes. Every nerve and muscle of his body, every cell in his bursting lungs, fought against the outrage in a purely physical frenzy over which his will power had no control. Nor would insensibility come to his relief—Law watched him too carefully for that. He could not even voice his sufferings by shrieks; he could only writhe and retch and gurgle while the ropes bit into his flesh and his captor knelt upon him like a monstrous stone weight.

But Jose had made a better fight than he knew. The canteen ran dry at last, and Law was forced to release his hold.

"Will you speak?" he demanded.

Thinking that he had come safely through the ordeal, Jose shook his head; he rolled his bulging, bloodshot eyes and vomited, then managed to call God to witness his innocence.

Dave went into the next room and refilled the canteen. When he reappeared with the dripping vessel in his hand, Jose tried to scream. But his throat was torn and strained; the sound of his own voice frightened him.

Once more the torment began. The tortured man was weaker now, and in consequence he resisted more feebly; but not until he was less than half conscious did Law spare him to recover.

Jose lay sick, frightened, inert. Dave watched him without pity. The fellow's wrists were black and swollen, his lips were bleeding; he was stretched like a dumb animal upon the vivisectionist's table, and no surgeon with lance and scalpel could have shown less emotion than did his inquisitor. Having no intention of defeating his own ends, Dave allowed his victim ample time in which to regain his ability to suffer.

Alaire Austin had been right when she said that Dave might be ruthless; and yet the man was by no means incapable of compassion. At the present moment, however, he considered himself simply as the instrument by which Alaire was to be saved. His own feelings had nothing to do with the matter; neither had the sufferings of this Mexican. Therefore he steeled himself to prolong the agony until the murderer's stubborn spirit was worn down. Once again he put his question, and, again receiving defiance, jammed the canteen between Jose's teeth.

But human nature is weak. For the first time in his life Jose Sanchez felt terror—a terror too awful to be endured—and he made the sign.

He was no longer the insolent defier, the challenger, but an imploring wretch, whose last power of resistance had been completely shattered. His frightened eyes were glued to that devilish vessel in which his manhood had dissolved, the fear of it made a woman of him.

Slowly, in sighs and whimpers, in agonies of reluctance, his story came; his words were rendered almost incomprehensible by his abysmal fright. When he had purged himself of his secret Dave promptly unbound him; then leaving him more than half dead, he went to the telephone which connected the pumping station with Las Palmas and called up the ranch.

He was surprised when Blaze Jones answered. Blaze, it seemed, had just arrived, summoned by news of the tragedy. The countryside had been alarmed and a search for Ed Austin's slayer was being organized.

"Call it off," Dave told him. "I've got your man." Blaze stuttered his surprise and incredulity. "I mean it. It's Jose Sanchez, and he has confessed. I want you to come here, quick; and come alone, if you don't mind. I need your help."

Within ten minutes Jones piloted his automobile into the clearing beside the river, and, leaving his motor running, leaped from the car.

Dave met him at the door of the Morales house and briefly told him the story of Jose's capture.

"Say! That's quick work," the rancher cried, admiringly. "Why, Ed ain't cold yet! You gave him the 'water-cure,' eh? Now I reckoned it would take more than water to make a Mexican talk."

"Jose was hired for the work; he laid for Ed Austin in the pecan grove and shot him as he passed."

"Hired! Why this hombre needs quick hangin', don't he? I told 'em at Las Palmas that you'd rounded up the guilty party, so I reckon they'll be here in a few minutes. We'll just stretch this horse-wrangler, and save the county some expense." Law shrugged. "Do what you like with him, but—it isn't necessary. He'll confess in regulation form, I'm sure. I had to work fast to learn what became of Mrs. Austin."

"Miz Austin? What's happened to her?"

Dave's voice changed; there was a sudden quickening of his words. "They've got her, Blaze. They waited until they had her safe before they killed Ed."

"They?' Who are you talkin' about?"

"I mean Longorio and his outfit. He's got her over yonder." Dave flung out a trembling hand toward the river.

Seeing that his hearer failed to comprehend, he explained, swiftly: "He's crazy about her—got one of those Mexican infatuations—and you know what that means. He couldn't steal her from Las Palmas—she wouldn't have anything to do with him—so he used that old cattle deal as an excuse to get her across the border. Then he put Ed out of the way. She went of her own accord, and she didn't tell Austin, because they were having trouble. She's gone to La Feria, Bluzo."

"La Feria! Then she's in for it."

Dave nodded his agreement; for the first time Blaze noted how white and set was his friend's face.

"Longorio must have foreseen what was coming," Dave went on. "That country's aflame; Americans aren't safe over there. If war is declared, a good many of them will never be heard from. He knows that. He's got her safe. She can't get out."

Blaze was very grave when next he spoke. "Dave, this is bad—bad. I can't understand what made her go. Why, she must have been out of her head. But we've got to do something. We've got to burn the wires to Washington—yes, and to Mexico City. We must get the government to send soldiers after her. What have we got 'em for, anyhow?"

"Washington won't do anything. What can be done when there are thousands of American women in the same danger? What steps can the government take with diplomatic relations suspended? Those greasers are filling their jails with our people—rounding 'em up for the day of the big break. No, Longorio saw it all coming—he's no fool. He's got her; she's in there—trapped."

Blaze took the speaker by the shoulder and faced him about. "Look here," said he, "I'm beginnin' to get wise to you. I believe you're—the man in the case." When Dave nodded, he vented his amazement in a long whistle. After a moment he asked, "Well, why did you want me to come here alone, ahead of the others?"

"Because I want you to know the whole inside of this thing so that you can get busy when I'm gone; because I want to borrow what money you have—"

"What you aimin' to pull off?' Blaze inquired, suspiciously.

"I'm going to find her and bring her out."

"You? Why, Dave, you can't get through. This is a job for the soldiers."

But Dave hardly seemed to hear him. "You must start things moving at once," he said, urgently. "Spread the news, get the story into the papers, notify the authorities. Get every influence at work, from here to headquarters; get your senator and the governor of the state at work. Ellsworth will help you. And now give me your last dollar."

Blaze emptied his pockets, shaking his shaggy head the while. "La Feria is a hundred and fifty miles in," he remonstrated.

"By rail from Pachio, yes. But it's barely a hundred, straight from here."

"You ain't got a chance, single-handed. You're crazy to try it."

Dave turned a sick, colorless face to his friend. "They'll carve a stone for Longorio if I do get through." He called to Montrosa, and the mare came to him, bolding her head to one side so as not to tread upon her dragging reins.

"I'm 'most tempted to go with you," Blaze stammered uncertainly.

"No. Somebody has to stay here and stir things up. If we had twenty men like you we might cut our way in and out, but there's no time to organize, and, anyhow, the government would probably stop us. I've got a hunch that I'll make it. If I don't—why, it's all right."

The two men shook hands lingeringly, awkwardly; then Blaze managed to wish his friend luck. "If you don't come back," he said, with a peculiar catch in his voice, "I reckon there's enough good Texans left to follow your trail. I'll sure look forward to it."

Dave took the river bank to Sangre de Cristo, where, by means of the dilapidated ferry, he gained the Mexican side. Once across, he rode straight up toward the village of Romero. When challenged by an undersized soldier he merely spurred Montrosa forward, eying the sentry so grimly that the man did no more than linger his rifle uncertainly, cursing under his breath the overbearing airs of all gringos. Nor did the rider trouble to make the slightest detour, but cantered the full length of Romero's dusty street, the target of more than one pair of hostile eyes. To those who saw him, soldiers and civilians alike, it was evident that this stranger had business, and no one felt called upon to question its nature. There are men who carry an air more potent than a bodyguard, and Dave Law was one of these. Before the village had thoroughly awakened to his coming he was gone, without a glance to the right or left, without a word to anyone.

When Romero was at his back he rode for a mile or two through a region of tiny scattered farms and neglected garden patches, after which he came out into the mesquite. For all the signs he saw, he might then have been in the heart of a foreign country. Mexico had swallowed him.

As the afternoon heat subsided, Montrosa let herself out into a freer gait and began to cover the distance rapidly, heading due west through a land of cactus and dagger, of thorn and barb and bramble.

President Wilson has expressed his opinion

of the duty relating to savings bank deposits in these true sentences:

"If a man does not provide for his children, if he does not provide for all those dependent upon him, and if he has not that vision of conditions to come, and that care for the days that have not yet dawned, which we sum up in the whole idea of thrift and saving, then he has not opened his eyes to any adequate conception of human life. We are in this world not to provide for ourselves, but for others and that is the basis of economy."

SELECTIVE CHARITY NEEDED

When one sees the attitude of certain classes of men toward work in times when work is plentiful, our faith in our system of public charity is knocked into a coked hat. Is there no way to weed out the fit and the unfit when it comes to passing alms which people who work provide?

During the past week a well known farmer residing near Ypsilanti, a man who is honest and a most excellent employer, came to Ypsilanti to secure two men to help for several days in haying. He visited street idlers in large number, offering $4 per day and board as well as transportation to and from the farm. He could find no takers.

Most of those found idling and importuned to take the work were negroes. Some of them declared "I can't do it boss." Others answered boldly "I don't want to work." Some were even honest enough to say they did not come to town to work and were going to take it easy.

When winter comes, when foodstuffs are high and fuel is not only costly but hard to get, the city poor commissioner will be ridden to death by these same worthless men who will plead piteously for food and fuel. Will it be given to them? Of course. Who would see their families starve or suffer from cold?

The man who will evolve some satisfactory method of dealing with these worthless parasites will be doing his community a real service. There ought to be some selective system to use in dealing our charity. Their summer records ought to count for something when it comes to handling out money provided by the industrious and honest citizens for charitable purposes. How many towns in Michigan would this same condition apply to?.—Ypsilanti Record.

SAVING THE SOLDIERS

Discussing the work of the Y. M. C. A., and the huge amount of money expended in the movement, one man volunteered that if the expenditure enormous though it be, resulted in saving just one boy, it was money well spent. "Aren't you a little extravagant in that?" asked another man. "Not if it was my boy," was the telling reply.

That is the special and the heart appeal of the Y. M. C. A. movement. It is the saving of the individual boy, the man's son and the woman's son, from moral and physical decay.

The war has widened and intensified the opportunity of the Y. M. C. A. in its prophylactic and rescue work, just as the war has enlarged all opportunities generally. In our own country today, there are tens of thousands of mothers' and fathers' boys herded in concentration camps, exiled from the restraining and enobling influences of home and mother and sister. It is these boys the Y. M. C. A. is rallying to protect, and the general trend of reports in the matter is that the self-selected christian task is being carried on with tact and success. Millions of dollars have been raised for the work and the public is easy in the confidence that the money will be intelligently and conscientiously expended.

The mobilization camps of the American soldier must be kept healthful and wholesome and the raids of vice in various form must be guarded against. This is the position of the military department, the general government and the people generally. The attitude regarding these dangers of camp life is one of wakefulness. The Y. M. C. A. is one of the most important agencies in the work. It has the hearty sympathy and countenance of the government whose effort in the same direction it supplements and co-ordinates.

HANDLING THE SLACKERS AND DODGERS

When Uncle Sam makes a rule he "means business," as army slackers and dodgers are sure to discover. Federal officials are now after the slackers who failed to register in accordance with the requirements laid down by the government, and quite a number of this class are being treated to fines and jail sentences, in addition to which they still will face the possibility of military service. Also the local exemption boards have received notice not to worry about "dodgers" who fail to respond to the summons to appear for examination for military service. At the end of ten days simply report such cases, is the instruction from Washington, and the government will do the rest.

The "rest" as explained by the judge advocate general, will be to regard all such men as actually drafted with forfeiture of any claim for exemption, and the drafted men to be treated as deserters when they are located and are unable to offer a satisfactory excuse for their negligence. Punishment for an army deserter is rather severe, it may be remarked, and those who face such punishment probably will wish they had complied with the government rule in the first place. In fact, it is not wise to ignore or neglect any rule laid down by the federal government, for the latter never fails to follow up such rules and severely punish offenders. When the government makes a requirement it is best to comply with it.

People should not bother the exemption board with pestiferous claims for anybody. The boards are honest, leave the matter to them and appeal if you are dissatisfied.

A revised German estimate says the submarines can win the war in 45 months. The Allies seem to be keeping the German statisticians busy revising the estimates.

People do a lot of complaining about the hot weather, but they would do still more if the weather failed to turn hot and thus hasten the maturing crops.

If the new law is passed in England women over 30 are to be given the vote. And yet they say Englishmen have no sense of humor.

Up to June 30 Germany had distributed 2,250,000 iron crosses. And yet they say there is a scarcity of iron in Germany.

The government is in the market for five million pounds of canned peas. Will it promise to save the cans?

Among the shortages there's a noticeable scarcity of shark and fish stories this season.

In spite of so many "war" gardens the price of produce stays remarkably high.

CHATANOOGA COUPLE ARE MARRIED HERE

Quiet Wedding at Home of R. F. Sloan Tuesday Morning

A quiet wedding took place at the home of R. F. Sloan on State street, last Tuesday morning, August 7th, at 8:30 o'clock, when Miss Amelia Milligan, a niece of Mrs. Sloan, who has been here for several weeks visiting the latter from Chanttanooga, Tennessee, became the bride of Cylde D. Wilkins, also of Chattanooga, who had arrived here the day before for the ceremony.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. E. Taggart, after which the happy couple left on the morning train for a few days honeymoon. They will be at home to their friends after the 20th of this month, in Chattanooga, of which city both have been life-long residents, and where Mr. Wilkins holds a responsible position with a large furniture house.

HER CURIOSITY SATISFIED

LITTLE GIRL SUFFERS A BAD TUMBLE

Child of Summer Visitor Falls From Moving Car and Sustains Painful Bruises

Monday morning a resorter from Kentucky (name unknown) accompanied by his little daughter, came into Erickson & Fowler's garage and expressed his intention of buying a car. He was allowed to take one of the cars for a try-out and the two got in and drove away.

They got onto Dixon avenue and were bowling along at a good clip when the tonneau door flew open and the little girl of some two or three years old, who had evidently been playing with the latch on the door, fell out, landing on her face and when picked up was found to be badly brulsed and cut about the eye, cheek and lip. She was taken to a local physician who bandaged her up—a sadder but somewhat wiser little girl.

THREE BUSINESS PLACES DESTROYED BY FIRE

Pellston Business Men Suffer Fire Loss of $25,000

Pellston suffered a heavy fire loss early Sunday morning of last week when three business places ineluding the F. E. Leonhard & Son's dry goods store and one vacant building were destroyed. The damage is estimated at between $20,000 and $25,000 with little insurance. The heaviest losers were Leonhard & Son's, whose stock of dry goods, etc., was estimated at from $15,000 to $16,000 with about twenty-five per eent insurance.

The fire is supposed to have started from the gasoline burner which heated the water used in the barber shop. Some declare it started from a cigarette stub thrown into a pile of papers behind the bar in the pool room.

This building was formerly occupied by Fred Lovell, who reeently sold out to William Beauchams. From there it spread to the Leonhard & Sons' store and then to the building oceupied by the J. D. McFall and Wallace Walrond who operated a box ball bowling alley and ice cream parlor. This building was owned by E. S. Martin of Petoskey. The vacant building known as the Keiser building was also burned.

Some of the stock in the three occupied buildings was removed but this will not amount to over fifteen or twenty per cent of the total.

Just ten days ago we opened the first shipment from the Wooltex tailors. These stunning models are for women who motor, ride, enjoy the out-of-doors in the late summer months, and know the need of a stylish, comfy coat as well as for the woman going to the sea-shore or the northern lake resort.

Here are illustrated a few models still to be had in a wide range of beautiful, warmth-without-weight fabrics—Dublays, Wool Velours, Lustre Velours and Duffield Weaves.

This showing is your opportunity to get a smart fall coat now to give comfort on chilly evenings; to get it a month in advance of the season; and best of all to get it at a price that is remarkable—a price that could not be possible any other time or under any other conditions.

We secured these coats by special arrangements with The H. Black Company, makers of the famous Wooltex garments for young women. We could find no other coats in the whole market to touch them in value.

Quick action is called for—these coats are selling fast.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidaeys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entirs urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes ths body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their aormal activity. Ths function of the kidaeys is to filter the blood. In 24 bours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping ths kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too mueh; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from ths acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize ths acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up ths water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

For his mill crew he has words of more then ordinary praise and said that he believed he had the beat saw mill crew in the state and that much of his success here was due to their excellent work. Mr. von Platen also stated that in all tha years he has been here he haa had friction with no one in any way aad that the people and the local institutions have all fulfilled their obligationa to the letter. His contract with the Railroad Co. extended over a period of yeara and he remarked that the service rendered hy them was very satisfactory.

people thought our size and resources would win by their "moral effect." But Germany is not easily bluffed. Again they fondly imagined that by just scratching the surface of the nation we could just add enough military power to turn the scale. Again disappointment; it is all we can do to keep the scales even.

Instead of scratching the surface, we shall have to plow deep—deeper than nine out of ten of us yet are willing to believe. The first half million soldiers is merely an advance guard. Within a year we shall have a million men in Europe; in two years perhaps three millions. Ultimately we may have five millions across the seas, with as many more training at home. We shall have elderly men and boys by hundreds of thousands doing home guard duty. We shall have women by the million doing men's work. We shall have ships, artillery and airplanes in quantity undreamed of. We shall get so used to gigantic outlays that a new loan of five billions will hardly start a ripple of excitement. With scarcely a family not represented on the battlefield, our Red Cross work and other relief will be on a scale that will make our present efforts look small. There will be fewer traitors and more traitors' graves.

This is only a forecast; but it is the only forecast that can safely be made. It is merely an expression of opinion, but no other opinion can logically be drawn, whether we look at the events of the past, the facts of the present or the signs of the future.

We ought to have entered the war long before we did. Every moral consideration; every practical consideration demanded two years ago that we declare war on Germany. But the forces of pacifism and stupidity were too strong. Every man who had the insight to perceive the awful truth, and the courage to express it, was howled down as "bloodthirsty." Thus we listened to peace prattle instead of reading the words written in letters of fire before our eyes. Millions of deluded people, in the depths of their mental blindness, even played the game of the Arch-enemy with poisonous petitions and resolutions about "peace" and "neutrality."

All the while we were rushing pell-mell toward the abyss of fire and blood. Nobody could stop us; we could not stop ourselves. Now we have plunged into it. God knows how deep it is, or how wide. All we know is that it got wider and deeper while the peace-pfflers were whining and babbling these last two years.

If every one of these had been armed with a knife, diligently stabbing Americans through the heart, they would have done us less harm and have cost us fewer lives. Every pacifist who was influential enough to delay our declaration of war, or to decrease or postpone our preparations will have murdered many true Americans before this war is over. Every one of Mr. Bryan's saintly smiles will be answered with the groan of a soldier dying needlessly because of his teachings. Every hand-clap that greeted his imbecile advice will be echoed by German guns slaying additional victims of Bryanism—men that would not have had to die except for the fact that we came into the war LATE and ILL PREPARED. And David S. Jordan, O. G. Villard, the Reverend Lloyd Jones, Scott Nearing, and all the motley tribe of folly, fanaticism, cowardice and treason—imagine if you can, the superfluous sacrifice, the needless agony, that they have caused!

Every man who took active part in that infamous campaign of mischief has done vastly more harm than his puny wits can ever undo. The least he can do is to offer his body on the firing line in expiation of his offense and in mitigation of the sacrifice that worthier men must make. But though he had a score of lives, and offered them all, the score still would not be even. The monstrous folly of pacifism must be paid for in the blood of the brave and the sacrifices of the unselfish. It was always so.

But all this allusion to pacifism is only a passing thought. We have no time to dwell on it long. No matter who was guilty, or what they were guilty of, they will pass into oblivion. Those who pay the price of the pacifist's folly will be too busy even to curse him. We can only turn our back on that mistake in our national career, just as we turn it on other mistakes—for example, the attack on the Dardanelles. It is done; it can't be helped. We can only brace ourselves and harden our nerves for what is yet to come, confident that in the end we can not lose, prepared to pay the price of victory, and comforting ourselves with the thought that this very sacrifice has brought into being a new spiritual atmosphere in which the noisome toadstools of unpatriotism will wither and can not sprout again.—Adrian Daily Telegram.

Icebergs and Echoes.

Icebergs are always a source of worry to the transatlantic steamship skippers. It isn't pleasant to run along through a fog or a murky night and smash into one of these floating mountains of ice. The liner captains have a way of finding ice that at first strikes the landsman as curious. When it is suspected there are bergs in the neighborhood the whistle is kept going. If there is an echo the navigator slows down and keeps a sharp eye out, for echoes don't grow in the open ocean.

"DEAD MAN" CLEVER FAKE

HAS TWO CATASTROPHES IN ONE NIGHT

Poor Dummy Receives Harsh Treatment But Gets in Fine Work On Autoists' Nerves

On Tuesday evening of last week, Lloyd Gregory of Hayes and a party of friends were bowling along in a Ford on the Petoskey road when at a turn in the road they came full upon the body of a man, lying fairly across the road. Gregory put on the brakes and tried to stop but could not before he had run over the prone figure and passed on for several yards. He ran back to where the man was lying and as he did so noticed that the unfortunate's foot was lying some distance from his body, evidently severed by the wheel of the car. Too scared to investigate further, Gregory went to the nearest phone and called up policeman Howard, who went out immediately to the scene of the tragedy there to find—not the dismembered body of a once living, breathing human, but a cleverly devised dummy of stone and straw—the brilliant idea of some practical joker.

Howard loaded the fake into the auto and returned with it to town. When they reached Wood's barn, some of the bystanders got hold of the straw man and taking it into the barn placed it in the stablemen's bed. When that worthy discovered it, his ire was aroused and he promptly deposited it in the gutter in front of the barn. Iso Dice came along a few minutes later in his car and finished the work of mutilation. When he managed to stop, the hair was standing up all over his head and it was with difficulty that he could be convinced that he need not give himself up to the officers and plead guilty of manslaughter. Finally, however, the much abused source of the evening's entertainment found a last resting place on a nearby rubbish pile, but sounds of ribald merriment still filled the air for sometime thereafter.

FAREWELL RECEPTION TO DR. WILKINSON

Friends Honor Local Physician Leaving For Camp

A farewell reception was tendered Dr. A. M. Wilkinson Tuesday evening in the parlors of the Methodist church, which were very prettily decorated with flowers and flags. In spite of the inclement weather the doctor's many friends turned out in large numbers to do him honor, and to wish him every success in his new field of labor.

A fine program was rendered, at the close of which Rev. Quinton Walker on behalf of the church presented the doctor with a fountain pen with which to sign the death warrent of the kaiser, a camera with which to take a picture of the funeral and a stamp case with which to seal the kaiser's everlasting doom. At the close ice cream and wafers were served.

The Methodist church is to be congratulated on being able to make so large a gift to the country.

The doctor has been commissioned first lieutenant in the medical corps and leaves this week for Fort Benjamin Harrison.

RAISED GOOD SIZED SUM FOR THE KIDS

Tag Day for Michigan Children's Home Brought $185.46

The sale of little flag badges for the benefit of the Michigan Children's home society in this city last Saturday resulted in the raising of the sum of $185.46, which helps to swell the fund that will take care of 26 little ones from Charlevoix county, who are now in the hands of the institution above named.

The society desires to thank all those who helped to make its tag day in Charlevoix a success—especially the ladies of the town and the Camp Fire girls, who sold the little flag emblems.

An appeal for the children goes straight to the heart of the most of us, and there is no more worthy as well as no more important work than that being done by the Michigan Children's home society. We are glad that Charlevoix responded so liberally to the call.

Real War Pictures

Scenes taken in the European war from aeroplanes, looking down upon the battle fields of France, will be shown here Friday and Saturday evening at the opera house by Stover, the war artist, who will give a vivid description of the war, as seen by him recently.

Mr. Stover was here two years ago and his pictures were greatly admired for their clearness and brilliancy. He now comes with entirely new pictures of the great conflict and also of our own soldiers and sailors leaving for the front and great battleships.

The pictures and their description will begin at 8:00 p. m. All seats will be 15 and 25c. Beautiful local scenes will close the entertainment. 32t1

HOW TO TEST DIAMONDS AND NOT BUY PASTE.—Well made imitation diamonds commonly scratch glass, but they do not cut it. A real diamond drawn lightly over the surface cuts the glass so completely that the slightest blow will cause a separation. Another old test is that in which a file is employed. In the case of a real stone it is impossible to make any impression with the implement. An imitation article is easily marked. Or the suspected gem may be placed between two coins and pressed hard with the fingers. It will be impossible to make the slightest impression on a real diamond, but in the case of a paste article the edges may be crushed. The effect can be discerned by a critical examination with a lens.

When a diamond is quite clean and dry carry out the following experiment: Place on the surface a tiny drop of water. Now take a needle or pin and try to move the drop about. If the diamond is genuine the drop can be rolled about intact. On the other hand, where the gem is an imitation the water spreads directly it is touched with the needle point.

Another very good test may be carried out with a tumbler of water. Into this put the suspected article and examine its appearance. A real diamond will show up in the water with startling clearness, and it can never be confounded with the water. On the other hand, the imitation looks indefinite, and it is sometimes difficult to see it clearly at all.

Generally speaking, the facets in a real diamond are not cut so truly as those in the imitation. This is on account of the fact that diamonds are sold by weight; hence the cutter tries to preserve as much of the original as possible, even making small sacrifices in the matter of regularity. In the case of a paste article or a cheaper stone no such need arises, and the cutter endeavors to make the stone appear as perfect in shape as possible. To observe such irregularities as sometimes occur in a real diamond it is needful to examine it with great care.

The stranger in Guayaquil, in Ecuador, at once remarks one very curious feature of its life and general appearance. We are used to seeing nets over our horses in the summer, but such an outfit as is required by the donkeys in the tropics strikes the stranger as ludicrous. The donkeys are numerous in the city and are used for all manner of load purposes, from baskets of fruit to the carcasses of butcher's meat. In the morning a string of them may be seen trotting through the streets with a load of fresh meat from the slaughter house, which is situated outside the town. The donkeys are all provided with coverings around the fore legs, like ordinary trousers, and with a protection over the ears against the mosquitoes. The Guayaquil donkey presents a most comical appearance in trousers, especially if his garment is embroidered, as it sometimes is.

Canoe Building Revolutionized

IT HAS long been recognized that veneer would be the ideal material for canoes and boats, if only it could be glued with a waterproof glue. This problem has at last been solved and the veneer of which the above canoe is made can be boiled or baked for hours without giving way in the least, proving that it is unaffected by either moisture or heat, the alternating action of which causes a boat to leak.

YOU CANNOT SPLIT IT

The "V'NEER" Canoe shown above is moulded from practically one piece of veneer with no joints below the water line, excepting at the two ends. Being made of three-ply veneer with grain running in opposite directions, it cannot split, check, swell, or shrink neither will it warp out of shape.

WILL NOT WINTER CHECK

While lighter than any canoe on the market, it is many times stronger and will endure, without serious injury, treatment that would ruin any other canoe now made. The great strength resulting from its veneer construction makes the use of ribs unnecessary, giving a perfectly smooth interior, with a great saving in weight.

CANOE WEIGHS ONLY 60 POUNDS

A nicely finished wood outside surface makes this canoe run much more easily than a canvas-covered craft, while the beautiful hard, close-grained birch veneer of which it is constructed, makes it possible to land on a rocky beach or shoot a swift rapids with a feeling of assurance never before possessed by the enthusiastic canoeist.

IT SHOULD LAST A LIFETIME

It is literally a genuine "BIRCH" that would startle the primitive American Indian out of his stoicism, and has an air of distinction not found in other canoes It will attract attention anywhere.

(A column edited by the Caddie master for the purpose of sharpening the caddies' interest in their work and keeping parents in touch with those in charge of the boys at the golf grounds.)

—o—

The excursion is at last actually in sight. The "Columbia" has been chartered for Sunday, the nineteenth and North Manitou Island appointed as the place of visit. The "Columbia" will leave Wilbur's dock at seven o'clock in the morning, and return will be made about dark. As in previous years, this excursion is for the caddies who have stuck to the work through the season, and who are in good standing at the time. Each boy who goes is asked to bring only one thing: a tin cup for his lemonade. Everything else is furnished. It is hoped that no parents will be afraid for the welfare of their boys on this trip. The supervision will be good, as it has been in the past, and the food will be simple, but as good as money can buy.

—o—

Every caddie should show his appreciation of the readiness with which the players have contributed their dollars for this great holiday, by giving his best effort to his daily work at the links. So far as can be learned, Charlevoix has the only body of caddies that is given this kind of treat annually. Banquets are given for the caddies in many places, but the local lads are in a class by themselves with their excursion.

—o—

The caddie fraternity loses three good members this week when the McCaffertys leave for Chicago, where their father, Captain Peter McCafferty has been for some time. Mrs. McCafferty with the children, Jerald excepted, left for there Wednesday evening. Jerald will spend about two weeks on the Island before going south—what island? Beaver Island, of course. What other island is there? There is a possibility that the family will be back for the summer next year.

—o—

This fall, after the play has fallen off, caddie classes will be held two or three time a week at the golf grounds. Boys who were new on the course this year, and those who have never caddied but intend to do so next spring, will be asked to attend. These classes will also be held for a week or two before the opening of the season next spring. Caddies who have attended these classes will be given the best chances for employment next season. Parents are asked now, and will be reminded later, to help make these classes well attended and profitable.

—o—

The wind was in the east last Tuesday morning, with the result that about three-fourths of the boys got paid for getting rained on after dinner.

—o—

Yettow Hyek made the 18 holes last Sunday afternoon with a score of 79, which beat his former record by two points.

—o—

It is highly probably that the $23 formerly given to the two winners and two runners up in the caddies tournament will be given out as first and seconds in a series of athletic events this year: foot racing, jumping, throwing, diving and swimming. A dollar as first prize and fifty cents as second in a number of events would scatter the money more and interest a larger number of boys.

—o—

Fred Morton (3) and (sometimes!) William Wood (9) chase ice for the coolers, this year. Last week they often had to make two trips a day.

—o—

For the next three weeks all caddies should be at work early. These are the days to make money. Sleep late this winter. The golf grounds are open and play starts at seven o'clock. Missing a turn may mean fifty or seventy-five cents, or even a dollar. There's good money for every steady boy.

—o—

And don't forget the banks. Save!

GRAY TO EXPLAIN PLANS

BIG ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN IS PLANNED

Tourist Associatioo Head Will Show How Michigan May Lead All Rasort Ragions

The readers of the Courier are by this time familiar with ths fact that an organization has besn formed witb headquarters at Grand Rapids the purpose of which is to advertise ths attractiona of Michigan resorts in a manner similar to that adopted by Colorado and other statea whare work of like character has met witb signal success—ths Michigan Tourist and Resort Association.

On next Friday evening, Mr. H. J. Gray of Grand Rapids, secrstary of the newly formed tourist and resort association, will explain the plans of the organization and the nature of ths results it is intended to accomplish to the Charlevoix Commsrcial sssociation, at the Odd Fellows club room, back of Rosa's barber shop and it is hoped that a full attendance will be present.

The key note of the advertising campaign which will put Michigan in the place where she belongs, at ths head of the country's resort regions, is concentration of ensrgies and funds. It is intended to centrolize all the vorious advertising schemes attempted by Michigan resort communities snd to divert the funds appropriated for such purposes (and which are now largely wasted) into a single channel which will lead to the widest possible publicity and produce the greatest results for the money expended.

The Michigan Tourist & Resort association, which had its beginnings in the Western Michigan Development Bureau and the Grand Rapids chamber of commerce, plans to expend as a starter some $30,000, of which Charlevoix county's share should be sbout $2,000. The money will be expended chiefly in the publication of a guide book, similar to that issued by Foster's and other large information agencies, but which will go much farther than any of them.

Advertisemsnts of hotels and garages will be solicited in ths various resort communities and inquiries resulting from these advertisements will be turned in to the main office of the association at Grand Rapids, from which live lists will be issued to advertisers of nsmes and addresses of persons making inquirles regarding accommodations. Only those inquiries regarding Michigan resorts will appear in such lists. For instance, a nsn inquiring ahout rates and transportation routes to the Bermudas or Cubs, is not a live prospect for Michigon hotel and garagemen, and his nsme would be eliminsted from consideration in a purely Michigsn list. This is not done by most agencies and much postage and time are wasted in attempting to interest people whose nsmes are taken from lists of prospective resorters snd who would pay no attention to Michigan advertisers when their intention is to go south to tropical climes.

The proposed guide book will include road maps covering aide trips off the nsin beoten lines of trsvel and gensrol detailed informstion for the motorist. A list of hotels will occupy a place within its covers. Advertisementa solicited will be confined to high-grade hotels and garages. It is anticipated that the publicstion of this book will result in at least 30,000 Inqulries the first year.

Denver, Colorado, hss gone nfter resort business scientifically, and it ia upon similar lines thot the work of the Michignn associstion will be modsled. Their cnmpaign for 1916 brought 125,000 nuto parties into Denver during that season, each party averaging four persons and spending an avernge of $3.30 per day per person. The final financinl result was a trifle over $12,000,000 left in the city of Denver in —1916. This does not include the enormous sums spent hy people who came hy rail.

Colorodo, Wisconsin and Minneaota are Michigan's chief competitors. Besides their natursl advantagea (which it may be doubted are equal to those afforded by this state) they have a big lesd in the advertising done by the various large railroads that feed their territory. The Chicago & Northwestern, the Burlington and other giant railroad systems are all extensive advertisers of the territory they cover with their lines, and in this respect Michigan is weak. We have no large railroad aystems within onr confines and must make up for this deficiency by special effort in other directions.

Faonie M. Rose and Leonard Florsheim's Convarted Yacbt Ara Now in tba Harbor

Two more sub-chasers in the harbor. The steamer, Fannie M. Rose, lies at the dock on the south side of Round Lake, receiving the finishing touches before proceeding un her way to scenes of action. This boat, formerly ownsd by Messrs. Wilbnr, Campbell and Weaver of this city was sold by them some time ago to Captain Frank J. Peterson, a ship owner and broker of Clevelsnd, Ohio, who has practically turned her over to the government gratis, but retaining the command, giving up a lucrative busIness for the service of Uncle Sam. The members of ths crew have regulsrly enlisted in the U. S. Navy and are all sons of wealthy men, many of them like their commander, hsving made considerable finsncisl sscrifice to "do their bit."

The roster of the crew is as follows:

Arthur Walters, Grand Haven, Chief Engineer; Albln Gordon, Cleveland, Seaman, 1st class; Ernest Mohr, Milwaukee, Seaman, 1st. class; Harry Wallsce, Chicago, Fireman, 1st class; Chsrles Kerner, Milwaukee, Fireman, 1st. class; Edward Chambers, Lake View, Is., 1st Ass't. She is fitted with n fore and sft compound condensing engine, developing about 150 h. p. and s speed of from 14 to 15 miles per hour; hns a marine Scotch boiler, carries a powerful searchlight and is electrically lighted throughout.

Captain Peterson has sealed orders from the government, don't know whst his destinotion is snd couldn't tell if he did. The boat will receive a serial number by which she will he known while in the government service and will receive her fighting battery when she reaches her destination.

Leonard Florsheim's converted yacht, the "Clarinda," csme into port Tuesday night, under the commsnd of the owner's son, Irving S. Florsheim, who has received the rank of ensign in the U. S. navy. She now lies at the foot of Mason street snd will be on her way to the coast Thursday, where she will receive her battery. She csrries a crew of 12 men and a small but very agile monkey, the ship's mascot, whose favorite perch is on top of the stack. Her serial number S. P. (Scout Patrol) 185.

This craft was built at Port Clinton, Ohio, as a yacht "de luxe," but has been transformed into a formidable looking cruiser hy a coat of battleship gray. She is 98 feet long, with 18 foot beam and draws 6 feet of water. Two 300 h. p. six cylinder Craig gasoline engines, with 9 x 11-18 valve cylinders drive her at an approximate speed of 14 mllea per hour. She carries a launch fitted with a four cylinder Scripps engine and a couple of yawl boats.

COMPANY I IS RENEWED

MANY NEW ROOKIES SWELL THE RANKS

All But 25 Man of East Jordan Outfit Trassfarrad to Fort Wayne Guard Duty

(By HAROLD W. USNER)

The lsst move made by Co. I was the transferring of all but 25 of the men stationed at Port Huron to ths barracks at Fort Wayne Dstroit. Twenty-five nien were left at Port Huron under the command of Lisutenant Cummings to guard ths tunnel the rest of the bunch under Capt. Winters are aow with the rest of the new company at Detroit where they are drilling and doing guard duty.

We received the biggest surprise of our lives when wo reached Detroit and saw the number of new men there who bad joined the company since we had returnad from the border. There were about 200 of them waiting for us; more than enough to make up a war strength company and about 75 of them had to be traneferred to other companies in the regiment.

You shonld have seen Capt. Winter's face whsn hs saw them all together for the first time. You couldn't tell whether somsone had just left him a million dollars or not by the smile on his face. He even forgot that they were a company snd started to call them a regiment. And when Sgt. Griffin started to call the roll you couldn't tell whether he was stuttering, sneezing or pronouncing names. Here's an example of a few of them: Schmideknecht, Juzefowicy, Trusykowski, Ixyiocalzy. Of course they are all experienced men (at least Capt. Winters thinks so) and he has been acting accordingly.

We men that were sent from Port Huron here can't help but think how lucky the others were who were left behind in Port Huron. It was nearly as bad as leaving home to get out of that town and it was the first place we ever left that everyone wasn't yelling for joy at being ahle to get out of the place, but here we left with long drawn faces and we all looked as if our famllies had dropped dead or something.

As long as we live we will never forget the treatment that we received at the hands of the people of Port Huron and there was not a man in the company that didn't plan on going back there some dsy if he ever got out of the army. The location of our camp there wns also the best that we found during all our travels from camp to camp.

The men now at Detrolt sre spending their time just at present drilling and getting organized. Most of the men are from around East Jordan or Charlevoix county, so many of them sre friends of the old members of the company. At present Co. I is the only company of Infantry stationed at Ft. Wayne, so the job of doing all the guard duty falls to us. What movements we will make in the futuro are unknown to us yet but we hope that something will develop before long.

BENEFIT ENTERTAINMENT A GREAT SUCCESS

Well Attended By People From Nearby Towns

The Red Cross Benefit entertainment, held at the Ironton Grange hall last Friday evening was indeed a success. The entertainment given by our summer people was away beyond anyone's expectations.

People from Charlevoix, Sequanota Ironton and the surrounding country had every available seat filled and asarly all standing room was occupied by 8:30.

The program was over two houra duration nnd everyone returned to their homes feeling that their money was well spent and we were fortunate to have such helpful workers in our commnnity as the folks on the east side of our beautiful lake "The Arm."

On Saturday evening, Auguat 4, a home talent play was given by East Jordan people which waa well attended, and the play was given in a very creditable manner. East Jordan folks ara wide awake and with but a few days for advertising, the proceeds of that evening was nearly $24.00.

The last entertainment netted $80.35, proceeds of both going entirely for Red Cross work.

If you want a good time and your money to go for a good couse, "Come to Ironton."

TO USE GRAVEL THROUGHOUT

EXCEPT ON HIGHWAY AND PIKE TRUNK LINES

Plan To Finish Intercity Roads Witb Gravel, Bood County and Take Foderal Aid

In our article on the good roads meet at Boyne Falls, which was held on the evening of August 4th at the Hotel Marsh, at which 27 people were present from Charlevoix, Chandler, Melrose and Boyne Valley townships, including county road commissioner Frank House and Asst. State Highway Commissioner Nielson, we touched upon the general outlines of a plan for building the county's roads.

In more definite form, the idea is to finisb the short stretches between the three cities, building of gravel, and then proceed with the same kind of constraction on the other county roads. The supervisors will be asked to vote on a bonding proposition.

The unsnimous opinion at the Boyne Falls meeting was that we should avail ourselves of federal aid to build the 20 miles of the Dixie Highway and West Michigan Pike of concrete, 16 feet wide, which will only cost the county between $5,000 and $5,500 per mile, as the federal government pays 50 per cent and the state 15 per cent of the cost of this road.

It is also planned to build twelve miles of the Mackinac trail with state aid, for which the state will pay us $6,800 per mile. This hrings the two feeders within the confines of our county. Signs will be placed at conspicuous points directing the tourist to be sure and drive around Pine Lake before going farther south or farther north, the object being to bring Charlevoix county's greatest attractions to the notice of the people who will most appreciate them.

FACE DOPE PRODUCES PIMPLES

SAID TO CONTAIN POISON AND INFECTIOUS GERMS

Womao Io Naighborhood Cities Up Io Arms aod Afraid Thair Complexion is Ruinad

Women afflicted with diseases of tho fnce and also the desire to have a "Dorotby Varden" complexion are up ia arms in several nsighborhood cities, all on account of being guiled into purchasing a concoction guaranteed by its makers to put the "bloom of youth" in their cheeks, remove the wrinklas, and place them in the "sweet sixteen" class.

The agents, two women, strangers of course, made the rounds of these cities mentfoned, and from all reports, must have done a thriving business. Must be a big perceatage fell for their talk—and the desire to be young and rosy again. Now comes the report that the "face dops" sold contains germs of some kind, instead of producing the desired beautiful complexion, makea the face crusty, rough—in fact, a first class pimple producer. Those who bonght the dope hsve declared war and would wreak dire vengeance on the agents if they could lay their bands on them.

We have been informed these agents did a thriving business in Charlevoix, but so far have heard of no bad—or good—results from its use. Ladies in neighboring towns have a different story to tell, as the following articles reveal:

From the Boyne City Citizen—"Several days ago a woman convassed the city and sold considerable face retouchsnique to the ladies of tha city—much more by the way than one would suppose—A few days later many faces became sensitive, then pimples with crusts made their appearance and after that there was no peace in many households.

A physician who dislikes publicity sent the stuff to Lansing for examination. Bacteriologist, A. A. Spore, reported that he had brought some of the ointment into solution and had injected some of it into guinea pigs and the pigs lived. The state Board of Health considers this showing reasonably safe but add a word of caution as follows: 'I believe it a good policy for the community not to patronize agents but to buy materials of reliable houses. In this way they will run no risk of infection of any kind.'

"Not only will we escape risk of dreadful diseases but should we not remember that every dollar paid to an agent leaves the city inside of two days. Those that are not unmindful of our city's interests will keep our money inside the city limits."

From the Gaylord Herald-Times—"Two women, face dope sellers, were in town last Friday and Saturday selling their dope. A message was received by Sheriff Hecox on Monday that these women should be carefully watched as the stuff they were selling was infected. The women were clearly of German blood and were they selling the dope for a purpose other than the profit in it is not known. They sold considerable face dope to the women in this place. Under conditions which have been revealed of late by the state and government officials it is evident that the only safe method for people to employ is to refuse to purchase articles of any kind from vendors who are strangers and who are not known to be absolutely reliable. The really safe method is to purchase from your home merchant."

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get cleaner and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you—Drink more water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three time during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

SCHOOL COMMISSIONER'S NOTES

The school reports should now all be in the hands of the town clerk. He is required to deliver them to the commissioner before the sixteenth of August.

The first town clerk to get his reports into the office was Mr. Hugh E. Boyle of St. James, clerk of Peaine township.

The first report in the office was the report of the charter district of the city of Charlevoix.

At the annual meeting of the Barnard school it was voted to call a special meeting to decide whether to standardize their school. At the special meeting on July 27th, the question was decided definitely in favor of immediate improvements, including new windows first, then new seats, and all necessary corrections in the building itself. The only delay possible will be the help question and carpenters are wanted.

Mr. Ernest Peaslee is now busy at the Walker school remodeling the floor plan and installing two chemical toilets.

The Boyne Falls village school has already installed its Kaustine systems. The same systems have arrived and will soon be installed in the Maple Grove school. The Robinson school has voted a tax to provide means for a similar purchase.

The Chaddock school voted to get a new grate for the stove.

Wilson No. 2, Cedar Valley, commonly known as the Bills school voted at the annual meeting to erect an addition to the school house, accepting thereby the plans which the director E. S. Brintnall, had sent in to the state department and on which he had received a registered approval. The plan provides for twelve feet addition at the front of the building providing for warm-cloak rooms, a room furnace, a ventilating system and one side lighting. The building committee was appointed to carry out these plans.

The Miles school voted to repair the floor to prevent further warping.

A letter from R. I. Vanderhilt tells us that in Hudson township the Mothers' Club is busy; that in the Hoffman school district the mothers turned out in full force and voted to tint the school walls inside, chinck up the wall outside with cement, fix the chimney and wainscotting, and provide some sort of help toward better lighting. They also voted to establish a library and say that they will see to it that other improvements are made.

There were nine applicants at the August examination. Most of these were finishing the work of second grade certificates. All members of the Board of Examiners were present for the test.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't stay Gray! Here's an Old-time Recipe that Anybody can Apply.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

FARM HELP A GRAVE PROBLEM

SUCH IS REPORT OF COUNTY AGENT KILBORN

Rport of County Agents in Northern Michigan Concerning Condition of Crops

Conditions of northern Michigan crops, while a trifle better than recent reports gave, are not very encouraging in most districts. The continued dry spell gave the growing crops a severe set-back, which the recent rains can hardly overcome. Beans and potatoes, however, are said to be in good condition and greatly helped by the rains of last week. Below are reports made by county agents:

Emmet and Charlevoix Counties
Geo. A. Kilborn, Agent

Much damage done by excessive heat and hot winds first 3 days of week. Rain needed very badly. Haying pretty well along, some grain out, ripened up very rapidly on account of unusual heat and dry weather. So far have seen no blight on potatoes where I have been and no smut on wheat and rye. Have found a few fields of oats that were not treated that were quite badly affected, but the majority treat their seed and have no smut to speak of. Am doing all I know how to get help but cannot get enough. Wages paid in other places are higher than our farmers feel they can pay, which makes it hard to get them to come here.

Antrim, Otsego, Montmorency
R. D. Bailey, Agent

Monday and Tuesday as well as Saturday of last week were spent with Prof. F. A. Spragg, plant breeder of Michigan Agricultural College in inspecting fields of grain in Antrim County, in an endeavor to find pure seed wheat and rye for the fall sowing campaign. Not much wns found. Few farmers have the art of taking pains. Lack of interest among many farmers in speeding up fall seeding of grains because of draft taking men farming alone or is his aged father's mainstay.

Grand Traverse and Kalkaska
M. E. Duckles, Agent

The dry, hot southwest winds which have characterized the weather of the past week have been detrimental to crops in general. Early plantings of beans in particular have suffered and will be much worse damaged throughout this section unless rain comes within a few days. Oats, now filling, and young seedings of clover also are in much need of rain. Ripe cherries have been sun-burnt to a marked extent. Corn in most cases is doing well. Potatoes also are in fair condition. Wheat and rye are now being harvested without serious loss. The labor situation hangs in the balance the supply barely keeping pace with the demand. Incessant advertising has supplied about all the cherry pickers needed and the prospects are good for saving the crop.

Wexford County
Geo. E. Piper, Agent

Crops in all except southeast corner of the county are beginning to suffer from lack of rain. In some places they have already burned severely. Some sections have not had rain for nearly a month. Haying is still on, but will be nearly finished this week. Bean plants which were slightly damaged by the bean maggot or the rhizoctonia early in the season are now beginning to suffer and die giving fields spotted appearance. Beans are now blossoming and need rain badly.

Crawford, Ogemaw, Oscoda and Roscommon Counties
Wm. F. Johnston, Agent

Drove to the farm of J. B. Wolcott of Beaver Creek Township, Crawford Co., in company with W. E. Wood who has a large ranch in Crawford Co. Mr. F. O. Barnes of the State Tax Commission accompanied us. Mr. Wood is putting in 100 acres of rye and I have talked with him a couple of times before relative to the desirability of Rosen Rye. At the Wolcott farm I showed him 14 acres of Rosen Rye on sand land that has not been limed for thirty years, but which Wolcott limed last fall and put in Rosen Rye and Vetch. There was no difficulty in convincing Mr. Wood, and the result was that he made arrangements for his seed and agreed to bring down his thresher from the ranch and thresh it out, so as to be sure and get it in time. Mr. Barnes seemed particularly impressed with the four well filled rows of the Rosen and size of the kernels. He has been acquainted with this piece of land and when taking into consideration its quality and state he said he was simply amazed.

Missaukee County
H. L. Barnum, Agent

The hot weather is making corn grow well, but beans are beginning to show the effect of the drying wind. The potato crop promises good returns. No signs of blight yet, but many of the big growers are taking no chances and have sprayed with bordeaux mixture. Tip scald is doing considerable damage in some fields of early potatoes. Haying is well under way now. The crop is generally good, and it is being nicely secured without rain damages. The harvesting of rye and wheat has just begun. Oats, although looking well, need rain. The labor situation has been considerably relieved by the good weather.

HOOVER ASKS FOR FOOD CONSERVATION

Win The War By Giving Your Own Daily Service

SAVE THE WHEAT—One wheatless meal a day. Use corn, oatmeal, rye or barley and non-wheat breakfast foods. Order bread twenty-four hours in advance so your baker will not bake beyond his needs. Cut the loaf on the table and only as required. Use stale bread for cooking, toast, etc. Eat less cake and pastry.

Our wheat harvest is far below normal. If each person saves one pound of wheat flour that means 150,000,000 more bushels of wheat for the Allies to mix in their bread. This will help them to save DEMOCRACY.

SAVE THE MEAT—Beef, Mutton or pork not more than once daily Use freely vegetables and fish. At the meat meal serve smaller portions and stews instead of steaks. Make made-dishes of all left-overs. Do this and there will be meat enough for every one at a reasonable price.

We are today killing the dairy cows and female calves as the result of high price. Therefore, eat less and eat no young meat. If we save an ounce of meat each day per person, we will have additional supply equal to 2,200,000 cattle.

SAVE THE MILK—The children must have milk. Use every drop. Use buttermilk and sour milk for cooking and making cottage cheese. Use less cream.

SAVE THE FATS—We are the world's greatest fat wasters. Fat is food. Butter is essential for the growth and health of children. Use butter on the table as usual but not in cooking. Other fats are as good. Reduce use of fried foods. Save daily one-third ounce of animal fats. Soap contains fats. Do not waste it. Make your own washing soap at home out of the saved fats.

Use one-third ounce less per day of animal fat and 375,000 tons will be saved yearly.

SAVE THE SUGAR—Sugar is scarcer. We use today three times as much per person as our Allies. So there may be enough for all at reasonable price use less candy and sweet drinks. Don not stint sugar in putting up fruit and jams. They will save butter.

If everyone in America saves one ounce of sugar daily, it means, 1,100,000 tons for the year.

SAVE THE FUEL—Coal comes from a distance and our railways are overburdened hauling war material. Help relieve them by burning fewer fires. Use wood when you can get it.

USE THE PERISHABLE FOODS—Fruits and vegetables we have in abundance. As a nation we eat too little green stuffs. Double their use and improve your health. Store potatoes and other roots properly and they will keep. Begin now to can or dry all surplus garden products.

Watch out for the wastes in the

of the duty relating to savings bank deposits in these true sentences:

"If a man does not provide for his children, if he does not provide for all those dependent upon him, and if he has not that vision of conditions to come, and that care for the days that have not yet dawned, which we sum up in the whole idea of thrift and saving, then he has not opened his eyes to any adequate conception of human life. Walt Mason Says:

I was lying sick as blazes and disease in all its phases galloped up and down my system till I wished that I was dead; both my lungs were out of kilter and my kidneys wouldn't filtor, I had spavins on my elbows and some gum-boils on my head. People said they heard me yelling many furlongs from my dwelling, and they wished I'd die and end it, so that they could get to sleep; but I kept on growing sicker till I drove my folks to liquor, and they'd sit around my bedside by the hour and sadly weep.

And the doctors gave me oceans of their tonics and their potions and they fed me fifty bushels of their patent safety pills, but I kept on sinking, sinking, till the doctors said: "We're thinking you'll be ready for the boneyard soon as you have paid your bills." Then there came a new physician, and he sized up my condition, and he said: "You've got a fever, and a fever isn't nice; I could fill you up with bitters like those other doctor critters, but you'd best engage a plumber, and he'll cure you in a trice. We are gradually coming," said the doc, "to know that plumbing is a science quite as useful if not greater than our own; your interior is griping just because the basement piping needs a skillful overhauling—that's the cause and that alone."

Come the plumber with his spanner and his calm and soothing manner, and he wrestled with the piping, and he whistled as he toiled; he, expart in sanitation, said my system's aggravation wasn't strange for I'd been drinking water that was badly spoiled. "You've been breathing poisoned gases which were thicker than molasses," said the plumber as he labored at his health restoring chore; "when I'm done, if heaven pleases, you will shake your twelve diseases, you'll be fit to whip a bobcat, and you'll groan around no more."

And the plumber man's prediction wasn't bunk, and wasn't fiction, for my health was soon a wonder, that so long had been a botch; and I have a sort of notion I could make a big commotion as a white hope chasing Johnson, or a challenger of Gotch. Thus the plumber and physician work to better our condition and the doc without the plumber would be doing vastly worse; and the scientific plumber, winter, autumn, spring and summer, guards the health of all the people, stands between them and the hearse.

OLD GLORY

The Colors That Do Not Run

GET AN ARMY FOR THE FARMS

During July 6,434 applicants were supplied with jobs by the Michigan Free Employment bureau in Detroit. Of this number only 605 accepted work as farmhands, according to official report. Similar conditions are reported from employment bureaus in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and elsewhere. Among explanations to go to the farms are: long hours, hard work, lower wages than are paid in other employments, and inexperience. Meanwhile the need for labor on the farms not only of Michigan but of every state is becoming hourly more acute as the great area and promising bulk of the crops develop toward maturity. Farmers are being urged to gather and conserve every possible ounce of food products. Their wives are being urged to can, dry, pickle and preserve as never before in human history to save a starving world. Nobody seems to recall the fact that days are no longer on the farm than in the office or factory; that farmers and their wives have no more than one set of arms each, nor that they require some time in each 24 hours for rest and sleep and must pause to eat occassionally.

This prodding of the producer began months ago. From the outset there were proposals of plans to provide help for the farmer in sufficient quantity to meet his needs. None of these plans has proved fully adequate. Many of them have been beneficial and praiseworthy. But they have not been efficiently comprehensive. They have been local, sporadic, academic.

Little can now be done to remedy this season's conditions—perhaps debacle were a better word. But by starting today to lay the foundations for a complete adequate, efficient system next season's needs can be met properly. Not orders, not legislation, not frantic deluges of advice will turn the trick. But organization of a volunteer national farm army in every state would do the business.

The farmer never can compete in wages with the $5 and $10 a day factory. Nor would the consumer like to see him try it, for it would boost food prices skyhigh. There are thousands of men and boys and even women, all outside military availability who could be enlisted in a patriotic volunteer force to go to the farms, to accept as a proof of patriotism "going wages" on the farms through haying and harvest seasons, extending their service into corn-cutting and potato-digging time. This system would meet not only the farmer's needs but the needs of the home consumer and the hungry foreigner. And it is practical.

INTERPRETING IT

As an example of "bunk," pure and simple, one would have to go a long distance to find an equal of the latest proclamation by William, I. R., especially that part of which reads as follows: "But our people may rest assured that German blood and German zeal are not being gambled with for an empty shadow of ambition or schemes of conquest and subjugation but in defense of a strong free empire in which our children may live in security."

When the Germans in the first weeks of the war overran Belgium and invaded France, they weren't doing it "for an empty shadow of ambition," no indeed, it was in response to a life-sized and extremely real ambition for conquest and subjugation—Bill has the right hunch there.

Draft registers are discovering that while Uncle Sam is a good natured old fellow, it is not safe to trifle with him, especially when he is engaged in serious business.

On Ohio man was rejected because the examining doctor couldn't find his heart. What's the idea? There are thousands of men without hearts fighting over there now.

Shelbyville, Ind., sends out a story that a prisoner sawed his way out of jail with a safety razor blade. We believe it.

The warden of Sing Sing was robbed by a burglar recently, again proving the adage that the prison doesn't reform.

Nobody wants to go to war, but it is a good thing for this country that everybody doesn't claim exemption.

THE SCILLY ISLANDS.

Washed by a Glutton Sea Gorged With Human Victims.

No more sinister locality could be found for the sinking of a vessel in a submarine crusade than the neighborhood of the Scilly Islands, where a number have met their fate. It has been said that a large bagful of pieces of granite of different sizes thrown indiscriminately into a small shallow pool of water will give a tolerably correct model of the islands of Scilly. They are seventeen in number, varying in extent from ten to 1,640 acres, besides twenty-two smaller islets and numerous naked rocks. They are located in latitude 50, longitude 7, about twenty-five miles west by south from Land's End, Cornwall, England. Those who recall the scenic effects in "The Pirates of Penzance" retain some idea of the nature of the Scillonian panorama—wild and picturesque, sheer cliffs and yawning caverns hollowed out by the ceaseless action of the ocean waves, a perilous approach in stormy weather.

In earlier days the islands were infested with pirates and smugglers, while many of the inhabitants picked up a living as wreckers. It was on Gilston rock that Sir Cloudesley Shovel perished with 800 men in 1707, and in the graveyard of St. Mary's repose the bodies of 311 victims of the wreck of the Schiller in 1875. So treacherous is the sea in these parts that there is an old proverb that for every man who dies a natural death the sea takes nine.

As for the strategic importance of Scilly, Borlase wrote over a century and a half ago: "In time of war it is of the utmost importance to England to have Scilly in its possession. If it were in an enemy's hands the channel trade from Ireland, Liverpool and Bristol to London and the south of England could not subsist, for Scilly, lying at the point of England, commands both channels."—Bulletin of the National Geographic Society.

POLITENESS IN PORTUGAL.

Ceremony With Which a Visitor Is Greeted and Dismissed.

That Portuguese politeness is most ceremonial and may proceed to an extreme case, say, of a visit to a high dignitary.

The caller ascends a magnificent staircase, passes through a long suit of rooms to the apartment in which the dignitary is seated. He is received with many bows and smiles.

When the visit is concluded the caller bows and prepares to depart. When he reaches the door he must, according to the invariable custom of the country, make another salutation. He then discovers that his host is following him and that the inclination is returned by one equally profound. When the caller arrives at the door of the second apartment the dignitary is standing on the threshold of the first, and the same ceremony is again passed between them. When the third apartment is gained the caller observes that his host is occupying the place the caller has just left in the second. The same civilities are then renewed, and these polite reciprocations are continued until the caller has traversed the whole suit of apartments.

At the balustrade the caller makes a low and as he supposes a final salutation. But no; when he has reached the first landing place the host is at the top of the stairs; when the caller stands on the second landing place his host has descended to the first, and upon each of these occasions their heads wag with increasing humility. Finally the journey to the foot of the stairs is accomplished.—Los Angeles Times.

TO SILVER MIRRORS.

How They Should Be Treated With a Nitrate Solution.

Thoroughly clean the surface with soap and warm water, to which add a few drops of lye. Rub the surface dry and then keep it covered to protect from dust. A wall of putty or clay should be built about two inches away from the spot to be repaired, being very careful not to touch the clean surface. This is to serve as a reservoir for the silvering bath. For each nine square inches to be covered pour one-half ounce of a 3 per cent solution of silver nitrate. To this add ammonia water, drop by drop, until a light brown sediment appears and does not dissolve. There should be a very small quantity of this sediment produced.

Dissolve a piece of glucose about one-fourth inch square in a half ounce of water. Warm the solution and add to the nitrate solution on the mirror, which should be in a warm place protected from dust and allowed to remain for twelve hours. Pour off the solution, dry, remove all traces of putty, etc., then cover the entire surface with shellac.

Diluted nitric acid will dissolve the silvering from a piece of glass.

DEVELOP MICH. COAL FIELDS

PRESENT SHORTAGE MAKES THIS PROFITABLE

Cover 11,000 Square Miles and Contain 60,000,000 Tons Says Geologist

With a coal basin of 11,000 square miles within its borders Michigan will profit by the present fuel shortage in the development of her natural resources. The development of her natural fuel supply and the revealing of resources hitherto unknown. "It is estimated that there are 60,000,000 tons of mineable coal in Michigan of good domestic and steam quality," R. C. Allen, state geologist said today. This is sufficient to sustain production for forty years at the present rate without adding a single ton to present reserves. The known deposits may be enormously increased by development.

"Michigan's coal basin lies within a circle bordered by Bay City, Flint, Jackson, Albion, Bellevue, Newaygo, Big Rapids, Houghton lake and Point Au Gres. Michigan consumes not less than 8,000,000 tons of coal annually and of this Michigan mines produce about 16 per cent," says Allen. "The industry employs not less than 2,500 men in the state and provides support for 10,000 persons or more. Michigan coal cannot, however, be mined as cheapiy as that of Ohio, Pennsylvania or West Virginia. One authority estimates the Michigan reserve at 11,000,000,000 tons, sufficient to supply the state for 1,000 years.

Curious.

A lady one day remarked to Bulwer Lytton how odd it was that a dove (Latin, colombe) should have been sent out to find the old world, and Columbus (Colombe) should have found the new.

"Yes," agreed the novelist, "but more curious still is the fact that one came from Noah and the other from Genoa!"

Stop Killing Cows

Gov. Sleeper will appoint a committee of Michigan dairymen to stop the slaughter of numerous milk cows expected when the pasture season ends. N. P. DANGEROUS PRACTICE TO BE DONE AWAY WITH

Ellsworth Citizens Up In Arms Against Practice of Riding Bicycles on Sidewalks

About the biggest nuisance Ellsworth has had to contend with this summer is bicyele riding on sidewalks. Several new wheels have been brought in town since spring and the owners, together with some who have owned bicycles for a longer time, seen to consider that the sidewalks were laid out and built for them alone and have not hesitated to so inform pedeatrians.

Several people have narrowly escaped being struck and injured and the parents of some of the offenders have been complained to, but they have seemed to think that the earth was created expressly for their children and have paid no attention to protests.

The climax was reached last Saturday night when Mrs. John Rubingh an old lady residing on Park street, was struck and knocked to the ground by one of several riders, as she was on her way to the store.

The accident happened just a short distance from Klooster's store and she was picked up and taken into the hotel. Luckily no bones were broken and she was able to return to her home in a short time, none the worse except for the shock and a severe shakeup.

A law was passed at the last session of the state legislature providing for a fine of $50.00 for bicycle riding on the sidewalks of an unincorporated village and it has been decided by some of the leading business men of the town to take steps to inforce this law with the next offenders. Nobody would object to bicycle riders occupying the sidewalk so long as the rider would allow those who walk the same privilege, but when it comes to the stage of the game that pedestrians must take to the center of the road, it is time to call a halt.

BUT WHEN THEY ARE OURS

We skim over the headlines of the newspapers and don't bother much about the bloody battles being fought in Europe because we can't pronounce the names of the cities anyway, and most of us haven't the remostest idea where they are.

A single murder in the home town makes a greater impression on our minds than the killing of a hundred thousand men in the trenches.

The hundred thousand don't disturb us very much, because we think they're a lot of people way off in Europe.

But if one of the hundred thousand were ours it would be different—wouldn't it?

And perhaps it is going to take just this thing to arouse us from our lethargy.

The United States is at war with Germany—and there are certain very specific things which every citizen of this country mast do if we are to win.

What these thing are is constantly being told to us in the daily newspapers; they are being proclaimed from the pulpit and in public halls, and the government is trying its best to make each of us see our responsibilities.

If we were to lose this war, it would be a terrible thing to have you realize that you had not done your share to help.

What about it? What are you doing to help win the war.

ARMY OR JAIL

Uncle Sam has started to round up the slackers. There is going to be a national clean up of men who failed to register, announces the federal department of justice. It looks like a difficult task, but the department seems to anticipate no great difficulty.

Sooner or later the men who thought they could unload on their neighbors the highest obligation of citizenship will be brought up with a round turn. They might just as well acquiesce now in the inevitable and come forward with whatever grace they can muster. The longer they wait, the more painful and humiliating it will be.

The government has adopted a wise policy in dealing with these reluctant citizens. The slacker will not necessarily be punished. He will be given his choice between going to war and going to jail. He will immediately be assigned a serial number which will put him in line for the first call. That in itself involves a penalty, for by honest registration he might have drawn a number that would have let him out of the first call. If he has any sense of shame he will then acquise and proceed to play a man's part.

As for those who prefer the jail, they are welcome to it. We do not want them on our firing line.

A Berlin paper says the Kaiser and the German people are one. And the sooner the German people wake up to the fact that they are not really married to the Kaiser the better it will be for them.

China is expected to declare war on Germany in another week or so. If it keeps on Germany will not have a friend left outside her present allies.

So far the best thing that has come out of the war is the silence of Bill Bryan.

Have you a building job on your hands?

Now that prices are high it is more than ever important that you give careful consideration to the roof you are going to put on. You can save real money and get a better roof by using

Certain-teed Roofing

Thru quality and sheer merit as a roofing material CERTAIN-TEED is now being used as the preferable type of roofing for sky-scrapers, factories, hotels, stores, warehouses, garages, farm buildings etc., where durability is necessary.

It is economical to buy, inexpensive to lay and costs practically nothing to maintain. It is weather-tight, light weight, clean, sanitary and fire-retardant. It is guaranteed for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to thickness (1, 2 or 3 ply).

There are many roll roofings on the market, but only one CERTAIN-TEED. It pays to get the best. It costs no more to lay a CERTAIN-TEED roof than it does to lay a poor roof, but there is a vast difference in the wear. You can't tell the quality of a roofing by looks or feel. Your only safety is the label. Be sure that it is CERTAIN-TEED—then you are certain of quality and guaranteed satisfaction.

Certain-teed* Slate-Surfaced Asphalt Shingles

are supplanting wood and slate shingles for residences. They cost less, are just as good looking, wear better, won't fall off, buckle or split. They are fire-retardant, and do not have to be painted or stained.

Certain-teed* Paints and Varnishes

The name CERTAIN-TEED on a can of paint or varnish is the same guarantee of quality and satisfaction it is on a roll of roofing or a bundle of shingles. Made for all uses and in all colors.

RHEUMATISM ARRESTED

Many people suffer the tortures of lame muscles and stiffened joints because of impurities in the blood, and each succeeding attack seems more acute until rheumatism has invaded the whole system.

To arrest rheumatism it is quite as important to improve your general health as to purify your blood, and the cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is nature's great blood-maker, while its medicinal nourishment strengthens the organs to expel the impurities and upbuild your strength.

Scott's Emulsion is helping thousands every day who could not find other relief. Refuse the alcoholic substitutes.

CONDITION OF MICHIGAN CROPS

RECENT RAINS DID WORLD OF GOOD

Corn, Though Backward, Has Made Wonderful Gain in the Past Month—Outlook Fair

All grain crops made further improvement during the month and the cultivated crops made remarkable gains during the latter part after dry and warm weather became general.

Corn, though unseasonably small and backward, has a good color and is making excellent growth. Potatoes are looking well, and the present warm and dry weather will probably prevent the occurrence of late blight. Early potatoes are being harvested and generally good yields are being reported.

Beans have suffered severely from heavy rains, particularly in the eastern districts where the loss is estimated at from 25 to 40 per cent in a few counties. On low flat lands many fields were flooded, the water standing on the ground for many days and completely ruining the crop. The bean maggot has also caused considerable damage in various localities throughout the State; the effect being a thin and uneven stand.

Wheat and rye have ripened slowly and harvest was only well begun in the southern part of the State, at the close of the month. The crop is fairly good except in the districts which were extremely dry at seeding time, and the yield is much better than that expected earlier in the season. The harvesting of oats and barley will follow closely that of wheat; these crops are standing up well and promise and excellent yield.

Hay matured slowly and early cuttings were difficult to cure and were more or less damaged because of the unfavorable weather that prevailed at the time; the main portion of the crop is being secured in good condition and the yield is nearly normal.

The acreage of buckwheat is considerably larger than that of last year, and seeding conditions were generally favorable.

Pastures are generally good except in a few northern counties which have suffered to some extent from lack of moisture.

Peaches promise only a very light crop. There will be a fair crop of early apples but winter apples will be scarcer than usual. While some orchards will produce a fairly good crop, many others have practically no crop at all. The condition of leading varieties is equally variable. Grapes will be a good crop according to the present outlook.

Cabbages, tomatoes, onions and other truck crops are making an excellent showing. Sugar beets have suffered severe damage on the low flat lands in the eastern part of the State, but are doing well elsewhere.

THEATRICAL.

"The Million Dollar Doll"

"The Million Dollar Doll" which will be the offering at the Charlevoix Theatre next Wednesday, August 22nd, has proved one of the greatest successes of the season's musical offerings. The books, lyrics and music were written by Louis Weslyn of New York City, who is the successful writer for such well known artists as Rock & Fulton, Lulu Glazer, Marion Bent, Pat Rooney and many others. The entire work is original and far above the general run of musical comedies. Mr. Weslyn considers this his best work. The production was staged by Mr. Harvey D. Orr, who is well known to the theatre going public. He has given this attraction one of the most elaborate productions ever sent on tour. The costumes, stage settings and light effects are beautiful and enchanting. The company is one of the largest and best on the road this season and is well worthy the large patronage accorded it since the opening date. It is under the management of Norton & Bunnell, Inc.

"The Million Dollar Doll"

"The Million Dollar Doll" takes you through many beautiful and novel scenes. The famous cabaret at the home of Col. Barrington in New York City, the trip through the Panama Canal on board the big ocean liner, the now famous "joy zone" at the Panama Exposition and the illumination of the Tower of Jewels all make scenes of unparalleled splendor A company of 40 people in clever dances, tuneful songs, rousing ensembles and witty dialogue, make you forget all your troubles and think that life is worth living again. At the Charlevoix Theatre, Wednesday, August 22nd.

They are an excellent change from the regular bread loaf and add spice to any meal.

Serve them occasionally. The family, as well as visitors, will surely appreciate them, especially if they are made from

Lily White

"The Flour the Best Cooks Use."

for Lily White Flour produces a wonderfully light, tender, deliciously flavored roll.

The blending of choice Western and Michigan wheats makes Lily White a perfect family flour, and it is sold on the guarantee you will like it better for both bread and pastry baking or your money returned.

We suggest this recipe for Parker House Rolls:

Scald pint milk. Add 4 level tablespoons lard, 4 level tablespoons sugar and 1 teaspoon salt.

When lukewarm add ½ yeast cake dissolved in ½ cup lukewarm water. Add flour to make a batter and beat well; then add flour to make a dough.

Knead thoroughly and let rise until double in size. Knead again and cut into rolls. Let rise on board about 15 minutes, then crease with finger, spread with melted butter, fold and put into tins. Touch sides with butter so they will separate easily.

When they have doubled in size bake about 20 minutes in a quick oven.

A NO-QUARTER WAR

Germany seems bent on making this a war to which honor and mercy shall become wholly foreign. All respect for the flag of truce has been obliterated by Teutonic tactics of attacking under its mask, and now France reports that its army headquarters is much angered at the methods pursued by the latest regiments of Germans appearing on the western front. These fighters, according to reports, hold up their hands and cry "kamerad" in token of surrender, only to let fly a storm of hand grenades when the allied soldiers advance.

Since first Belgium was invaded Germany has been sowing the seeds of hate. Unfairness and lack of honor have been principal factors in Germany's operations on land and sea. When soldiers learn that their opponents are dishonorable and that their flag of truce and surrender mean nothing, the rules of war soon are forgotten. If Germany continues these tactics it soon will become difficult for allied officers to prevent the war becoming a no-quarter reign of cold-blooded murder.

(Statement given October 25, 1911)

Uses Doan's Again

On October 4, 1916 Mrs. Olney said: "I have never found a kidney medicine that can equal Doan's Kidney Pills. The occasional use of this medicine as a tonic keeps my kidneys in good condition. I will never go back on what I have said before in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills."

AMONG THE PLAYERS AND CADDIES

(A column edited by the Caddie master for the purpose of sharpeoing the caddies' ioterest io their work aod keeping parents in touch with those io charge of the boys at the golf grounds.)

Everything is primed for the Fourth Annual Excursion of the Charlevoix Caddies next Sunday. The day has heen laid out in program and its success depends entirely upon starting from Charlevoix exactly on time. The "Columbia" leaves Wilhur's dock at 7:00 a. m. sharp. No waiting for anyone or anything—not even tha hread. North Manitou will he reached about 11:00. Lunch will ha ready at 12:30. At 2:30 the field meet will he started, which will last an hour and a half or two hours. After this the excursionists will leave for Charlevoix, arriving home hetween 8:00 and 8:30 p. m.

The field day events make a new feature of the annual excursion. The $23.00 usually given as four prizes in the Caddies' Tournament will he given this year as prizes in fifteen field events. Each event will have as first prize, one dollar, and as second fifty cents. The contests will he as follows: 50 yd. dash; 100 yd. dash; standing hoard jump; running broad jump; hop, skip and jump; shot put; throwing the hasehall; 50 yd. swim; diving; sack race; hackwards race; potato race; hopping race; walking race; specialty race.

These contests are open to caddies only, no caddie will he allowed to enter more than two events; and certain events will be set aside for smaller hoys. No long or extremely hard contests in which the hoys might overdo themselves will be called. The hour or so hetween lunch and the meet is designed to allow the hoys to "let their dinners settle" before the contests hegin.

The nature of the specialty race is secret, and will he kept so until it occurs. No one may enter it except those who win first place in the other fourteen events.

Each hoy must hring one thing—a tin cup, a good suhstantial one that will hold lots of lemonade. Everything in the way of lunch will he provided, so that no one need hring anything to eat. Any hoy may hring anything he has to furnish himself amusement after the Island is reached, swimming suit, basehall outfit, etc.

The excursion is purely a reward for the boys who have served faithfully at the links during the current season, those who came at the first of the season and later went to work at other place, or who worked only occasionally, cannot expect to go. Eight or ten men and older boys will he taken along to help prepare the lnnch and to oversee the pastimes and sports. The day, the hoat, the whole trip helongs to the caddies, and the presence of others not official detracts from their ownership by just that much.

The caddie master wishes to remind and reassure the caddies' parents that every care and precaution will he taken in the interest of the boys, as has heen done in previous years. Should any of the parents wish to speak to him personally hefore allowing their boys to go, he will explain any feature of the day that is not clear.

At 7:00 o'clock Sunday morning then, with no one late.

User of our tires are well satisfied with their purchases. Longer mileage nnd less trouhle than most tires made. Ask us about them. Benj. Brown. 33tf.

GUARDS MAY GO SOUTH IN MONTH

GRAYLING CAMP IS NOW LIVELY PLACE

Officers aod Meo Hope They May Remain There for Some Time Before Goiog to Waco

Mohilization Camp, Grayling, Aug. 14.—California has lost its laurels for that far western state no longor can stand up in front of the rest of the states, command "attention" and brag about the halmy hreezes of daytime and the cool evenings. The mobilization camp at Crayling has reduced California to the ranks, for at Crayling the midday hreezes are balmy, while the evenings—well, one of the telegraph operators who hunks in a tent near hrigade headquarters wrapped himself in six hlankets the other night and it wasn't any too warm.

But in spite of the chilly evenings early arrivals at camp are having a fine time. Of course there is plenty of work, but then, too, there is plenty to eat and some fine bathing and fishing in Portage lake, a picturesque body of water seven and a half miles long right at the edge of camp.

Prepare for Troops

Brig. Cen. Covell arrived at noon Saturday and took command of the camp, hut there is little doing in a military way outside of making preparations for the coming of the rest of the troops. Col. Walter C. Rogers, disbursing officer, and his aides are husy every minute. Supplies are arriving almost daily from regular army depots and are heing stored in the warehouses, later to be given out to the various units. Among the supplies which already have arrived are a carload of heef and another of new tents.

While there are no hints of when the troops will go to Waco, Tex., which camp is expected to he ready for occupancy hy August 15, preparations are heing made here to care for the men for a month, if necessary. As showing the divergence of opinion in camp as to when the trip will he made, Major E. H. Camphell, brigade adjutant, is of the opinion that "the hoys will he here just ahout long enough to draw a long hreath." Major Albert C. Wilson, of Ann Arhor, commander of the Third battalion of the Thirty-first is of the opinion that the hoys "will he wearing snowshoes at Crayling this year." The enlisted men are ahout as widely separated in their opinions, hut the general sentiment of the enlisted men at present is that the camp near Crayling is a pretty fine place in August.

THE NEVER CANOE TRADE MARK

Canoe Building Revolutionized

IT HAS long been recognized that veneer would be the ideal material for canoes and boats, if only it could be glued with a waterproof glue. This problem has at last been solved and the veneer of which the above canoe is made can be boiled or baked for hours without giving way in the least, proving that it is unaffected by either moisture or heat, the alternating action of which causes a boat to leak.

YOU CANNOT SPLIT IT

The "V'NEER" Canoe shown above is monlded from practically one piece of veneer with no joints helow the water line, excepting at tha two ends. Belng made of three-ply veneer with grain running in opposite directions, it cannot spht, check, swoll, or shrink neither will it warp out of shape.

WILL NOT WINTER CHECK

Whlle lighter than any canoe on the market, it is many times stronger and will endure, without serious injury, treatment that would ruin any other canoe now made. The grest strength resulting from its veneer construction makes the use of ribs unnecessary, giving a perfectly smooth interior, with a great saving in weight.

CANOE WEIGHS ONLY 60 POUNDS

A nicely finished wood outsida surfaca makes this canoe run much more easily than a canvas-covarad craft, while tha beautiful hard, close-grained birch veneer of which it is constructed, makes it possibla to land on a rocky beach or shoot a swift rapids with a feeling of assurance navar before possessed hy the enthusiastic canoeist.

IT SHOULD LAST A LIFETIME

It is literally a genuina "BIRCH" that would startla the primltive American Indian out of his stoicism, and has an air of distinction not found in othar canoes It will attract attention anywhere.

POACHERS ARE CAUGHT IN ACT

HAD 500 FOOT SET LINE OUT ON PINE LAKE

North Side Rasorter Discovers Cause Of Local Nimrods' Poor Luck So Persisteot of Lata

One of the most flagrant poaching cases recently developing in this vicinity came to light Monday afternoon—in fact was just happened upon, as it were.

John Wineman, a resorter who lives on the north alde and is an enthusiastic fisherman, was out on Pino lake trolling with a power boat and when north of the coal dock, opposita the Inn, ran across a set line, some 400 or 500 feet long carrying about 50 short lines baited with three and four inch perch.

Previous to this, on his dally fishing excursions, he had noticed some men coming oat from the shore at various times in a small bost, apparently still fishing, and after being a short time out, returning to the shore. On this occasion, having picked up the line, he was procceding along the shore when he noticed a boat with threo men in it just going on to the beach. As Mr. Wineman watched them, they pulled their craft up onto the shore and hastily ducked into the woods near tbe railroad track. Wineman promptly turned the nose of his launch inshore and landing secured the boat which the three men had left so precipitously to his own and brought both boat and set line back to Sears' dock. When the set line was examined a steelhead, weighing about four poands, was found hooked to it.

He reported the matter to the members of the Charlevoix Rod & Gun club, who immediately got hold of the sheriff and notified game wardens, Smith and Bryant of Petoskey key. Before the arrival of the wardens, Novak managed to pick up one of the men. Later the other two were captured and all three taken before justice Cooper, who fined each of them $3.00 and costs of $2 apiece.

The men seemed guilty on three charges—fishing with set lines, catching undersized perch and bad their trial been postponed until the following morning, evidence could have been produced we ara told to show that they had been selling rninbow trout and steelheads to the resorters in the vicinity of the Inn.

This matter of lawless poaching in the lakes surrounding Charlevoix is no joke. For several months past, it has hardly been possible to catch a single fish at this point on Pine lake, owing solely to the reason that the fishing grounds were being systematically robbed by poachers.

The Charlevoix Rod & Gun club have spared no expense, time or effort to keep the lakes properly stocked with fish and to endeavor to see that the fish laws were obeyed. Resort visitors, interested in the sport, have also been extremely liberal with their contributions to this work of preserving the rights of the legitimate fisherman. It is rather discouraging that so flagrant a violation of these rights as is exhibited by the case in question, could not have been dealt with in a manner so severe as to serve as a lesson and warning to future violators.

We understand that these men have been here several summers, camping on the shores of Pine Lake and working for a local store. They claimed ignorance of the fact that they were violating the law. Ignorance of the law, however, is no excuse and they have had ample opportunity to ascertain just how far they might go without overstepping the bounds. Solution of the poaching problem would be greatly facilitated, we think, by the appointment of a local warden—someone who fishes often on the lakes and would be on the job when and where he was wanted.

Will Go To Fort Sheridan

Victor H. Hampton is here for a few days, visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hampton. He has resigned his position as attorney for the Gleaners, closed his law office in Detroit, and will leave the last of the week for Fort Sheridan, having received an appointment in the second officers' training camp. He was enjoying a fine law practice, but has given up splendid prospects to answer the country's call for young men.

FENCE BUILDER STRICKEN

FRANK WAGONER SUCCUMBS TO HEART FAILURE

Was Stretching Wire on Della Martin Farm When Death Came Suddenly

Frank Wagoner, a former lumberjack, whose home for the past few years has been anywhere he might happen to be working, though well-known about town, died very suddenly at the farm home of Mrs. Della Martin, on the Boyne City road, a short distance beyond Susan Lake, at about a quarter to one, Monday afternoon.

He was working on the place, stretching a wire fence and had unhitched the horses and started to tha pump for a drink of water when he suddenly sank down upon the grass and when asked by John Banniger, who was working with him on the farm, what the trouble was he complained of feeling ill. John advised him to go up onto the porch and lie down in the hammock. He got up staggering and finally with Banniger's help reached the couch, where he died within a few minutes.

The sheriff was notified and proceeded immediately to the Martin farm in Lisle Shanahan's car, and as the coroner, Dr. Wilkinson, was not available, having gone to the medical reserve officers' camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison some days ago, Dr. Dunham was taken along to serve in his stead. On inspection of the corpse, the doctor found no signs of violence or anything to indicate that the death had been other than from natural causes. It developed through questions put to Banniger and others present who knew tha man, that he had been subject to severe coughing spells in which his throat seemed to be clogged. Banniger also stated that the man appeared to be frothing at the mouth shortly before his death. Dr. Dunham came to the conclusion that death was due to cardiac trombosis, or stoppage of one of the heart arteries.

Tha body was taken to See's undertaking rooms later in the afternoon and the son, John G. Wagoner, who lives at Virginia, Minn., notified by wire of his father's death.

Besides his son, the deceased leaves a daughter, Mrs. J. F. Coombs, who resides at Loma Vista, Oregon, and a sister, Mrs. Etta Fallman at Big Rapids, Mich. He was a man of about 50 years of age.

The result of the first examination of drafted men by the local board was somewhat disappointing from the staadpoint of those whose desire it is to see a huge American army in the field this fall to stand against the arch-foe of democracy, but justified tha rather shrewd estimate of the government experts who figured that one in four men of military age would be picked. Below we give the outcome of the examinations and the action of the exemption board. First on the list comes Charlevoix county's honor roll—the men who passed the physical examination and did not ask for exemption on any grounds:

One huadred and forty one men were examined, out of which only 32 recruits for the army were secured. This result necessitates the further summoning of 152 men for examination, which has already been done, the second physical test commencing this morning and continuing tomorrow and Friday. Out of this second lot, it is expected that the remainder of the county's quota of 71 recruits will be picked.

ODD FELLOWS TO STAGE A MUSICAL COMEDY

"The Elopers" Coming September Third and Fourth

The local lodge of Odd Fellows has signed a contract with F. A. Ogden, of New York, to produce the big musical comedy, "The Elopers." Rehearsals are now going on every afternoon and evening in the dining room at the Odd Fellows hall.

This show is different from the usual amateur performance in that it is a professional script and not one written for amateurs.

Six or eight more young ladies between the ages of 17 and 20 are wanted to take part and are invited to come up to the hall any evening at 7:30. A couple of men are also needed to complete the cast.

Twenty little girls between the ages of 7 and 12 are wanted at the hall at 1:30 p. m., Friday. Send the children up. Oluf Nordrum has the arrangements in charge.

CHANGES IN FORD AGENCIES

NORTHERN AUTO COMPANY TO HANDLE OUTPUT

With Headquarters at Petoskey and East Jordan—Charlevoix to Have Local Branch

For several days rumors have been afloat regarding certain changes about to be made among the many Ford agencies in the county, but nothing definite was learned until Monday, when it became known that the Northern Auto Co., of Petoskey, who for some years have had the general agency of the Ford for Charlevoix, Emmet and Cheboygan, had withdrawn all former sub-agencies in Charlevoix county, and formed a partnership with Roscoe Mackey of East Jordan, whose business in the future will be run under the name of The Northern Auto Co., East Jordan branch.

From what we have been told, Mr. Mackey, as manager and stockholder in the East Jordan branch of the Northern Auto Co., will have under his direct supervision the sales of all Ford products, including the "Lizzies," truck and tractors in Charlevoix county, displacing the many agencies scattered throughout the district.

The Northern Auto Co.'s interests at this end of the county will be looked after by Joseph G. Ekstrom of this city, who states that within a short time a suitable station will be established here, fully equipped to handle the rapidly increasing business.

DARING HOLD-UP WAS ATTEMPTED

JACK BROCK VICTIM OF SAVAGE NIGHT ATTACK

Thug and Girl Accomplice Now In Cells Awaiting Trial—Booze Principal Feature

Jack Brock, a resident of this city, who has been working for commissioner Hammond on the county road, was the victim last week of a vicious assault with intent to rob him of some $35 in bills which he was carrying on his person at the time. Richard Castle, a young man, twenty one years of age, with a criminal record, who came here about a month ago from Ohio, was the perpetrator of the crime and was aided in the attempt by a girl, Ruth Blaine, or Rath McNeven, as she is most generally known, seventeen years old and until recently a waitress at Alex Samara's restaurant.

Brock met the girl on Bridge street last Tuesday evening and accepted the latter's invitation to take a walk with her. They strolled up Antrim street and out along the Norwood road to a point just the other side of Mrs. Louis Sharrow's place, where the two sat down on the grass by the roadside to rest. Brock said he hadn't been there more than a minute when Castle appeared out of the darkness and commenced striking him over the head with a billy, as he lay on the ground half reclining on his elbow, the girl meanwhile urging the thug on with cries of "Pop it to him; pop it to him." So thick and fast came the blows that Brock had difficulty in standing up under them, but finally managed to get away, the robber soon desisting, fearing that he would be caught.

Brock, dizzy with the blows he had received and bleeding from several bad scalp wounds, finally managed to get back to town, where he secured medical attention and reported the matter to the authorities.

The man and girl involved were arrested Friday night and taken to the court house, where they are now under lock and key, awaiting bail. The girl under pressure confessed the whole affair. A hearing was held Monday afternoon in the case, at which time Castle's bail was fixed at $3,000 and that of the girl, $500. One charged with attempted robbery, while armed with a dangerous weapon and the other for the same offense without a dangerous weapon. The case will be tried at the next term of court, opening October 1st.

Richard Castle has done time in an Ohio penitentiary for various other offenses and has an unsavory record. A regrettable feature of the affair is that his parents, who live here in town, are good, respectable and law abiding persons.

As far as the girl is concerned, bad associates and booze, coupled with lack of home training are responsible for her downfall

The Board of Examiners meets accordiag to law on Ssturday the 18th to issue certificates dependent upon the August examination. The notes go to press too early to give names of successful candidates. The meeting is to ba held in Boyne City at 5 a. m.

The office work is now a steady grind on census liats and statistics from all over the county. Most of the reports are in early this year aad there is less danger of loas of primary money from time coasumed in making corrections. Promptness all along the line will make the machinery of the law work out without losa to anyone.

The report shows that Norwood No. 1 fractional, voted to establish a district library at the annual meeting.

The Magee school, Norwood 8, fractional, is now the oaly school in Norwood township that has not established a library. In several townships every schooi has taken this step.

Peaine No. 2 has no library. This means that Peaine No. 1 draws all the penal fines from that township, and has done so for 17 years. Well!

The Fairgrove school, Hayes No. 1, commonly called the Murray school, has increased its percentage of attendance from 79 to 92 in one year.

Hayes No. 3 voted to establish a library at the annual meeting July, 1917. Every school in Hayes now has a library.

The Neutral

Brethren, how shall it fare with me
When the war is laid aside,
If it be proven that I am he
For whom a world has died?

If it he proven that all my good,
And the greater good I will make,
Were purchased hy a multitude
Who suffered for my sake?

That I was delivered by mere mankind
Vowed to one sacrifice,
And not, as I hold them, battle-blind,
But dying with opened eyes?
That they did not ask me to draw the sword
When they stood to endure their lot,
That they only looked to me for a word,
And I answered I knew them not?
If it he found, when the battle clears,
Their death has set ma free,
Then how shall I live with myself through the years
Which they have bo't for me?

Brethern, how must it fare with me,
Or how am I justified,
If it be proven that I am he
For whom mankind his died:
If it be proven that I am he
Who being questioned, denied?

CAMP MEETING A SUCCESS

Crowds Largest and Meeting Best Ever Held to Date

The annual camp meeting of the Church of God held August 3-13 was a success from beginning to end. People began gathering on the grounds the first day and continued coming until the last. Auto loads from various parts of north Michigan tented on the grounds. On account of the increase of attendance those in charge were crowded for sleeping room. This calls for the erection of more buildings. The crowds were the largest and the meetings the best ever held on the grounds. The Apostolic standard of gospel preaching was listened to with interest.

A large crowd witnessed the baptism of a number of converts in the pool on the grounds Sunday afternoon.

Plans were laid for extensive improvements on the grounds the coming year.

Jas. W. Ruehle was elected as business manager for coming year. Ministers and workers meetings were held every morning at nine o'clock. These were well attended and enjoyed by all.

Among the ministers were Mrs. Delia Fry, Fenville, Mich., Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Burgess, Kalamazoo, Mich., Leroy Sheldon, Flint, Mich. Notwithstanding the high cost of living, all expenses were nicely met. The camp meeting for 1918 will bagin the first Friday in August. Let all remember the date.—Contributed.

NEW PAYMENT METHOD FOR BUILDING OF ROADS

Suggestion That State Furnish All Material a Good One

Believing that important savings can be affected and at the same time equally good and possibly better work secured, the Massachussetts State Highway Commission has emulated the government and let a contract for road construction on the cost-plus-a-profit basis. A feature of the contract is that the state furnishes the materials and pays for the labor provided by the contractor. The contractor's job is to get the labor and supervise the work. An agreed upon profit is paid the contractor upon the completion of each section of the work. The compensation received, however, is not net profit, since the contractor's services and organization and depreciation of his plant must be cared for. The agreement apparently offers the contractor every inducement to perform the work rapidly and efficiently and no incentive to skimp in the use of materials or labor. The experiment of Massachussetts will be watched with interest and, if successful, should furnish another answer to those who urge that public work be curtailed during the period of the war.

HEART of the SUNSET

By REX BEACH

Author of "The Spoilers," "The Iron Trail," "The Silver Horde," Etc.

The roads were unfenced, the meadows desolate; the hute were frequently untenanted. Ahead the sky burned splendidly, and the sunset grew more brilliant, more dazzling, until it glorified the whole mean, thirsty, cruel countryside.

Dave'a eyes were set upon that riot of blazing colors, but for the time it failed to thrill him. In that welter of changing hues and tints he saw only red. Red! That was the color of blood; it stood for passion, lust, violence; and it was a fitting badge of color for this land of revolutions and alarms. At first he saw little else—except the hint of black despair to follow. But there was gold in the sunset, too—the yellow gold of ransom! That was Mexico—red and yellow, blood and gold, lust and license. Once the rider's fancy began to work in this fashion, it would not rest, and as the sunset grew in splendor he found in it richer meanings. Red was the color of a woman's lips—yes, and a woman's hair. The deepening blue of the high sky overhead was the hue of a certain woman's eyes. A warm, soft breeze out of the west beat into his face, and he remembered how warm and soft Alaire's breath had been upon his cheek.

The woman of his desires was yonder, where those colors warred, and she was mantled in red and gold and purple for his coming. The thought aroused him; he felt only a throbbing eagerness to see her and to take her in his arms once more before the end.

With his head high and his face agleam, he rode into the west, into the heart of the sunset.

CHAPTER XX.

La Feria.

"What's this I hear about war?" Dolores inquired of her mistress, a few days after their arrival at La Feria. "They tell me that Mexico is invaded and that the American soldiers have already killed more than a thousand women and children."

"Who tells you this?" Alaire asked.

"The men—everybody," Dolores waved a hand in the direction of the other ranch buildings. "Our people are buzzing like bees with the news, and, of course, no one cares to work when the Americans are coming."

"I shall have to put an end to such talk."

"This morning the word came that the revolution is ended and that the soldiers of both parties are uniting to fight for their liberties. They say the gringos are killing all the old people—everyone, in fact, except the girls, whom they take with them. Already they have begun the most horrible practices. Why, at Espinal"—Dolores' eyes were round—"would you believe it?—those Yankee soldiers ate a baby! They roasted the little dear like a cabrito and ate it! I tell you, it makes wild talk among the peladors."

"Do you believe such stories?" Alaire inquired, with some amusement.

"Um-m—not altogether. But, all the same, I think it is time we were going home."

"This is home, for me, Dolores."

"Yes, but now that war—"

"There isn't any war, and there won't be any. However, if you are nervous I'll send you back to Las Palmas at once."

"Glory of God! It would be the end of me. These Mexicans would recognize me instantly as an American, for I have the appearance and the culture. You can imagine what would happen to me. They would tear me from the train. It was nothing except General Longorio's soldiers that brought us safely through from Nuevo Pueblo."

"Then I'm glad that he insisted upon sending them with us. Now tell the ranch-hands to put no faith in these ridiculous stories. If they wish the truth let them ask General Longorio: he will be here today and quiet their fears."

"What's This I Hear About War?"

"You think he intends to pay us for our cattle?"

"Yes."

Dolores pondered a moment. "Well, perhaps he does—it is not his money. For that matter, he would give all Mexico if you asked it. Ese! His love consumes him like a fever."

Alaire stirred uneasily; then she rose and went to an open window, which looked out into the tiny patio with its trickling fountain and its rank, untended plants. "Why do you insist that he loves me?" she asked. "All Mexicans are gallant and pay absurd compliments. It's just a way they have. He has never spoken a word that could give offense." As Dolores said nothing, she went on, hesitatingly, "I can't very well refuse to see him, for I don't possess even a receipt to show that he took those cattle."

"Oh, you must not offend him," Dolores agreed, hastily, "or we'd never leave Mexico alive." With which cheering announcement the housekeeper heaved a deep sigh and went about her duties with a gloomy face.

Longorio arrived that afternoon, and Alaire received him in the great naked living room of the hacienda, with her best attempt at formality. But her coolness served not in the least to chill his fervor.

"Senora," he cried, eagerly, "I have a thousand things to tell you, things of the greatest importance. They have been upon my tongue for hours, but now that I behold you I grow drunk with delight and my lips frame nothing but words of admiration for your beauty. So! I feast my eyes." He retained his warm clasp of her fingers, seeming to envelop her uncomfortably with his ardor.

"What is it you have to tell me?" she asked him, withdrawing her hand.

"Well, I hardly know where to begin—events have moved so swiftly, and such incredible things have happened. Even now I am in a daze, for history is being made every hour—history for Mexico, for you, and for me. I bring you good news and bad news; something to startle you and set your brain in a whirl. I planned to send a messenger ahead of me, and then I said: 'No, this is a crisis; therefore no tongue but mine shall apprise her, no hand but mine shall comfort her. Only a coward shrinks from the unpleasant; I shall lighten her distress and awaken in her breast new hope, new happiness'—"

"What do you mean?" Alaire inquired, sharply. "You say you bring bad news?"

The general nodded. "In a way, terrible, shocking! And yet I look beyond the immediate and see in it a blessing. So must you. To me it spells the promise of my unspoken longings, my whispered prayers." Noting his hearer's growing bewilderment, he laid a hand familiarly upon her arm. "No matter how I tell you, it will be a blow, for death is always sudden; it always finds us unprepared."

"Death? Who—is dead?"

"Restrain yourself. Allow for my clumsiness."

"Who? Please tell me!"

"Someone very close to you and very dear to you at one time. My knowledge of your long unhappiness alone gives me courage to speak."

Alaire raised her fluttering fingers to her throat; her eyes were wide as she said: "You don't mean—Mr. Austin?"

"Yes." Longorio scrutinized her closely, as if to measure the effect of his disclosure. "Senora, you are free!"

Alaire uttered a breathless exclamation; then, feeling his gaze burning into her, turned away, but not before he had noted her sudden pallor, the blanching of her lips.

The unexpected announcement dazed her; it scattered her thoughts and robbed her of words, but just what her dominant emotion was at the moment she could not tell. Once her first giddiness had passed, however, once the truth had borne in upon her, she found that she felt no keen anguish, and certainly no impulse to weep. Rather she experienced a vague horror, such as the death of an acquaintance or of a familiar relative might evoke. Ed had been anything but a true husband, and her feeling now was more for the memory of the man he had been, for the boy she had known and loved, than for the man whose name she bore.

So he was gone and, Longorio said, she was free. It meant much. She realized dimly that in this one moment her whole life had changed. She had never thought of this way out of her embarrassments; she had been prepared, in fact, for anything except this. Dead! It was deplorable, for Ed was young. Once the first shock had passed away, she became conscious of a deep pity for the man, and a complete forgiveness for the misery he had caused her. After a time she faced the newshearer, and in a strained voice inquired:

"How did it happen? Was it—because of me?"

"No, no! Rest your mind on that score. See! I understand your concern and I share your intimate thoughts. No, it was an accident, ordained by God. His end was the result of his own folly, a gunshot wound while he was drunk, I believe. Now you will understand why I said that I bore tidings both good and evil, and why I, of all people, should be the one to hapart them."

Alaire turned questioning eyes upon him, as if to fathom his meaning, and be answered her with his brilliant smile. Failing to evoke a response, he went on:

"Ever since I heard of it I have repeated over and over again, 'It is a miracle; it is the will of God.' Come, then, we know each other so well that we may speak frankly. Let us be honest and pretend to no counterfeit emotions. Let us recognize in this only your deliverance and the certainty of that blessed happiness which divine providence offers us both."

"Both?" she repeated, dully.

"Need I be plainer? You know my heart. You have read me. You understand how I have throttled my longings and remained mute while all my being called to you."

Alaire withdrew a step, and her cheeks colored with anger. "General!" she exclaimed, with some difficulty, "I am amazed. This is no time—" Her indignation rose with the sound of her own voice, causing her to stammer.

Taking advantage of her loss of words, he hurried on: "You must pardon my impetuosity, but I am a man of tremendous force, and my life moves swiftly. I am not shackled by conventions—they are less than nothing to me. If it seems to you that my eagerness carries me away, remember that war is upon us and that affairs of moment press me so that I am compelled to move like the lightning. With me, senora, a day is a year. The past is gone; the present is here, the future rushes forward to meet us."

President Wilson has expressed his opinion

of the duty relating to savings bank deposits in these true sentences:

"If a man does not provide for his children, if he does not provide for all those dependent upon him, and if he has not that vision of conditions to come, and that care for the days that have not yet dawned, which we sum up in the whole idea of thrift and saving, then he has not opened his eyes to any adequate conception of human life. We are in this world not to provide for ourselves, but for others and that is the basis of economy."

Apologies to the Old Oaken Bucket

BY BYRANT VENABLE

How dear to my heart is the family bathtub when midsummer sunshine melts grease from my skin; inviting, refreshing its shimmering whiteness as I take off my clothing and tumble right in. In fond recollection I gladly compare it with the old oaken washtub my infancy knew, and I'm only too glad to acknowledge the merit of the plumbing profession which brought it to view—the family bathtub, the snowy-white bathtub, the luxurious bathtub, so bright and so new.

In childhood I toted each Saturday morning eight buckets of water from out at the well to fill up the washtub that stood there adorning the floor of the kitchen; and I would rebel as my mother ralentlessly ordered and urged me to strip to the skin and prepare for my fate, and when I was helpless she calmly submerged me in oceans of suds from my feet to my pate in the old oaken washtub, the iron bound washtub, the grease-covered washtub that filled me with hate.

And when I emerged with the water all dripping from my hair and my ears and my nose I felt like a fellow who'd just had a whipping and as red as a lobster from forehead to toes. To add to my troubles I was sternly admonished to tote all the water way back to the yard, and mother and aunty were truly astonished when I grumbled and said the job was too hard. So I hated that washtub, that old oaken washtub, that iron-bound washtub, as greasy as lard.

But now every morning I rise in a hurry and turn on the faucet so shiny and bright and the water comes rushing and I need not to worry as I plunge in and rinse off the dreams of the night. And when I have finished I pull out the stopper and the water goes gurgling away through the drain with never a leak or a splash or a slop or a bucket of suds to remind me again of the old oaken washtub, the iron-bound washtub; the soap-crusted washtub that gave me a pain.

I am thankful indeed to the honored profession that brought modern plumbing at last into style and I'm happy to give this formal expression to the pleasing emotions which cause me to smile as the old oaken washtub of sad recollection recedes to the background of memory's stage at the turn of a new fangled plumbing connection that shows me we live in an up-to-date age. And the proof is the bathtub, the snowy-white bathtub, recorded in honor on history's page.

OLD GLORY

The Colors
That Do Not Run

AMONG THE PLAYERS AND CADDIES

"Man proposes, and God disposes." We didn't get away at seven, after all! But it wasn't the bread that kept us from doing so. The day wasn't a very good one for an excursion after all, but nothing that could have been hastily planned to take the place of the boat trip could possibly have been as good. The Excursion will occur, (barring accidents) on next Sunday, the twenty-sixth, just as it was planned for the nineteenth. Let everybody who is eligible to go be on hand with his tin-cup (which a lot of the boys forgot last Sunday morning,) and the chances are in favor of everything being ready. There need be no alarm felt over the "Columbia's" recent streak of bad luck—which was perhaps not bad luck so much as poor babbit metal. So far as can be learned the trouble has been that of burned out bearings in the machinery. There is absolutely nothing unsafe about the boat herself. And Capt. Weaver says the machinery has been "fixed," and the jinx, if by chance there was one, thrown overboard. So let the boys who are entitled to this biggest "trip" of the year, enjoy it. Nice weather and good babbit metal is what every caddie wants next Sunday at 7:00 a. m. sharp.

—o—

There are only about two weeks more of plenty at the golf course. The first of September will make a great difference. Boys who are most regular and most deserving will be kept on the job the longest.

DEATH TAKES B. T. HALSTEAD

PROMINENT ATT'Y. AND FORMER JUDGE OF PROBATE

Had Been a Resident of Emmet County for Thirty-Five Years Well Known in This City

Benjamin T. Halstead, one of Petoskey and Northern Michigan's most prominent attorneys and a former prosecuting attorney and judge of probate, died Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at his residence at 614 Harvey street, Petoskey. He was sixty-seven years old, and had resided in Petoskey since 1891.

Mr. Halstead's health had been gradually failing for several years and his condition became noticeably worse some months ago. He underwent an operation at Lockwood hospital and obtained some temporary relief. He returned to his office and carried on some of his extensiva law practice, but about three weeks ago was again forced to his bed. For a number of days before his death it was known his condition was dangerous and that the end might come at any minute. Knowledge of his condition and that he might soon pass away, softened the shock somewhat to his faithful wife and his son, Benjamin H. Halstead.

His death takes from Petoskey and Northern Michigan one of the best known attorneys, and a man who gave much of his time and talent to the upbuilding of the community. In recent years he made extensive research into the legal and political history of Emmet county and Northern Michigan, and valuable papers and records which he prepared and read at historical society meetings are filed with the Petoskey and state historical records.

Besides the window he is survived by one son and three brothers and three grandchildren.

The funeral was held from the residence at 614 Harvey street Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services were conducted by Rev. John Redpath and Rev. P. B. Ferris. Durand lodge No. 344 F. & A. M., conducted the services at the grave.

POLICE ROUND UP TWO COLOREO MEN

Wanted By Petoskey Officials On Charge of Larceny

Two negroes were picked up last week in this city by Sheriff Novak and later taken to Petoskey, where they were wanted by the chief of police of that city on the charge of "larceny from the person."

The men are accused of having stolen $40 from Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Green, negro residents of Lake street, Petoskey, while visiting at the Green home Wednesday afternoon of last week.

It is alleged by Mrs. Green that the men, while visiting at her home asked her to change a $20 bill that they might have some smaller bills to use before returning to Charlevoix where they are employed this summer. When she brought out her roll of $40 she says they not only took this from her but also the $20 bill. They hired an auto and hurried out of the city for Charlevoix where they were soon rounded up by Sheriff Novak.

At a preliminary hearing held Saturday, the men were bound over to the coming term of circuit court.

SALTS IS FINE FOR KIDNEYS, QUIT MEAT

Flush the Kidneys at once when Back hurts or Bladder bothers—Meat forms uric acid.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Chesterfield
CIGARETTES

of IMPORTED and DOMESTIC tobaccos—Blended

"They please the taste great! But also—"

If a cigarette simply pleased the taste, smokers used to let it go at that. But not now.—

Because Chesterfields give smokers not only a taste that they like, but also a new kind of smoking-enjoyment—

Chesterfields hit the smoke-spot, they let you know you are smoking—they "Satisfy"!

Yet, they're MILD!

The new blend of pure, natural Imported and Domestic tobaccos—that tells the story. And the blend can't be copied—don't forget that!

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Says an inside bath, before breakfast helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Sparkling and vivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place, instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particulary those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Here's Grandmother's Recipe to Darken and Beautify Faded Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for 50 cents a large bottle, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

SPEEDING CAR HITS BAD CURVE

WIRE FENCE SAVES OCCUPANTS FROM SEVERE INJURY

Both Forward Wheels and One Rear Hanging Over Embankment When Car Stops

The fact that the highway commissioner when he completed graveling ths road leading towards Essex last yesr, thought it advisabie to build a strong fence at the curve of the rosd just south of ths Holiness church at the edge of the villaga is sll that saved the Dodge car belonging to Irvin Eaton from being on the scrap heap and Hugh Kinnar, ths driver, from being among the angels.

The seeident or near-accident happened at 3:30 last Monday afternoon when Mr. Kinner, accompanied by little "Mike" Eston, were on their wsy into town. On turning the curve the driver lost control and the car crashed into the fence. Two posts were torn out and several wires were broken but the rest held and the machine was brought to a stop with the front wheels and one rear wheel completely over the bank and only two wires holding the whole outfit from taking a plunge down the embsnkment, which had it done so would have meant a complete wreck of the car and certain death to the occupants.

As it was, little Mike's face was badly cut by the broken windshield. Mr. Kinner carefully removed himself from the machine and walked into town where help was secured and the car pulled back into the road. An inventory showed a broken windshield, broken lamp, a jammed radiator and badly bent bumper and fenders, besides other dents and scratches "too numerous to mention."

Hugh says he was driving not over fifteen miles per hour, but any one who has ever driven a car over this road knows that at that speed and with the width and condition of the track on this particular curve, a car travelling not over fifteen miles per hour is under perfect control and the driver must either lost his head completely or else was nearer a fifty mile gait, and Mr. Kinner may well congratulate himself that both he and his passenger escaped as easily as they did.

BURIAL TOOK PLACE FRIDAY

Friends and Relatives Pay Last Respects to Mrs. James Crandall

Nora D. Martin was born February 21, 1898, at Mecosta, Mecosta county Mich., and at the age of four years came with her parents and the rest of the family to Ellsworth in 1902, where she resided until January, 1915 when she moved with her mother and brother, Frank, to Gaylord, where she lived until the time of her demise, Monday, August 13, 1917.

On June 23 of this year she was married to James Crandall, Jr., at Gaylord and scarcely had their honey moon began when her already impaired health began to fail rapidly and all the family soon realized her leave taking was not far distant. No medical attention or tender care was spared to give her comfort during all her illness.

She was the youngest child of Mrs. O. A. Martin and besides her elderly mother, her father having departed this life on May 5, 1914, she leaves her young husband, five brothers, Bert of East Jordan, Sandy of Ellsworth, Dick of Onaway, Harry and Frank of Gaylord and four sisters, Mrs. Dan McMillan of Seewhy, Mich., Mrs. H. H. Fales, of Ellsworth, Mrs. Lewis Bilow of Sparr, Mich.; Mrs. Gus Walbridge of Ithaca, Mich., besides innumerable friends to mourn her final departure.

Remains arrived on Friday morning's train and the funeral was held from the Holiness church at 10 o'clock, condacted by Rev. Kridler, who delivered a very comforting sermon, followed by interment in the Boss cemetery.

ROCK ELM

Mrs. Lawton and family attended services at the Baptist church in Charlevoix Sunday evening.

Another recruit for Uncle Sam arrived in this neighborhood the 12th. He weighed 7 pounds and the home of Mr. and Mrs. Whaling will be his training camp for the present.

During the thunder storm Sunday morning one of the telephone poles between Mrs. Lawton's house and Mr. Metze's house was struck by lighting. The current followed the wires to both houses, but aside from burning out fuses in both phones and slightly shocking and scaring the inmates, no damage was done.

TEN DOLLAR FLOUR IS AN IOLE DREAM

When It Takes Five Bushels of $2.00 Wheat to Make It.

Flour at $10 a barrel is an idle dream; the public may as well be prepared to pay more this year, says James F. Bell, chairman of the advisory committee to aid food administration, appointed by Herbert C. Hoover. Mr. Bell declined to predict a price, saying it would be an "elastic" one.

Pressed for a rough estimate of what we might pay for flour under the food board regulation, he said, speaking unofficially, he thought, "somewhere around $12 a barrel" might be fair. But the price will be fluctuating and dependent on grades and other things.

Details Making Up Barrel

"It takes five bushels of wheat to make a barrel of flour, he explained. "At $2 a bushel that means $10 for raw material. To this must be added the cost of manufacturing, the profit to the mill, the package, which ranges from 50 cents to $2.10 a barrel, transportation, distribution, and the retailer's profit."

The "multiplicity of packages" in recent years has resulted in 2, 3, 5, 7, 10, 12, 24, 49, 98, 110, 196 and 220 pound packages all being put on the market. The Hoover food board, Mr. Bell said, considered ordering one unifrom package. Then they ran up against this snag: The mills could not supply the bagging or make the bags. They are equipped to do the business on the costlier scale, and to turn the plan over would topple the whole system and be costlier in the end. At present flour is packed in paper, cotton, wood and jute.

The smaller paper packages have to be repacked into still bigger packages or the railroads will not accept them, thereby again increasing the cost.

Corn Flour Doesn't Keep Well

"Mixed flour, meaning corn and wheat combined, will not be a factor, said Mr. Bell. "At the best a mixture of only 15 per cent corn flour could be used successfully. Corn flour does not keep well. It would not be good economic sense to risk ruining 85 per cent wheat to get into the flour the 15 per cent of corn."

ONE IN 30 KILLED

Such is Estimate of Statistician Who Has Made Investigation

Roger Babson, the eminent statistician of Wellesley, has gathered the following figures from a close study of war casualties:

Fourteen men out of fifteen so far have been safe.

Under present conditions, where man power is being saved, no more than one in thirty is killed.

Only one in 500 loses a limb—a chance no greater than in hazardous conditions at home.

Mr. Babson's conclusions are based on the mortality figures of the French army for the full three years of war. Attention is called to the fact that present fighting is not claiming anywhere near the number of dead recorded for the first two years.

He says: Most of the wounds sustained in the trenches are clean cut and of a nature that a few weeks in the hospital makes the subject as fit as ever. But 300,000 French soldiers have been discharged on account of wounds during the three years of the war.

"Most of the wounds received in the trenches are on top of the head, simply scalp wounds. Practically speaking, a wound is either fatal or slight, with but few in between these two extremes."

THE DUTY OF A JUST GOVERNMENT

PURPOSE OF WAR INSURANCE BILL NOW PENDING

Drafted Men Cannot Be Blamed for Asking Exemption—Government Should Provide Indemnity

By W. G. McADOO
Secretary of the Treasury

The number of claims for exemption from military duty under the draft law has caused a painful impression in many quarters, but after all, does not the fact that no provision has yet been made hy the Government for the support of the wives and children, mothers or fathers, of the men who have been drafted explain many of these claims for exemption?

Under the draft law the Government bas the power to require every able-bodied man hetween 21 and 31 years of age to perform military duty. Thousands of the drafted men are wage earners who married years ago and are the sole support of dependent families. So long as the Government has made no provision for the care of these dependents, it is natural that such drafted men should seek to protect their loved ones hy staying at home. I am sure that if the Congress should promptly enact the pending war insurance bill, which makes definite allowanees for the support of the dependent wives and children, fathers or mothers, of our soldiers and sailors, clnims for exemption on that score will cease. This is an imperative duty of the Government. We eannot deprive helpless women and children of the support of the wage-earner by forcing him into the military service of the country unless the Government substitutes itself as their support.

Imagine the emotions of the man who is called Into the military service of his country with full knowledge that his loved ones are left without means of support and may he reduced to want unless the eharity of ths community in which they live comes to their relief. It would be nothing less than a crime for a rich and just Government to treat its fighting men so heartlessly and to subject their dependent wives nnd children, who are unable to fight, to greater suffering than if they could fight.

The morale of an army is as essential to its effective fighting power as guns, ammunition and other lnmentalities of war. Of equal importance is the morale of the civil population whieh must support the armies in the field. We cannot have this essential morale unless the Nation comforts the men in the ranks with the knowledge that everything possible will be donc for them and their families, and renders to the civil population at home the assistance which will make it most effective in upholding the Government and the fighting forces.

The purpose of the war insurance bill now pending in the Congress is to secure the future of America's soldiers and sailors by insuring their lives and providing adequats compensationa and indemnities for loss of life and total or partial permnent disahility; also to protect their families against poverty and want by providing them with sufficient means of support during the absence of the men at the front.

The nation having been forced to the draft in order to create quickly and army to save the country, is under a higher ohligation to do these things for its fighting forces than if a vàlunteer army only was creatsd. This great Republic cannot afford to do less, and it must do what is proposed in a spirit of gratitude and not as charity. Every soldier and sailor who serves his country in this war will esrn everything the proposed war insnrancs bill provides; to be a heneficlary of the proposed law will be a hadge of honor.

Wben we draft the wage earner, we call not only him hut the entire family to the flag; the sacrifice entailed is not divisible. Tho wife and children, the mother, the father, are nll involved in the sacrifice—they directly sharo the burden of defense. They suffer just as mnch as the soldier, but In n different way, and the Nation must generously discharge as a proud priviligo the duty of maintalning them until the soldiers and sailors return from the war and resume ths responsibility.

We have drawn the sword to vindicate Americe's violated rights, to restore peace nnd justice, and to secure the progress of civilization. We cannot permit our soldiers, while they hold the front, to be stabbed in the back hy uacertainty as to what is belng done for their loved oaes at home. Our tomorrows are in their hands—theirs in ours. The national conscience will not permit America's soldiers and their dependents to go unprovided with everything that a just, generous and noble people can do to compensate them for the sufferings and sacrifices they make to serve their country.

Aside from the care and protection of their dependents while the soldier is alive, the proposed war insurance act provides for definite compensation for his dependents in case of death, for definite and adequate indemnities in case of total or partial disability, and for re-education of the malmed and disahled man, so that he may take up a new occupation and make himself a useful member of society. We must restore their efficiency and adjust their still available faculties and functions to suitable trades and vocations, which the injuries of the battlefield have not wholly destroyed. The heavy depletions in man-power resulting from this conflict, whieh is without precedent in history or imagination, will place new and greater values upon all forms and degrees of human energy, and demand as a first duty of intelligent government thnt every remaining useful sense and limb of the hlind and crippled shall be reclaimed under the benevolent processes of education and reapplied to economic uses for the benefit of society. The millions we shall be called upon to spend to support the dependents of the soldiers while they are in the fighting line, for indemnities and for re-education of the crippled, are in the last analysis lnvestments of the best sort; they are sums of capital advanced by the

The Sign Of a Good Cook

Careful selection of the materials used in cookery is the beginning of good cooking.

Proper selection indicates a desire for and a knowledge of the essentials of success.

You cannot buy in a slipshod fashion and mix things up in a haphazard way and be a good cook, or a good anything else.

Such a policy produces slatterns instead of experts, and develops adversity instead of prosperity.

Whenever and wherever you find the housewife using

Lily White

"The Flour the Best Cooks Use."

you find good cooking.

Not just because she uses Lily White Flour but because she has the power of discrimination and discernment.

She knows the difference between the Oh-I-guess-it-will-do variety and the Exactly-what-I-want kind.

It is mighty significant that the vast majority of good cooks choose, and insist on having, Lily White Flour and no other.

We suppose that's how Lily White came to be known as "The flour the best cooks use."

Anyhow it seems as though they will soon all be using it the way the demand keeps on increasing.

The bride wore a gown of pale pink and carried a boquet of pink sweet peas. The rooms and table were decorated in pale pink and white.

A bountiful supper was served following the services. The near relatives of both families were present.

The young people will be at home for the present at Sunny Ridge Farm, and the many friends of both young people will be glad to know thnt we will not lose them from our midst, and a long and happy married life is the wish of their many friends.

THE DUTY OF A JUST GOVERNMENT

Nation to promote utility, self-respect and economic development. More than all, they are essentially humanitarian snd in the highest sense a discharge by the Government of an essential duty to society.

Military service is now obligatory; those who imperil themselves have no election. The insurance companies do not and cannot permit this fact to affect their calculations. They must protect themselves by charging premiums so high that they are secured against loss no matter how severe the rate of mortality may be. Consequently, the very men who are called into the service because their physical condition is of the best and who as civilians would for that reason be able to secure the most favorable insurance rate in peace time, are denied as soldiers the necessary life insurance to enable them to protect their families and dependents. Tho tremendous rates charged by private insurance companies to protect them against the extra hazardous risks of war put insurance entirely beyond the reach of the conscripted soldier.

Military necessity, has, therefore, subjected the most fit subjects for insurance to an insurmountable discrimination unless the Government itself supplies insurance at cost and upon a peace basis. It would, in fact, be dastardly and undemocratic if the Government should penalize the soldier who is forced to render the highest duty of the citizen by its failure to provide war insurance upon peace terms and at net cost, first, because the pay of the enlisted men in the Army and Navy is less than the wages and salaries generally earned in private life, which reduces their investing capacity; and, second, because Government insurance is an essential war and emergency measure, inaugurated for the specific benefit of our military forces, and cannot and should not be conducted for profit.

Such overhead charges as agents' commissions, advertising, promotion, local rentals, etc., are eliminated. The Government must assume the cost of administering this benevolent agency, just as it bears the cost of administering all other Government agencies established for the benefit of the people.

This legislation will be a great step forward in the recognition of the Republic's duty to its heroes. I consider it the most significant and progressive measure presented to Congress since the declaration of war. It immediately affects the well-being of a greater number of persons than any act with which I am familiar. It deserves the earnest and vigorous support of the country. It provides the broadest and the most liberal protection ever extended by any government to its fighting forces and their dependent families. The United States, the most progressive and prosperous nation on earth, setting an example in the ideals for which enlightened humanity is fighting, should set the highest example of all the nations in the treatment of those who do and die for their country and for world freedom.

We nre proposing to expend during the next year more than ten billion dollars to create nnd maintain the necessary fighting forces to reestablish justice in the world. But justice must begin at home; justice must be done to the men who die and suffer for us on the battlefields and for their wives and children and dependents who sacrifice for us at home. To do justice to them requires only a tithe of the money we are expending for the general objects of the war. Let it not be said that noble America was ignoble in the treatment of her soldiers and sailors and callous to the fate of their dependents in this greatest war of all time.

The pending war insurance bill gives compensation, not pensions; it fixes amounts definitely in advance instead of holding out the mere chance of gratuities after the conclusion of peace. It saves the dependents from want and gives them the necessaries of life, while their men are at the front. It deals with its heroes liberally for the sufferings that result from their disablement on the field of battle, and, if they die, it makes just provision for the loved ones who survive them. It fosters the helpless and dependent, the maimed and disabled, and recognizes the immensity of the Nation's debt to the valor and patriotism of her heroic sons.

Campbell Oscillating Irrigator

Will Water Your Rectangular Spaces

These machines oscillate, and on a water pressure of 35 lbs. will cover a strip width of machine and 60 ft. long. They will operate on a pressure as low as 20 lbs., but of course cover a proportionately smaller area. They can be adjusted to throw the water to both sides on a very long or short stroke, also to throw the water to one side only, raising to a vertical position back and forth. On account of their rectangular distribution, and being adjustable to cover from 15 up to 60 ft., they are very popular on any size lawn. The 15 ft. machines are especially desirable for the irrigation of vegetables, as they can be pulled down the center of 50 ft. strips by hose attached to hydrants placed 100 ft. apart. We have hundreds of these machines in operation all over the country, and without exception they are giving the greatest satisfaction. Shipped by express anywhere. Shipping weight, 8 ft. machine 30 lbs.; 15 ft. 50 lbs.

BIRTHDAY AT HAYES

Mrs. Rose Wightman Surprised By Thirty Frieods

A party of friends completely surprised Mrs. Rose Wightmnn at her home in Hayes on the occasion of her birthday last Sunday.

Mrs. Jericho was the first to arrive with the can of ice cream and when Mrs. Wightman found her friend, Mrs. Frank Kane, sitting in the parlor, to say that she was surprised is putting it mildly. But she had "tumbled" by this time and when Mrs. Roy Kane came with the birthday cake, she was prepared for the worst (although she hadn't reckoned on the deadly efficiency of the "jolly nine" when they set out to do anything.)

The tablo was beautifully decorated with flowers and in the center was the birthday cake, adorned with pink candles—one for each year of the hostess' life; and on each end was a large display of fruit. A couple of plates on one side of the table nearly came to grief, but aside from this there were no casualties.

Thirty-one persons were present at the festivities and all report the best of good times. May Mrs. Wightman live to enjoy many more surprises.

User of our tires are well satisfied with their purchases. Longer mileage and less trouble than most tires made. Ask us about them. Benj. Brown. 33tf.

$12 FLOUR

Least We May Expect

—Hoover Aid Says:

"It takes five bushels of wheat to make a barrel of flour," he explained. At $2 per bushel this means $10 for the raw material. To this must be added the cost of manufacture, the profit to the mill, the package, which ranges from 50c to $2.10 per barrel, transportation, distribution, and the retailers profit.

We believe that old crop flours are nearing exhaustion and the low price. If you need a barrel to carry you over till the new flours are at their best let us figure with you now.

BOARD ISSUES A THIRD CALL

STILL TWENTY-EIGHT SHORT OF COUNTY'S QUOTA

Third Call For Sixty Men Issued to be Examined on Friday of This Week

The Charlevoix county exemption board last week Wednesday, Thursday and Friday examined 97 mea oa the accond cull. A call for 152 had been issued, but 54 failed to answer, and will be takca care af later.

Of these 98 men, only 31 were rejected as physically unfit for service, while of tbe remaining 66 there were 45 wbo filed claims for exemptiou. Up to Wednesday noon, tho board had granted exemptioa to 36 of these 45 who had filed, leaving but ninc claims to be examiaed. There were 21 who were accepted and did not file exemptions.

To date the number of men wha bave been called, passed tbe physical examinations, and did not ask cxemptions on any ground is 43, thus making Charlevoix county's quota 28 men short of the number she must furnish.

A third call for 60 mcn has been issued to answer for examination on Friday of this week, and it is tbe hope of the board to fill the required number among these men.

On account of a new ruling issued by the wur department, six men of the first call have been notifed to appear for a second examination, which may possibly swell the list af cligibles somewhat.

The exemption board conducted the examinations last week without any lost motion, and were through with the first day's assignment long before the usual bour.

Will Train at Battle Creek

Michigan's draft army of 30,291 men will bc mobolized at Battle Creek, where a new cantonment is being built, according to word given out last week by Provost Marshal General Crowder.

This announcement is significant as it sets at rest all doubt as to where the Charlevoix county men to the number of 71 will train for service in the new national army. While it was believed that all of Michigan's troops would be mobolized at Battle Creek, there had been no official announcement.

The mobolization dates have been changed by Provost Marshal General Crowder. Thirty-five per cent of the men on the first draft will go to camps on September 5; 30 per cent on September 19, and 30 per cent on October 3. The last ten per cent will report for training later in October.

The Charlevoix county drafted men will be divided into four sections to report for service at Battle Creek, as follows: Twenty-one men on September 5; 21 on September 19; 21 on October 3 and eight at a later date in October. The men will report for service in the order drawn by the Charlevoix county board. For instance, the first available man in the Charlevoix county list, together with the next 20 men, will leave here on September 5, and so on until the whole quota of 71 men have left.

On the third call for men, should there be more pass all requirements, all needed over the required number of 71 will be ordered to hold themselves in readiness for the second draft call which it is expected will come in January, 1918.

BAN PLACED ON HAZING

PRACTICE MUST BE STOPPED SAYS SUPERINTENDENT

Annual "Ducking" of Freshmen Considered Conductive to Poor Educational Results

Superintendent H. A. Craig of the Charlevoix Public school has issued an edict that will take all the joy out of the opening week of school this year and future years to come. In the past it has been the custom to put those entering the high school from the grades through a "series of stunts" such as ducking under the hydrant, filling their hair with such scrubbing compounds as "Flash," "Rub-no-More," "Gold Dust Twin Compound," etc., and marching them to their seats in the assembly room minus the use of comb, towel or brush.

It was fun for those pulling off the stunts, but to those enduring it, was somewhat different. Usually, when the job was completed, the "freshies" knew he had "been some where." But in the future, doings of this kind are a serious infraction of school rules and must not occur—or serious results will befall those who indulge in them.

The "freshies" will read this new ruling with delight—while the bunch—well. However, we believe it is a bad practice and should be stopped, regardless of the "joy" that goes with the operation.

Following is the letter sent to parents, who are urged to lend their aid in its enforcement:

"Dear Parents:—The experience of several years, has proved that the so-called "ducking" of the Freshmen is conductive to poor educational results, and to a poor school spirit.

"While realizing that the "pass it on" argument is a strong one with the students, we also give the students credit for understanding that such an argument, is without results, and only adds to the reasons for discontinuing the practice.

"Since the practice spoken of above, is not conductive of good results, we are strictly prohibiting any form of hazing, in or out af school. Students who disregard this rule, will be dealt with severely.

"The parents are asked to co-operate, by discussing with their children the wisdom of such an action on the part of the schools.

"We believe that the Charlevoix students, will co-operate with us, in making Charlevoix High School, the best High School in the "Best Little City Anywhere."

H. A. CRAIG,
Superintendent.

THROWN HEAD-LONG FROM CAR

SERIOUS AUTO ACCIDENT ON PETOSKEY ROAD

Car Driven at High Spaed Collidas With Wagon Loaded With Tar Barrels

The Petoskey Road added another accident to the alresdy large number which have occurred there during the past season, last Wednesday afternoon about 3:00 o'clock, which nearly resulted in the death or serious injury to the occupants of a Studebaker car on its way to Traverse City.

The car was owned by the Lyons Livery and Garage of Cheboygan, and was driven by young Lyons, who had been hired by E. H. Bingham af Detroit to drive himself, wife and son Murray, from Cheboygan to Traverse City, where the Bingham family are spending tbe summer.

The accident occurred between the railroad crossing east of the John Martin plaec and what is known as the entrance to the North Charlevoix resort. The car was coming from the east and met a wagon, loaded with tur barrels, driven by James O'Brien, about half way up the grade. From Mr. Bingham's awn statement, O'Brien gave them more than half of the road, and the accident happened so quick ahd unexpected that he and its occupaats could hardly realize it for some time nfter it occurred.

As near as he (Mr. Bingham) could stute, the driver Lyons, attempted to keep as near the middle of the road as he could, and the forward wheel of the car collided with the rear wheel of the wagon, swinging the car around baek of the wagon into the ditch, throwing its occupants with grent force forward, over the windshield, onto the side of the road beyond the ditch.

Mr. Bingham, his son, Murray, and the driver, Lyons, landed on the sod and brush without injury, but Mrs. Bingham, the only one to be injured, struck her head on the end of a log, and was picked up in an unconscious condition. Medical assistanee was summoned and Dr. King removed the injured woman to The Inn, where it was found that she has sustained a slight concussion of the brain, and wns otherwise bruised. She remained in a comotose condition for about 18 hours, but is now recovering rapidly, and on Friday of this week will be removed to her home in Detroit.

Mr. Binghnm places the entire blame of the accident on the driver, who was traveling at a speed estimated above 25 miles an hour when it happened. One theory ndvanced was that the steering gear was loose, and when passing the wagon, the forwnrd wheels struck a rut, and running as close to the wagon as he did; threw the car against it.

SHOULD BUILD OF CONCRETE

REGARDLESS OF OPINION AS TO ROUTE

Enthusiastic Roads Meeting Held Thursday Night—Two Routes Under Discussion

One of the most enthusiastic road meetings ever held in this section of the state taok place at Ellsworth last Thursday evening.

The call for the meeting was issued by members of the Ellsworth Board of Trade, and was responded to by between 25 and 30 residents of Banks township. George H. Van Pelt of this city was invited to appear at the meeting, his mission chiefly being to explain the ins and outs of the good roads laws, especially in regards to state and federal aid. Mr. Van Pelt was accompanied by Harry Nicholls, A. J. Usher and H. J. Gray, secretary of the Michigan Tourist and Resort association.

Tho meeting was called to order by G. C. Townsend, secretary of the Ellsworth Board of Trade, who stated the object af the meeting and then introdaeed Mr. Van Pelt.

Banks township has a road problem to solve that is rather unusual. The West Michigan Pike runs through the extreme west end of the township and it is well known to our readers that an effart is being made all tha way from Miami, Florida, to Mackinaw City, thence south along the east side of Michigan to Saginaw, Detroit, Toledo, thence to Chattanooga, to construct goad roads, preferably of concrete, over the entire route.

There is a difference of opinion among residents af Banks township, whether this route is to remain on what is called the lower road, the original survey, or on what is known as the county road, running north from Eastport, through Atwood to the Jolliffe corner, west to Lord corner, north to the county line and west to the lower road.

Tha distance of both routes is practically the same, although the proposed new route runs through a more hilly part of the county, thus increasing the expense af road building and grading. To offset this, the residents nnd praperty awners on this routa claim more people will be benefited, directly or indirectly, if the roads is built over this route, and are also willing to make liberal personal donntions to offset the added expense of road building.

The entire situation was discussed pro and con by those present, with the result that a committee of five, Probate judge E. R. Harris, Albert Harwood, Henry Klooster, W. P. Smith and G. C. Townsend, was named whose duties will be to look into the advisability of the proposed change of route, solicit private donations from taxpayers living on the proposed new route, and report at a later meeting.

Mr. Van Pelt explained the situation, clearly defining the stand taken by officials of the West Michigan Pike association, with regards to changes of routes. He also stated that if the concrete road was built on a route other than sanctioned by the West Michigan Pike authorities, no federal aid would be given. In other words, if Banks township decides to bond and build a road of concrete, they cannot have federal aid unless the change is sanctioned by officials of the West Michigan Pike. If they should decide to build of concrete without this consent, the move must be sanctioned by the state highway department if they get the 15 per cent given by the state. If they build over the route sanctioned by the West Michigan Pike officials and the state highway department, they will receive 50 per cent of the original cost from federal aid and 15 per cent from the state, leaving only 35 per cent to be paid by the township.

The catimated cost of a concrete road per mile is $15,000. Federal aid to the amount of 50 per cent reduces this cost to $7,500 and 15 per cent of the original cost by the state leaves but $5,250. Thus whether it is in Banks township, Charlevoix county, or any other locality, concrete roads over trunk lines can be built for approximately $5,250 per mile.

The matter now lies in tha hands of the committee appointed and the taxpayers of the township.

He was making preparations for a trip dawn tbe lake to Traverse City and had everytbing ready ta start but tbe engine, when the accident occurred. O. W. Smith Had Been a Resident of Charlevoix for More Than Thirty-Five Years

O. W. Smith, who came to Charlevoix more than 35 years ago, died Friday morning in Lockwood Hospital, Petaskey, of heart failure.

Mr. Smith had been in poor health for more than two years and about 18 months ago suffered an attack of gangrene and was obliged to have one of his legs amputated. He has been able to be about since then until Tuesday of last week, when he was unable to leave his bed and was taken to Lackwood Hospital, Petoskey, where he died Thursday morning. A sad feature of the case was the fact that his only daughter is now seriously ill in a Chicago haspital and could not be acquainted with her father's death.

Mr. Smith was a gonius in his way and during the time that he lived among us, invented many useful things. He was a nephew of Orson Phelps, who invented the Singer Sewing machine.

Short services were held Friday afternoon in Petoskey and interment was also in that city.

Mr. Smith was 79 years of age and leaves two children, Fred A., of Traverse City, and a daughter, Mrs. Jessie McInerney, in the Chicago hospital.

SCHOOLS OPEN SEPTEMBER 10

BUT FEW CHANGES HAVE BEEN MADE IN FACULTY

Everything Has Been Put In Shape for the Opening of Successful School Year

Charlavoix public schools will apen September 10 with an estimated enrallment of 520 students and practically the sama corps of teachers as last year. The organization and course of study will remain unchanged.

The greatest asset of any school system is the character of the teaching corps. The success af the school depends upon the ability af the teaching staff, and taking the few changes inta consideration, there is no reason why the coming school year will not be as successful as tbat of 1915-16.

G. E. Loomis, the saccessful coaeb af last year, will accupy the responsible position of principal of the high school. He has the respect af the students and will without doubt render the pupils and patrons efficient service in this capacity.

The ather high school positions will be filled by an effeient staff, many who have been with us for several years, and have won our esteem, both for their ability as teathers, and as women of admirable character. The new instructors are teachers of experience and will give us very efficient service. We can congratulate ourselves on securing their services.

The grade instructors have, with the exception of Miss MacDonald, all rendered splendid servieo in the grades of this city in the past, and the future will show that their work will be of the same bigh character.

The Charlevoix County Narmal will be efficiently handled by Miss Helena Bates, who comes to us with the highest recommendation for scholarship and character. Miss Bates will without doubt fill the position of principal with credit to herself and to the community. Miss Huntoon is well known to Charlevoix as a first class instructor nnd County Normal critic.

Everything has beon put in fine shape for the apening of schaal. Each buildiag has been thoroughly eleaned and dusted and little evidence, if any, remain af the recent fire in the Central School building.

Enrollment for high school can be made on Thursday nnd Friday, both forenoon and afternoon, and Saturday morning previous to the opening of school. It is desirous that as many as possible avnil themselves of this opportunity, as at that time better counsel can be given and many mistakes avoided.

While school commences September 10, boys engaged in necessary farm work will be permitted to remain at work until the need of their services has passed. Superintendent Craig stated today that boys wha are thus delayed in beginning the school year, would be given every assiatance later to make up their studies. Only those whose work is necessary will ba permitted to remain away from school, and not those who are working at add jobs to earn money.

"I want the parents and the public to become more interested in the work of the schools," said Superintendent Craig. "There should be a closer connection between the faculty and the parents; the parents should acquaint themselves with the method and nature of the school work, and for that reason we are going to make it a special point to haven special inducements of intcrest to both parent and pupil, and then perhaps they will interest themselves more closely in the schools."

Following is the liat of teachers for the year 1917-18:

SALTS IF KIDNEYS OR BLADDER BOTHER

Harmless to flush Kidneys and neutralize irritating acids—Splendid for system.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in evoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, spitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach; can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

TREAT YOUR SEED WHEAT FOR SMUT

Warning Issued By County Agriculturist Kilborn

Treat you seed wheat for smut.. Under the new grain standardization law the licensed inspectors are required to dock smutty grain not only for the loss in weight but for the cost of cleaning and washing. Experienced grain buyers estimate that smutted wheat will bring about 15 cents less per bushel than clean wheat. (Treatment.) Thoroughly fan to remove all smut balls, then spread out in long pile. One man sprays while another shovels the grain over. Use a small hand atomizer or sprayer, pint or quart size. Use Formaldehyde just as it comes from the drug store, one pint to fifty bushels of grain or in the same proportion for any amount. After the grain is thoroughly sprayed cover with blankets or canvas for four hours—no longer—and then spread thinly for a thorough airing.

BLAMES PARENTS FOR ERRORS OF CHILDREN

Speaker Avers 90 Per Cent of Parents Fail In Their Duty

Behind every delinquent girl in Chicago, as well as other cities, is a delinquent boy and behind them both are the delinquent parents, according to Dr. Clara Seippel of the city physician's office, who spoke before the Protestant Women's association at a recent meeting in Chicago.

"The necessary adjunct to the social standing of any girl, no matter to what class she belongs," Dr. Seippel said, "is a 'feller.' If she hasn't some member of the opposite sex paying her attention she appears to lose caste among the young people of her acquaintance. If wholesome ways of having this association are not provided the young people will find them in an unwholesome way.

"Ninety-nine per cent of the parents of all cities fail in their duty of showing the young people between the ages of 14 and 20 the seriousness of what lies before them. They go out to the movies instead of encouraging Sadie and her beau to stay at home and providing good entertainment for them there.

"They say the devil works twenty-four hours a day. If the good people would work half as long for our youngsters we should not have so many of them passing through the Juvenile court."

Author of "The Spoilers," "The Iron Trail," "The Silver Horde," Etc.

"Indeed, you forget yourself," she said, warmly. Then, chonging her tone: "I too must act quickly. I must go back at once."

"Oh, but I have told you only a part of what I came to say."

"Surely the rest can wait." Her voice was vibrant with contempt. "I'm in no condition to listen to anything else."

But Longorin insisted. "Wait! It is impossible for you to leave here."

Alaire stared at him incredulously.

"It is true. Mexico is a seething caldron of hate; the country is convulsed. It would be unsafe for you."

"Do you mean to say that war has been declared?"

"Practically."

"What—? You are telling me the truth?" A moment, then Alaire continued, more calmly, "If that is so, there is all the more reason why I should lose no time."

"Listen!" The general was deeply in earnest. "You have no conception of the chaos out there." He waved a comprehensive gesture. "If the explosion has not come, it will come within a few hours. That is why I flew to your side. Battleships are hurrying toward our coast, troops are massing against our border, and Mexico has risen like one man. The people are in a frenzy; they are out of bounds; there is sack and pillage in the cities. Americans are objects of violence everywhere and the peons are frantic." He paused impressively. "We face the greatest upheaval of history."

"Then why are you here?" Alaire demanded. "This is no place for you at such a moment."

Longorio came closer to her, and his voice trembled as he said: "Angel of my soul, my place is at your side." Again she recoiled, but with a fervor he had never dared display he rushed on heedlessly. "I have told you I harken only to my heart; that for one smile from you I would behead myself; that for your favor I would betray my fatherland; that for your kiss I would face damnation. Well, I am here at your side. The deluge comes, but you shall be unharmed." He would not permit her to check him, crying: "Wait! You must hear me through, senora, so that you may comprehend fully why I am forced to speak at this time. Out of this coming struggle I shall emerge a heroic figure. Now that Mexico unites, she will triumph, and of all her victorious sons the name of Luis Longorio will be sung the loudest, for upon him more than upon any other depends the republic's salvation. I do not boast. I merely state facts, for I have made all my plans, and tomorrow I put them into effect. That is why I cannot wait to speak. The struggle will be long, but you shall be my guiding star in the hours of darkness."

Under other circumstances the man's magnificent egotism might have provoked a smile. And yet, for all its grandiloquence, there was something in his speech that rang hard and true. Unquestionably Longorio was dangerous—a real personality, and no mere swaggering pretender. Alaire felt a certain reluctant respect for him, and at the same time a touch of chilling fear such as she had hardly experienced before. She faced him silently for a moment; then she said:

"Am I to understand that you forbid me to leave my own house?"

"For the time being, exactly."

"What? Then I am your prisoner!"

"No, no!" He made a gesture of denial. "How ridiculous! I merely keep you from certain destruction. You cannot go by train, because the railroad has suspended public service, nor can you ride or drive. I tell you, senora, the people are aroused. For the moment you must accept my protection, whether you wish to or not. Tomorrow"—Longorio smiled warmly, meaningly—"perhaps you will not be in such haste to refuse it, or to leave La Feria. Wait until you understand me better. Then— But enough of this. You are unstrung, you wish to be alone with your thoughts, and what I have to say can wait for a few hours. In the meantime, may I beg the hospitality of your ranch for myself and my men?"

Alaire acquiesced mechanically. Longorio saluted her fingers in his customary manner, and then, with a look eloquent of things unsaid, he went out to see to the comfort of his command.

Alaire sank into the nearest chair, her nerves quivering, her mind in a turmoil. This Mexican was detestable, and he was far from being the mere maker of audaciously gallant speeches, the poetically fervent wooer of every pretty woman, she had blindly supposed him. His was no sham ardor; the man was hotly, horribly in earnest. There had been a glint of madness in his eyes. And he actually seemed to think that she shared his infatuation. It was intolerable. Yet Longorio, she was sure, had an abundance of discretion; he would not dare to offer her violence. He had pride, too; and in his way he was something of a gentleman. So far, she had avoided giving him offense. But if once she made plain to him how utterly loathsome to her was his pursuit, she was sure that he would cease to annoy her. Alaire was self-confident, strong-willed; she took courage.

Her thoughts turned from her fears to the numbing reality of her widowhood. Even yet she could not wholly credit the fact that Ed's wasted life had come to an end and that she was free to make the most of her own. Alaire remembered her husband now with more tenderness, more charity, than she would have believed possible, and it seemed to her pitiful that one so blessed with opportunity should have worked such havoc with himself and with those near to him.

Doubtless it was all a part of some providential scheme, too blind for her to solve. Perhaps, indeed, his own trials had been designed to the end that her greater, truer love, when it did come, would find her ripe, responsive, ready. As for this Mexican general, she would put him in his place.

Alaire was still walking the floor of her chamber when Dolores entered, at dusk, to say that supper was ready and that General Longorio was waiting.

"Ask him to excuse me," she told her servant.

But Longorio himself spoke from the next room, saying: "Senora, I beg of you to honor me. I have much of importance to say, and time presses. Control your grief and give me the pleasure of your company."

After an instant's consideration, Alaire yielded. It was best to have the matter over with, once for all.

CHAPTER XXI.

The Doors of Paradise.

Alaire began the mockery of playing hostess with extreme distaste, and as the meal progressed she experienced a growing uneasiness. Longorio's bearing had changed since his arrival. He was still extravagantly courteous, hauntfully attentive; he maintained a flow of conversation that relieved her of any effort, and yet he displayed a repressed excitement that was disturbing. In his eyes there was a gloating look of possession hard to endure. Despite her icy formality, he appeared to be holding himself within the bounds of propriety only by an effort of the will, and she was not surprised when, at the conclusion of the meal, he cast restraint aside.

She did not let him go far with his wooing before warning him: "I won't listen to you. You are a man of taste; you must realize how offensive this is."

"Let us not deceive each other," he insisted. "We are alone. Let us be honest. Do not ask me to put faith in your grief. I find my excuse in the extraordinary nature of this situation."

"Nothing can excuse indelicacy," she answered, evenly. "You transgress the commonest rules of decency."

But he was impatient. "What sentiment! You did not love your husband. You were for years his prisoner. Through the bars of your prison I saw and loved you. Dios! The first sight of your face altered the current of my life. I saw heaven in your eyes, and I have dreamed of nothing else ever since. Well, Providence opened the doors and set you free; God gave heed to my prayers and delivered you to me. Now you pretend to grieve at your deliverance; you ask me to respect the memory of your jailer! Decency? Delicacy? What are they except artificialities, which vanish in times of stress? Alexander the Great, Cæsar, Napoleon, Porfirio Diaz—they were strong, purposeful men; they lived as I live. Senora, you daily with love."

Alaire's face was white with anger as she replied: "You cause me to forget that you are my guest. Are you the man I considered you or the man you are reported to be?"

"Eh?"

"Are you the gentleman, the friend, you pretended to be, or—the vandal whom no woman can trust? You treat me as if you were my jailer. What do you mean? What kind of man are you to take advantage of my bereavement?"

After a moment's consideration, Longorio began haltingly: "I don't know what kind of a man I am, for you have changed me so. There was a time—I—I have done things— I have scorned all restraint, all laws except those of my desires, and so, perhaps, I am a vandal. Make sure of this, however—I shall not injure you. Mexico is no more sacred to me than you, my heart's treasure. You accuse me of indelicacy because I lack the strength to smother my admiration. I adore you; my being dissolves, my veins are afire with longing for you; I am mad with the knowledge that you are mine. Mad? Caramba! I am insane; my mind totters; I grope my way like a man blinded by a dazzling light; I suffer agonies. But see! I refuse to touch you. I am a giant in my restraint. The strength of heroes is mine, and I struggle my impulses as they are born, although the effort kills me. Senora, I await the moment of your voluntary surrender. I wait for you."

GRAY HAIR BECOMES DARK AND BEAUTIFUL

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is musay and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

STATE WANTS MANY MORE MEN

TO ENLIST IN MICHIGAN CONSTABULARY

Interesting Letter From Former Charlevoix Citizen Who Is Now In the Service

We are in receipt of an interesting letter from M. C. Woodgate, whose home is in this city and who is now a member of the Michigan Stats Constabulary, with headquarters at Lansing.

According to Mr. Woodgate's statements, more men are wanted for this branch of the service, in which the physical requirements are not as strenuous as thst of the regulsr army. The psy too, is considerable more than that of the regular army, and other inducements offered are of a nature thst make this branch of army life quite desirous. The letter follows:

Esst Lansing, August 24.

Editor Courisr: I am now located at Lansing, connected with the Michigan State Constabulary, and last night twenty-five men from here lsft to relieve those members of Co. I., stationed at Port Huron for gusrd duty.

"We have at present sbout 150 men. I have helped pasa on their physical examination. We sign them up for three years or sooner discharged, but a man is obliged to agree to stay 60 days in either event. We have a fine bunch of men snd do not take but the best, although we have taken many who could not pass the exsmination given these under the army draft or for enlistment in the U. S. army.

"The state is putting up all new buildings here for regular beadqusrers of the constabulary and the location is a beautiful one. The state feeds the men extra well and today we had for dinner, bread pudding, iced tea or cocoa, potatoes, bread snd jelly, roast beef and gravy. Not so bad, is it?

"If there are anyone in Chsrlevoix or vicinity who wants a job like this, and they think they are physically fit, not less than five feet seven inches tall, there is a good position here for them. The pay for private is $60 a month and bosrd, with transportation psid from their home to this point.

Very truly yours,

M. C. WOODGATE,

Michigan State Constabulsry, East Lansing, Michigan, Medical Dep't.

THE PUBLIC PULSE

Charlevoix, Mich., Aug., 27.

The Chsrlevoix Courier, City,

Dear Editor:

In last week's issue of the Courier I read an advertisement of a certain miller as regards Mr. Hoover's $12 flour, which called my attention as being somewhat funny and if comment on it is not out of order, please permit me.

Wheat, st $2 per bu	$10.00
Cost of milling, sacking, selling and etc.	2.00
Total	$12.00

This looks good to me and if such were the case, I would consider it as fair snd just profit. But let us figure fnrther.

It tskes five bushels of good sound wheat to mske 200 pounds of flour. This must be government test wheat and weigh not less than 60 pounds per bushel free from smut or foul seeds, for which the farmer receives $2 per bushel, 5 bu. of wheat or 300 pounds. From this the miller makes 200 pounds of flour. Whst becomes of the other 100? Let us see. Cost of raw material:

300 lbs. wheat or 5 bu.	$10.00
From this the miller gets 200 lbs. flour at $12 bbl.	12.00
100lbs. Brand and Middlings at $50.00 a ton	2.50
Total	$14.50

snd we find that instead of a $2.00 profit he gets $4.50, or a little over one-third the entire cost of a barrel of flour. Now suppose a farmer like myself, takes his labor in wheat to get his flour. He has to have 6 bushels of government test wheat at $2.00 to pay for his barrel of flour

6 bu. of wheat at $2	$12.00
1 bbl. of flour	12.00

now how does the miller come out with his wheat?

360 lbs. good wheat makes 240 lbs. flour at $12 bbl	$14.40
120lbs. brand and middlings at $50 a ton	3.00
Total received	$17.40
Total cost of raw material	12.00
Total profit	$5.40

Does this look like $2 to you; nearly one-hslf the original cost? Who mnkes the profit?

"FARMER BILL."

(The report referred to was a clipping from the Chicago Tribune which appeared in practically all the papers in the United States. Its authority is Mr. Bell, president of the Wnshburn Crosby Co., chairman of the Hoover committee on grains—Ed.)

NASH MOTORS CO.

Motor Cars and Trucks

We are glad to announce that we have secured the Nash Motor Company line of automobiles and trucks for Charlevoix and Emmet counties. We consider ourselves extremely fortunate in being able to offer the product of such an organization to the automobile and truck buyers of this territory.

Charles W. Nash needs no introduction to those familiar with the automobile business; what he accomplished for the General Motors Company needs no comment. It is admitted that he is the biggest man in the motor car industry today. And now he has purchased the entire 100 acre plant and equipment of the Thomas B. Jeffery Company at Kenosha, Wis., for the purpose of building a line of cars under his own name.

The announcement of the Nash Motors Company appeared in The Saturday Evening Post for August 25th. There are others to follow; watch for them.

DRAFTED MEN NOT EXEMPTED

THOSE AMONG FIRST CALL FOUND PHYSICALLY O. K.

Ninety Men of Second Call Passed Examination and 50 Per Cent Welve Exemption Claims

Througb tha courtesy of Couaty Clark Deevey wa ara abla to giva a few facts at this time concerning the draft as it affects Banks township.

Antrim county's quota for the first eall is 90 men and the first levy was two hundred por eant, or ons hundred and elghty men. Of this number ninety-sevan passed the examinations givan by the local board and sixty two of ths ninety ssven were not exempt.

In order to secura the remalning twenty-eight a second eall was given for ona hundred and twenty men, these being examined at Bellaire last week. About ninety of the number passed, about fifty per eent of those who passed waiving claims for exemption.

As a result thera will no doubt be a sufficient number to fill the quota of the county after the appeals to tha district exemption board is completed and those physically unfit are rajected at the final examination.

Thus, as there are registered in the county, nine hundred and ten men, there are still six hnndred and ten left for future calls.

A great many Atwood folks attended the picnie given by the Bay View Arhor of Gleaners. Among other things seea there were a large number of automohiles and myriads of little Fords. Everyhody seemed to enjoy themselves even during tha thunderstorm, which drove everyone to shelter in the middla of tbe afternoon.

Now people, after having attended that road meeting at Ellsworth last Thursday evening, atrip up your sleevea and help get the thing through. If you were'nt there, find out of your neighbor what transpired there and do your bit toward making Banks township known for its good roads. Help to build the road and it will help you by raising property values and lessening hauling costs. It will also give us a reputation among outsiders, which wa certainly need, as the condition of tha Dixie Highway and the State Road ara giving us the wrong kind of reputation just now.

CUT IN FREIGHT LOADING DAYS

SMALL SHIPMENTS CAN BE MADE 3 TIMES A WEEK

Aid of Charlevoix—Shortage in Aid of Petoskey—Shortage in Cars Relieved

F. V. Alexander, local agent of the Pere Marquette, is in receipt of the following letter from officials of the railroad at Grand Rapids, relative to a change in freight shipping from this point, as well as all points on the Pere Marquette. The order went into effect on August 21, but is not generally known to local shippers:

Commencing Tuesday, Aug. 21, this company will load less than carload merchandise for all points south on Tuesdays, Thursday and Saturdays only.

No merchandise will be received for forwarding, except on the days mentioned.

Grand Rapids loads merchandise for Charlevoix on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

This arrangement is made for the purpose of conserving the car supply, to meet the requirements of the board of national defense, and to insure the prompt handling and delivery of your shipments.

We believe you will be pleased to co-operate with us.

Yours truly,
W. A. MARTIN, Agent.

It is estimated that with the carrying out of this order the freight car shortage on the Pere Marquette system alone will be relieved to the extent of about 1,000 box cars per day.

HAPPY HIKE TO HORTON BAY

CITY BOY SCOUT RELATES HIS EXPERIENCES

Greatly Impressed by Scenes Along Route—Trip Taught Many New Lessons

Below we reproduce a letter received at this office from a young member of the Boy Scout organization, who, with two companions, made the hike from Charlevoix to Horton bay. The letter will be read with interest by many of our young boy scout members, as it glowingly describes the manner in which Nature revealed itself to the writer, who it is quite evident, has spent most of his life in a city. From a scout viewpoint, the trip must have been a wonderful one.

"Bright and early on the morning of August 22, we started on our hike. There were three of us, headed for Horton bay—12 miles away. After a six o'clock breakfast, we started up Petoskey Ave. The morning was fine and crisp and we were all in the best of spirits, singing scout songs on the way.

"The road was good the first six miles, but then it became very poor, but it was great fun anyway.

"In places the woods skirted the road on both sides, whose branches almost formed a roof as they met over head. The woods were thick with oak, birch, elm, ash and maple trees. In places, whole rows of Lumbardy poplars stretched along the road and an occasional giant oak could be seen.

"The fields presented a beautiful spectacle. Rows and rows of beans, potatoes, wheat, oats and rye spread on each side of the road. We saw the harvesting machines at work and in the distance a tractor plying its way over the field.

"Along the road we passed a family of young turkeys. Farther on, an old hen was watchfully caring for her young, and was in the greatest excitement until we had disappeared. Still farther on, we came upon some pasture land, where some cows and horses were grazing. There was where I learned a lesson which at least nine-tenths of the city boys do not know. A horse scrambles to his feet, forelegs first, and a cow, hindlegs first, with more speed than I gave her credit for.

"We halted at convenient places along the road, so I could make memorandas of things of interest. We passed lake Susan and the 'haunted house' surrounded by trees. At the end of the lake, twin stone houses were the only signs of inhabitants. Farther on we crossed a wooden bridge, stretched over a shallow brook, which flowed through a little valley.

"Finally we arrived at Hortons bay, and enjoyed one of the heartiest meals of our lives. After lunch we told stories and took life easy. We were given a lift in an automobile, arriving there at 5:45, after a fine days hike. We retired early, having earned our rest, forming 'The End of a Perfect Day.'"—John J. Grabfield.

FAREWELL PARTY

About 40 Guests Suprise Miss Frances Wirtle

Miss Frances Wirtle, who has been spending the summer with her aunt, Mrs. Bert Wightman, of Hayes township, was given a very pleasant farewell surprise last Sunday. It was arranged for Miss Frances to attend the 10 o'clock service instead of the 8 o'clock as had been her custom and in her absence about 40 guests congregated at the home. When she returned everything was in readiness with the table spread and adorned with flowers and fruit. After refreshments had been served, Mr. Wightman presented his niece with a beautiful shower boquet of carnations and roses. Miss Frances was almost overcome but responded in a few well chosen words, thanking all present. Everyone enjoyed the afternoon very much and voted the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Wightman the place to go for a good time.

Entertains at Beach Hotel

Miss Adeline S. Holley entertained last week at the Beach hotel pavillion 60 of her friends. Pot luck supper was served at seven o'clock and balance of evening was spent in dancing. W. Neir from Grand Rapids and Miss Irene Boice from Boyne City. All reported a fine time.

WEST MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

BIG ATTRACTION TO BE HELD SEPTEMBER 17-21

Hundreds of Attractions Booked Will Draw Visitors From All Sections of State

With 365 stellar attractions the West Michigan State Fair, September 17-21 promises to set a pace which will place the Grand Rapids exposition in a class by itself. Among the big free attractions will be Ruth Law, the aviatrix who flew from Chicago to New York last fall and who recently returned from France where she spent the winter flying with the French aviators at the allied front and over Paris.

Another big free attraction will be the "March of the Allies" a monster patriotic spectacle depicting the progress of democracy and the battlefields of Europe. There will be more than a hundred handsomely decorated floats representing the allied nations, bands, detachments of troops, jackies, veterans of other wars, patriotic societies and a human flag 150 feet long. The steel tanks which have horrified the Teutons will crawl over the battlefield at the fair and other features will be added to make the scene realistic.

Other big features include the Holland Village, a $25,000 scenic production depicting the scenes, life, costumes and activities of the lands of the dykes, a monster three ring Hippodrome circus with 250 performers and attendants, Allied Bazaar, kite flying contest, day light fireworks, automobile races, joy zone, canning contests, livestock judging contests and a public auction sale where fair visitors may sell anything from a farm or automobile to a pair of shoes or a neck tie.

The agricultural department which has always been the main feature of the fair offers $25,000 in premiums, the largest amount ever offered by a fair in the middle west. $1,000 of this amount will be awarded to the farmers producing the largest yields per acre, quality considered. There will be more cattle, horses, poultry, swine, needlework, grains, fruit, etc., than ever before in spite of the fact that the West Michigan State Fair already holds the record for the greatest number of livestock exhibits of any fair in the central state.

The Automobile Business Association will hold its second fall automobile show at the fair, the entire floor space in the automobile hall having been leased from the fair association for that purpose.

DIED SUDDENLY

Death Takes Esteemed Resident of East Jordan

Mrs. Oliva Glenn, a highly esteemed resident of East Jordan, died Tuesday evening of last week at her home in that city, after a short illness.

Deceased had but recently returned from an extended visit among relatives in Pennsylvania, and was taken ill a day or so after her arrival home.

Deceased was the widow of George Glenn, well known in banking circles and connected with the leading bank of East Jordan, and leaves two children. Her sudden death was a great shock to her many friends both in this city and East Jordan.

MANY AMUSING EXCUSES GIVEN

BY MEN TO ESCAPE DRAFT INTO ARMY

Man Arrested on Charge of Being Drunk Says He Would Make a Poor Soldier

Many and varied are the ruses resorted to by drafted men and relatives to escape military service, and while a majority of Charlevoix county men who filed exemption claims did so in good faith, a few attempted to deceive the local board with false claims. One man nearly escaped draft by false claim, but his position was discovered in time to disallow exemption.

"For heaven's sake, take him," was the reply of a brother of one of the drafted men who had claimed exemption on account of having a mother dependent upon him.

"Mother will be better off without him lying around the house all the time, and we will take care of her ourselves."

"I was arrested twice for being intoxicated," another man told a neighboring local board, taking advantage of the clause in the regulations which says that a man morally deficient shall not have the privilege of doing military service. The board decided that a man wasn't exactly a moral wreck of he drank occasionally, so he will have the opportunity to wear the uniform in which no man can obtain a drink.

Another amusing case happened in a southern county. When is a wife dependent? The board decided against a married man whose wife drives an automobile. The automobile isn't always a sign of independent riches, however, for another man with an automobile and two children was exempted because of dependents.

"A change of weather or climate affects me and I know I wouldn't be any good as a soldier," wrote another man whom the examining physicians passed as an almost perfect physical specimen. The man also claimed to have rheumatism and pleurisy, all of which escaped the trained eyes of the doctors. The board decided to try him out anyway.

A youth from the eastern part of the county is dead certain the farm will go broke if left to the tender mercies of his father and several brothers, so he appealed to the district board on the grounds that his work was necessary to the military establishment of the nation.

Another drafted man was terribly worried over the fact that the establishment where he worked would go to smash if he left. "It takes years to learn this line of work," he confided to the draft board.

Several who have but recently married ask exemption on grounds of having dependents. Several instances are also recorded where exemption is asked by those who claim their wage is needed for the care of dependent children. In these cases, the draft has forcibly brought to their minds a duty forgotten prior to the war scare.

These incidents were mainly outside of the regular business hours for the board when the men accosted them on the street or elsewhere. Nothing but cold, sober facts were considered by the board in session. No men were heard personally, and evidence was considered only by affidavit. Where doubt existed, the sheriff investigated and ascertained a true condition of affairs.

The little sidelights serve however, to illustrate the variety of the work the members of the draft board have taken upon themselves as a patriotic duty, with very little thanks from anyone, and only a word of commendation from the war department. Their greatest reward lies in a sense of having performed a task necessary to the conduct of the war and having sacrificed personal feelings and their own work in the performance of the task.

Red Cross Dance

A big dance will be given in the new Farm Products Co. building, just completed at Boyne City, for the benefit of the local Red Cross on Tuesday evening, September 11. The local Red Cross will have the event in charge and all proceeds will be used in Red Cross work. Residents of Charlevoix and vicinity are extended a special invitation to attend. See their announcement on another page.

BAD ROADS ARE MADE PASSABLE

FARMERS AND BUSINESS MEN WORK TOGETHER

United Effort on Part of Both Put Bad Stretch of Road Into Condition to Travel

In going through our exchanges we noticed the article reproduced below in the Boyne City Bee, which is of a nature that should be of interest to every Courier reader and good roads advocate. It's just an illustration of what co-operation between the farmer and business man will result in, not only on roads, but in every branch of business:

"A concrete example of what can be accomplished through co-operative efforts is a piece of road in Eveline township which has been put in very good condition. The stretch of road in question is about one and one quarter miles in length and the benefits of having it built affect many people.

"Those living in that section of the county were almost isolated from the markets of this city because of high hill over which the main road traveled and as a consequence much inconvenience was felt both by the farmers themselves who wished farmers themselves and friends who wished to visit their homes. The hill in question is what is known as the "Bunker Hill" and is located about a half a mile south of the Wright school house on the Boyne City-Ironton Road. The expense of cutting down the hill was thought to be so great that to tackle it with a small sum of money would be unwise so this new stretch of road was built from the Wright school due west for a little over a mile; thus reaching everyone who reside on the other side of the dreaded hill. The new route has no hills of any consequence along its right of way and farmers will now be enabled to haul a load of produce to this city without more than ordinary inconvenience.

"The following farmers subscribed funds toward the work: E. W. Lane, Fred Wrun, Jesse Wright, Ernest Loomis, Geo. Jarman, Ira McKee, Duncan McDonald, Frank Wangeman Arthur Bradford, Mark Staley, Samuel Currie, Arthur Thompson, Alex Currie, J. P. Siler, W. C. Howe, Clarence Johnson, Willis Thompson and Clarence Diekhout.

"The following business men of this city subscribed funds toward the project: S. C. Smith, Clarence Diekhout, H. A. Arnold, Boyne City Hdw. Co., People's Bank, I Nurko, A. E. Watson, C. W. Moore, J. H. Lewis, Herrick Bros., Wm. Sutton, W. Wolson, J. N. Saiegon, Kahler & Friend, James Rupert, Frank Kaden, W. A. Hysiop, Leo. Weiss, Al. Schwensen, Geo. Coplas, O. R. Perkins, M. S. Miles, W. W. Bniley and W. A. Sack.

"The funds raised by both the farmers and the business men were pooled and turned over to the Highway commissioner, Mr. Courier and with this he placed amount appropriated by the local board and the work was finished under his supervision."

"THE ELOPERS" NETS LODGE OVER $100.00

Performance Well Attended Each Night—Prizes Awarded

"The Elopers" at the Charlevoix theatre last Monday and Tuesday nights, given under the auspices of the local lodge of Odd Fellows, was well attended each night, and the sum of over $100 was netted for the benefit of a member of the Odd Fellow lodge who is ill.

The cast was composed principally of local talent and all performed their parts with credit.

Vocal numbers by Glenn Kirby Loren Hart and Swain Smith. were especially good, and the chorus performed some fancy drills which were very pleasing.

The first prize for the most popular boy was won by Kenneth Jacobs, the second being awarded to George Higman.

The prize for the most popular young lady was won by Miss Cleora Smith.

Much credit is due F. A. Ogden for his untiring efforts in training these 100 local people.

BOGART HOME SCENE OF BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY

Eighty-Five Guests Present at Happy Gathering

The home of Mr. and Mrs. James Bogart, of Bridge St., was the scene of a very happy gathering of friends, relatives and immediate family, Sunday, August 26, who congregated to celebrated the 44th wedding anniversary of Mr. Bogart's father and mother, and also the birthday of the mother.

Eighty-five guests were present and after dinner a group picture was taken of them on the lawn, after which they departed with many expressions of appreciation to their host and hostess for their excellent entertainment, and wishing the guests of honor many happy returns of the day.

DRAFTED MEN LEAVE FOR CAMP

NEW ORDERS CALL FOR BUT FIVE PER CENT.

One Per Cent to Leave on September 5 and One Each Day for Five Days Afterward

Definite orders concerning the entrainment of drafted men for Camp Custer were received by the local exemption board late last week, which changed materially the previous order given, which was published in these columns in our last issue. The new order calls for five per cent of Charlevoix county's quota, the men to leave on the first call which began on Wednesday (today.)

The new order was a stickler for the local board, as five per cent of 71 men would mean that the members sent, if the order was closely adhered to, would reach Camp Custer in a disembered condition which would render them unfit for service. The board, however, after due deliberation, dacided to send as near five per cent as possible in a bunch, the men to leave in time to report for duty on Wednesday, the 5th.

Had it been possible for the board to comply with the changed order, on Wednesday, September 5, one per cent of the quota would have been sent, and one per cent on each succeeding day for five days. On September 19, 40 per cent will leave, 40 per cent on October 3, and the remaining 15 per cent as soon thereafter as is practicable. This is the order all men from Charlevoix will be sent unless further changes in orders are received.

The men selected by the board to leave on the first order are Herbert Wakefield, Marion township, Leslie Evarts, Phelps, John Bird, Eveline township and James Dougherty, Boyne City. The serial or order number in which the men were called for examination will have no effect on the order in which they will be ordered to report. The war department has instructed the local board to select the men best fitted for organization work, and those who have had previous training or can cook will go first.

"This is the greatest single movement of troops in the history of the United States and the quick and effective handling of them will reflect great credit upon the men who have had the organization of the national army under their direction," says a bulletin from the provost marshal general.

MANY CHANGES IN GAME LAWS

WHICH BECAME EFFECTIVE FRIDAY, AUGUST 10

Season on Ruffed Grouse (Partridge) Now From October 1 to November 9—Other Changes

Beginning with August 10 many changes became effective in Michigan's game laws, and careful note of these changes should be made by all county hunters, as a complete knowledge of these statutes may save trouble during these days of vigilant game wardens. The four months season of every year which trout fishermen look upon as a veritable paradise closed on Saturday last. Practically all fishermen ceased activities on Friday, not being aware that the game law synopsis specifically states that the season opened on May 1, and closed on September 1 inclusive.

All in all it has not been a bad year for trout. The weather conditions of the earlier weeks of the summer were not ideal, but the true trout fisherman is willing to take the weather as it comes so long as he is assured that the streams are not being depleted.

An act passed by the last legislature that is hailed with delight by local fishermen, especially those among our summer friends, is the extension of the season on rainbow trout and steel head on Round and Pine Lakes. Credit can be given the local Road and Gun club for the passage of this bill, which will prolong the stay of many who spend a greater portion of their time in quest of the "big fellows" in Pine Lake. Following is the bill as passed:

Act No. 115

"To regulate the taking of rainbow trout in the waters of Round Lake and Pine Lake in Charlevoix county, Michigan, and to provide a penalty for the violation thereof.

"The People of the State of Michigan enact: Section 1. It shall be lawful for any person or persons to take and catch with hook and line, rainbow trout in the waters of Round Lake and Pine Lake, Charlevoix county, Michigan, from the first day of May until the fifteenth day of September in each year; said rainbow trout shall not be taken of a less length than seven inches and shall not be bought, sold or offered for sale. For the purpose of this so-called steelhead trout shall be classed as rainbow trout.

"Section 2. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall, on conviction, be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, together with the cost of prosecution, or committed to the county jail for a period of not less than ten days nor more than ninety days, or both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court."

Fewer complaints have been registered this year than during previous ones for violations of the law. Summer visitors who have attempted to fish without securing a license have been politely informed that it would be better to comply with the law, and if they should attempt to evade it, complaint would be made. But few instances have been related where a second warning was necessary. All seem to realize that the effort being made to restock the streams and lakes is largely for their benefit, and many have contributed liberally towards the expenses of the local association.

A resume of the statutes as approved and which will govern the taking of game during the present season follows:

Hereafter it shall be unlawful for camps composed of less than six persons to secure a permit to kill one deer for camp use during the deer hunting season. The fee for such permit is fifty cents for each person comprising the camp.

The open season for killing rabbits will be Oct. 1 to Feb. 1, both inclusive.

It will be unlawful for any person to have any kind of dog in the woods, hunting camp, logging camp, or clubhouse during the deer hunting season.

Blackbirds hereafter will be on the protected list.

Any cat pursuing or killing any game animal or bird protected by the laws of the state may be killed by the owners of land or any warden

What could furnish stronger evidence of the efficiency of any remedy than the test of time? Thousands of people testify that Doan's Kidney Pills have brought lasting results.

CROPS LOOKING FINE GENERALLY

BUT NEED FROM FOUR TO SIX WEEKS TO MATURE

Crop Raports From Northern Michigan Counties Giva Bright Outlook to Agriculturist

The condition of crops in northern Michigan counties are very gratifying, when ths serious set-back of last spring is taken into consideration. From practically every section comes ths report if frosts hold off from four to six weeks, a record crop of beans, potatoes, corn and buckwheat will ba the result. The late rains resulted in sucb a wondrous growtb that it will take a longer time for them to mature than during a normal year. Below are reports sent in to state headquarters by northern Michigan agricultural agents:

Emmet and Charlevoix Counties
Geo. A. Kilborn, Agent

Potatoes and beans looking fine generally, but need from four to six weeks yet to mature in most cases. Beans ars making sucb a rank growth that it is going to toke some time to get them to mature. Corn making good growth but can hardly overcome the sst back it had in the spring. Oats are a light crop generally, a few good pieces but very few. Considerable interest shown in Red Rock wbeat and Rosen rye. Will get quite a little sown this fall. Help pretty well supplied at present, but expect the demand to increase later in tbe bean and potato harvest. It was very cold yesterday and today and danger of frost if it clears up.

Cheboygan County
C. H. Knopf, Agent

Weather conditions of the past week have been fair. The several ahowers gave just enough moisture to insure fair growing conditions. The temperature, however, is somewhat cooler. The harvesting of ryc and wheat has been completed nnd now the oats are being harvested. This crop is very light on sandy soils, but good on the heavy soils. The corn crop still remains poor. The potato outlook is very satisfactory. There is a large acreage of this product and the crop promises well. The beans are late, but they ure doing well. Grasshoppers are continuing to do much damage in the county. The apple crop will be much less than last year. The farmers are now busy plowing and fitting their land for wheat. A quantity of the Red Rock variety is being sown.

Grand Treverse and Kalkaska
M. E. Duckles, Agent

Weather cool and abundance of rain. Prospects still good for a large yield of potatoes and beans though blight is evident in some bean fields. Oat harvest completed and average yield expected. Buckwheat is looking fine. Plowing for fall seeding in progress. Labor shortage in plain sight if farmer boys are refused exemption. We are a long way from help available from the larger cities, unsatisfactory as it is, and farmers are reluctant to guarantee transportation on any account.

Antrim, Otsego, Montmorency
R. D. Bailey, Agent

Rye harvest nearly finished. Oat harvest nearly ready, and begun in a few instances. Two good rains this week insure potatoes nnd bean crop and place corn beyond danger of dry weather, though few fields will have any ears. A good judge of beans in Antrim county told me two days ago that beans needed dry weather without frost until September 20, to be a fully developed crop in that county. Probably not enough machines equipped for threshing beans in my territory should tha crop have favorable growing conditions.

Lelanau and Benzia Counties
A. W. Mebert, Agent

This week closes with more rain than is really nsedsd in northern portion of district, interfsring with the oat harvest. Beans are looking fine on land that was ablo to stand tba drought. Pods ars forming, bat it will rsquire aome warm weather to bring them ta maturity. Corn bas made good progress, but it seems rather doubtful as to tha possibilitss of its getting ripe. Potatoes could not look any better. Plowing for wheat in progresa. Some threshing done.

Wexford County
Geo. E. Piper, Agent

General rain over the county. Improved local crop conditioa. Weather conditions axtremely cool. Early potatoes were badly damaged in most sections by drouth and yield poor. Late potato prospects are good. Wheat and rye mostly harvested, and oats are being cut. Some indications of blight and antbracnose dsveloping in beans. Farm labor situation is beginning to be acute.

Crawford, Ogemaw, Oscoda, and Roscommon Counties
Wm. F. Johnston, Agent

Crops looking the best I have ever seen them except for the fact that they are going to need a later fall to mature them than usual. If we get it we will have the largest crop in the history of this territory. If we ahould get hard frost early in September it will do untold damage.

Missaukee County
H. L. Barnum, Agent

Timely rains have kept our crops in splendid condition. Ws need, however, thres or four weeks more of good weather to mature beans and potatoes. Little hope for ripa corn here. An early frost will do untold damage and bankrupt many small farmers who plunged on potatoes and beans this spring when patriotic duty and hopes of a fair price were held up before them.

OLDEST MAP IN THE WORLD.

It Proves That Postal Routes Were Used In Abraham's Time.

Postal routes of 3,500 years ago, when the parcel post and the circulating library already had been in existence at least 800 years, are shown on the world's oldest map, a treasure that was discovered among the Nippur tablets in the museum of the University of Pennsylvania by Dr. Stephen Langdon, the orientalist from Oxford university. Dr. Langdon considered the map not only the oldest, but the best preserved that has come down from antiquity.

Dating before the time of Abraham, the map shows a comprehensive survey of the region about the temple of Nippur and indicates that the country was under a high state of intensive cultivation. Canals were numerous and served both for irrigation and transportation. They were the mail routes, and a tag has been found for a basket of "books" or literary tablets sent from the library of the Nippur temple to a town about six miles distant, Shuruppek. According to Babylonian tradition, Noah lived at this town and built the ark there. Tha tag was used about 2300 B. C.

Blueberry Bushes.

Under such favorable conditions as exist in ths vine barrens blueberry culture is to be classed as to the age of its first bearing not with ths slow fruiting apple orchard, but with the quick fruiting peach, with this important difference, however, that while the peach tree remains in vigorous fruiting condition for comparatively few years the blueberry bush with suitable pruning bids fair to last a man's lifetime and even longer.—National Geographic Magazine.

FAT CONTENT OF MILK.

Cannot Be Increased by Any Known System of Feeding.

Under normal conditions we would not expect a cow to vary in fat test, but cows starved or materially underfed are liable to produce milk somewhat lower in fat per cent than normal, says Hoard's Dairyman. Cows calving in fat condition will produce milk testing higher than normal for a short time, as they seem to convert a part of their body fat into milk fat. The test will, however, soon return to normal.

A change of feed or a greatsr amount of feed will often cause the cow to give a greater quantity of milk and so increase the total quantity of the butterfat produced, but her fat test will not be materially altered from the normal. As a general proposition it may be stated that the percentage of fat in a given cow's milk cannot be materially altered for any considerable time by the kind or amount of feed she receives. Not only is this judgment founded on experimental work, but reason alone should tell us that if the fat test of milk varied with every change of feed and care the life of the animal's young would be seriously jeopardized because they are dependent on this milk. Reason and experience both confirm the statement that fat cannot be fed into milk.

OLD GLORY

The Colors That Do Not Run

IS JAPAN LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

If suspicion of Japan's sinister motives prevails in the United States, it is due to Japan itself. Suspicion creates suspicion, and distrust, distrust. The eagerness with which Japan, on the slightest pretext, parades with a chip on its shoulder, as if challenging Uncle Sam, is responsible for the widespread feeling in this country regarding the sincerity of its professed friendly feeling for the United States. The American government sent a note to China expressing "regret over the dissentions which were tearing the country apart. It was at once cabled back to us that Japan resented the alleged failure of the United States to consult it before presenting its note and the Tokio Times semi-officially used this forceful language: "The Foreign Office officials must obtain from the United States an assurance that it will not repeat its action in interfering with the domestic affairs in China, completely ignoring the existence and position of Japan." It added that negotiations over the matter had already begun with the United States and that it was a matter of "great gravity," as it concerned the future of the empire.

Going still farther, the Tokio paper warned America that "In order to prevent future misunderstandings, Japan would seek America's recognition of Japan's special position in China." Other newspapers of Tokio resented the American note as a "glaring interference with Japan." They warned the Japanese government that it was probably "an epoch-making precursor of further activities." If these are the words of friendship and if they indicate a desire to maintain friendly relations, then the cable must have curiously garbled them.

RECKLESS MOTORISTS

When one complains of reckless driving of automobiles, many people take the easy going view that as 95 per cent of motorists are cautious drivers, it is not worth while to take severe measures. It is probably true that not more than five per cent could be called reckless. Yet five people can make things mighty uncomfortable and perilous for the other 95.

The number of accidents happening all the time is a warning. After one has been through a smash and has been laid up and had to pay hospital bills, the thing begins to look serious.

One trouble is that in most places the local police dislike to enforce the law strictly, being fearful of making enemies. It is all right arresting thieves and drunks who have no friends. To file a complaint against some socially influential persons, who never feels competent to drive until he has tucked away several high balls, is another proposition.

Yet public sentiment will support strict enforcement of the law. The people of any neighborhood know who the speeders are. Let them notify some official who will complain to the motor licensing authorities. The authorities should have detectives on the trail of all alleged speeders.

This done, it is easy to secure evidence. Once a man gets the scorching habit he keeps it up. He is not content with any beggarly 25 miles an hour, but with a whoop he opens his throttle, regardless of obstructions to view and other traffic. Fines do not influence him. Juries are too good natured to jail him. Let him lose his operator's license a year or two, and he will take notice and others like him also.

HERE'S TO THEM, WINNER OR LOSER

Michigan reads with pride the names of her boys who have won commissions at the officers' training camps by zealous application to their duties and their studies. It looks to them to go on as they have begun and to continue their ambitions and earnest devotion to their new profession that from the start now obtained they may rise to the dignities and honors of conspicuous position and return to their own people with a full share of the glories of war.

In the lists now published names are missed that it had been hoped would appear there. Those who have failed to secure the positions they sought are no doubt cast down and disheartened, but there is no need for depression. What they have learned these recent months is not taken from them. With the advantages of the concentrated training they have had they can enter into the struggle for promotion from the ranks with a handicap over the less fortunate and long before the opportunities of conflict are ended the initial set back may prove to be insignificant.

Michigan has confidence in all her boys who have taken the course of training. Winners and losers alike at this stage, it expects much of them. And it gives its heartiest good wishes and godspeed to them all.

THE SECOND BOND ISSUE

Buyers of the first liberty bonds were given to understand that if a later issue of bonds should carry a higher rate of interest, they would get the benefit of the increased rate. Now it is proposed to make the second issue at 4 1-2 per cent, but to make the bonds taxable, whereas the first bonds are non-taxable. In the consideration of the second issue we must not lose sight of the moral obligation of the government toward the purchasers of the first issue. If the second or any subsequent issue be made upon different conditions, the owners of the first issue bonds should have the option of exchanging their paper for the later issue, and, in any event, if the terms be altered the government should by some means maintain at par the bonds of the first issue.

Count Bernstorff, the former German ambassador who gave advance notice of the Lusitania atrocity, has been sent by his government as minister to Turkey. He will be able to teach the Turks some new methods of punishing enemies.

The struggle for Lens is the French method of trying to regulate the price of coal. There is the center of the coal bearing region of France and its possession means easier conditions of life and manufacturing.

EMMET COUNTY FAIR SEPTEMBER 11, 12, 13, 14

Expected Showing of Farm Produce Will be Best Ever

The big drive for the Emmet county fair opened last week and will continue until the fair is over the second week in September.

Secretary Thomas has placed advertising in every paper in the county and has posted advertising bills in all sections of Northern Michigan.

The races promise well. Fast horses are being groomed for the various events and there will be keen racing for the prize money in every event.

Cattle are expected to be in the best early fall condition seen in years. The pasture has been heavy all season and the stock on almost every farm is fat and ready for exhibition.

There will be all of the special features and many additional ones. Special entertainment events have been booked and there will be something doing every minute.

The fair dates are September 11, 12, 13 and 14. See their advertisement on page 9.

CARS COLLIDE

Two Stately Buicks Cut Up "Lizzie" Antics

Two Buick cars, one driven by F. E. Frazier and the other by James Saunders, tried to pass on the same side of the road with the result of a bent fender on Mr. Frazier's car. Mr. Frazier was coming toward the city at the turn near the beet sugar factory and Mr. Saunders was going west. Fortunately, both cars were going at a very moderate speed and no one was injured and no damage of consequence done to either car.

Walker leaves for conference on Tuesday morning. He gives an address before the conference on Wednesday and preaches in the evening on conference Sunday. The subject for next Sunday morning's sermon is "The Thorn as an Asset," in the evening, "The Warrant of Faith." Every one is invited.

Hod Beefsteak Supper

The Grocer's Association had a beefsteak supper at Pfister's restaurant Tuesday evening at 6:30. Nearly all of the grocers were present and a good time enjoyed. Some matters of business were discussed but for the most part the event was a social one.

Ironton Grange

All lady members of Ironton Grange are urged to be present at the next regular meeting of the grange as their presence is needed to complete plans for the plowing match, October 11. Be there and help to make a success of this big event.

This war has been fought almost entirely on Belgian, French and Russian soil. No German cities have been ruined, no German factories demolished, no German farms devastated, no German homes pilaged, no German women outraged, no German towns compelled to pay tribute, no German cathedrals or works of art destroyed or stolen, no German roads and bridges wrecked. And yet the Kaiser has the effrontery to expect America and the Allies to make peace on his terms.

AUTHORITIES SAY THAT HAZING MUST STOP

Many Students and Parents Back of Movement

Supt. Craig has had many favorable responses from his letter of recent date to the parents in reference to the hazing problem in the high school. Many of the best students have given their approval to a more friendly welcome of the freshmen, than has been given them in years past. Sheriff Novak has expressed his opinion on this situation and is determined that those who carry their fun off the school grounds, will meet the strong hand of the law.

Parents are also determined to see that their children shall be relieved of abuse that has been given them in the past, and are willing to carry the matter into court if necessary.

However, we are not expecting any trouble, for the majority of the students see the justice of the situation.

Farms Change Hands

During the first eight months of the present year, many real estate changes have taken place in the vicinity of Charlevoix, and have been noted in these columns. Two farms changes hands last week, as reported to us by William Williams: A. Mr. Cunningham of Boyne City has purchased what is known as Ed. Cook's old farm on the Norwood Road, and Albert Lohr in the same district has sold to W. M. Gringwick of Cheboygan.

Plowing Match at Ironton

Ironton Grange is planning on holding one of their semi-annual plowing matches on Thursday, October 11, dinner and supper at the hall and the plowing contests in nearby fields. Watch for further announcement in these columns.

Camp Meeting Closes

The Indian Camp meeting closed Sunday after a very wonderful ten days. The attendance increased with each day, and there was excellent speaking at each meeting by ministers from all parts of the county. On Sunday, the closing day, there were as many as 1,000 people on the grounds.

MONSTER FLYING BOAT DRIVES OVER CHARLEVOIX

Made Trip From Saginaw in Trifle Over Two Hours

Charlevoix and surrounding territory were startled Sunday afternoon by tha rapid fira axhaust of a powerful aeroplane engine which flew like a huge bird uver the city at a high rate of speed.

The great hawk-like machine proved to be the largest and most powerful hydroaeroplane to pay a visit to thia region. Three planes constituted tha lifting aurface and the engine was a very powerful one and drova the great half boat, half flying machina through the water and through tha air at a wonderful speed.

The craft was on its way from Saginaw to Spring Laka, near Grand Haven. It landed at Harbor Springs, staying there some two hours. From there it headed south along the lake shore for its destination.

W. W. Judson drove the car and had with him an Italian machinist. They made the trip from Saginaw to Harbor Springs in slightly over two hours, and expected to make Spring Lake in less than that time.

SAYS WAR GAME IS A STRENUOUS ONE

Thought Newspaper Game Stiff, but Not Compared to Camp Life

A card from F. V. Tyler, formerly of the Courier force but now stationed at Fort Sheridan, Illinois, states that, according to his opinion, the war game is rather a strenuous one. He says "it's everlasting drill and eternal scrub and polish in between times." Below is his idea of the game:

Fort Sheridan, Sept. 3.

"Friend Usher: "Well, my first week is up and seems to agree with me. I thought tho newspaper game was pretty stiff, but this has it beat four ways fon Sunday. Everlasting drill and eternal scrub and polish in between times. It's fine business though—good for us and I am beginning to enjoy it. But it sure does keep a fellow on the jump. My best to the boys."

NASH MOTORS CO.

Motor Cars and Trucks

We are glad to announce that we have secured the Nash Motor Company line of automobiles and trucks for Charlevoix and Emmet counties. We consider ourselves extremely fortunate in being able to offer the product of such an organization to the automobile and truck buyers of this territory.

Charles W. Nash needs no introduction to those familiar with the automobile business; what he accomplished for the General Motors Company needs no comment. It is admitted that he is the biggest man in the motor car industry today. And now he has purchased the entire 100 acre plant and equipment of the Thomas B. Jeffery Company at Kenosha, Wis., for the purpose of building a line of cars under his own name.

The announcement of the Nash Motors Company appeared in The Saturday Evening Post for August 25th. There are others to follow; watch for them.

A telephone call or a card will bring one of these wonderful cars for your inspection.

During the last two weeks of August the Courier management sent statements to all persons owing subscription accounts. Many have responded to these, but there still remains hundreds of dollars that is due us and should be paid. We are making a direct appeal to you to settle your indebtedness to us. In these days of high prices we must insist on subscriptions being paid promptly when due and as much as possible in advance. Look at the label on your paper. If it reads Sept. 16 you owe for one year. If it reads any date prior to Sept. 17, you are indebted to us for every month prior to Sept. 17, and it is your duty to settle it. It is no pleasure to us to be compelled to continually call your attention to arrearages, but as stated above, it takes a lot of money to do business and we need every dollar due us. Hence we insist on a settlement. tf.

LIGHTING QUESTION SOLVED

ENTIRE VILLAGE TO BE WELL LIGHTED

Ellsworth Light & Power Co. Organized Last Wednesday Night—Officers Named

After considering from every angle the matter of lights for the village of Ellsworth for some time past, a number of the business men and residents interested in the betterment of the town met at the Citizen's Bank last Wednesday night and organized a stock company to be known as the "Ellsworth Light & Power Co." The object being to make some arrangements whereby the town could be lighted, not the stores and residences alone, but the streets also.

Several projects were discussed and the one finally agreed upon is a system manufactured and sold by the Fairbanks-Morse Company of Chicago, and an order has been placed with this firm for a 15-h. p. kerosene burning engine and a 9 kilowatt generator and switchboard. This outfit is guaranteed to carry a load of 360 40-watt lamps, sufficient to light the town in good shape especially as more lamps can be installed owing to the facts that at no time are all lights in a residence or business place in use.

The plant will in all probability be installed and in running order within the next sixty days.

The project will be incorporated at once and directors elected, the first steps being taken at the meeting with the election of W. A. Boss, President, G. C. Townsend, Secretary, and Geo. Klooster, Treasurer.

It was decided to sell stock at $25 per share and a committee consisting of J. H. Elzinga, John Rubingh, Sr., and Geo. Klooster were appointed to look after this end of the concern.

Now is the time for any and all who are interested in the welfare of their home town to get busy. It is expected that the business men will be the heaviest investors, but all are welcome to become members if only by the purchase of one or more shares Ellsworth needs and will have lights, and this is a good legitimate business venture and a place to invest a little money where it is sure to at least pay the usual rate of interest, beside giving all the residents of town safe up-to-date lighting for their homes.

LOCAL "LIZZY" RUNS AMUCK IN GRAND RAPIDS

Noise of Street Cars and Fell Costumes Rattle Her

Although we do not wish to insinuate that our good friend and fellow citizen, M. Struik, would allow even his eyes to deviate from the straight and narrow path, it has been suggested that perhaps the prevailing styles of ladies skirts as worn in the city was responsible for the following taken from the Grand Rapids Herald date of September 1, 1917:

"FOUR IN NARROW ESCAPE—Four persons narrowly escaped serious injury Friday afternoon when Division avenue car No. 134 driven by motorman Alls, struck a car driven by M. Struik. Struik was driving west on Island street, E., and stopped at Division to let a northbound car pass. He started to cross the street when a southbound car hit his auto. The machine was badly damaged."

Those Empty Benches.

A meager theatrical audience has for a generation at least and probably for much longer been described by reporters as a "beggarly array of empty benches." Many may think the phrase Shakespearean, but the only expression in Shakespeare resembling it, one of which it is, of course, a parody, is the "beggarly account of empty boxes" that describes the poverty of the apothecary in "Romeo and Juliet." Just where and when it underwent its transformation seems wrapped in mystery.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Home of a Workingman.

The mechanic who eats underdone biscuits in a leaky kitchen presided over by a discontented wife is not a good investment for his employer. Bad homes are as great an enemy to industrial improvement as bad habits, says Ida M. Tarbell in "New Ideals in Business."

"Competition itself is forcing employers to consider the outside life of their employees," says Miss Tarbell. "The first and most important thing they must consider is the house the man lives in. A good workingman wants a home. He wants if possible to own his home. To have efficient, trustworthy and steady men you must have healthy and contented men. Men are neither healthy nor contented in wretched homes."

WATER PORTERS OF QUITO.

The Funny Way They Have in Delivering Their Liquid Load.

About a fountain in one of the principal squares of Quito, the capital of Ecuador, assemble every morning the city's aguadores. These water porters differ from the less energetic ones of some South American cities in carrying their jars upon their backs instead of on the backs of mules. Their earthen jars are deep, have a wide mouth and hold about forty pints.

The porter carries it on his shoulder fastened with leather straps. He never detaches himself from his jar either to fill it or to transfer its contents to that of his customer.

He turns his back to the fountain so that the jar comes under one of the jets of water and listens to the sound of the water in the jar, and his ear is so well trained that he always walks away at the exact moment when it is filled to the brim.

Arriving at the house of a customer, he goes to the household jar, makes a deep bow and disappears behind a torrent of water. Foreigners can never receive without laughing the visit of their aguador, the respectful little man who bows to one behind the cataract of water.—Los Angeles Times.

"You admit then," said the judge sternly, "that you asked this gentleman for a nickel?"

"Yes, your honor," replied the prisoner humbly. "I hadn't had a bite to eat for twenty-four hours, and"—

"Silence!" roared the judge. "You are a self convicted vagrant, and I sentence you to thirty days in the county jail.

"'Oh, that will be very easy,' Shackleton answered. 'As soon as we've crossed it, you know, a south wind will become a north one.'"

COUNTY FAIR SEPTEMBER 25-28

PLANS WELL UNDER WAY FOR BEST EVER

Liberal Prizes Offered for Agricultural Exhibits—Many Free Attraction

The Charlevoix County Fair which will be held September 25-6-7-8 of this year, promises to be one of the best ever held in this county.

There will not be one idle moment from the time the gates open Tuesday morning until the last visitor leaves the grounds Friday night.

Among the free attractions offered are DeBos Comedy Circus, consisting of educated ponies and dogs, trained monkeys, and "Dynamita" the bucking mule. "Dynamite" is just what his name implies and anyone who can remain on his back for three minutes will be given a cash priza.

Then there is Dare Devil Oliver and his diving dog. Dare Devil Oliver and his dog will perform wonderful, specacular feats of diving in a tank containing but 52 inches of water.

The races will be an excellent feature of the program and will include chariot races, running races, novelty races and free for all trot or pace, limited to horses owned in Charlevoix county. Races are to be run in three minutes or better or no pay. Keen competition is assured as the drivers are all out to win.

The judges of exhibits have been selected from competent, impartial men from outside of the county, and freight will be paid one way on all stock shipped in for exihibtion from either Charlevoix, Emmet or Antrim county.

A prize of $25 will be given the owner of the cow whose milk produces the greatest number of pounds of butter fat during the four days of the fair. A second prize of $15 will be given for the cow producing the next largest number of pounds of butter fat in the four days, and $10 for the third in line. The cows are to be kept on the fair grounds all of the time, the milking will be done at stated hours and under the supervision of Mr. Mather, and the milk will be tested publicly. Competing for these prizes does not bar a cow from being entered for other prizes.

An unusually large number of exhibits are assured as Charlevoix County has enormous orops, the finest fruit to be found anywhere, and stock, the equal of which, it would be hard to find.

WOMAN'S CLUB HOLD ENJOYABLE MEETING

Topics of Great Interest Discussed—Attendance Small

On September 3, the Woman's Club met at the home of Mrs. R. B. Armstrong. Considering the topic "Schools," there was a very small attendance.

Miss Graham, a pianist of merit, opened the program. This fine number was followed by a charming group of songs by Mrs. Constance Gaskin.

Miss Helen Armstrong interpreted Shumann and Longfellow in her beautiful dancing.

Mrs. Harsha, in charge of the literary part of the program, read a most informing paper on "Schools." Mrs. Miller, a guest of the hostess, and n prominent teacher of Saginaw, told of the new trades school and night school of her city.

A social cup of tea added to a most delightful afternoon. The chairman of each committee will be expected to give a report, or have some one present prepared to give one, of the work done this summer, and do not forget to be present October 1st.

Install New Lights

The Congregational church is to be congratulated on having such an active and interested Young People's Society. The Y. P. S. C. E. earned the means and have just caused beautiful new lights to be installed in the auditorium and Sunday school room, adding very much to the attractiveness of the church.

ROUND OAK STOVES

Built to Meet Your Personal Demands

No one had believed it possible to produce a heater that would burn hard coal, soft coal, and wood, perfectly, in the same stove, until the ROUND OAK FOLKS' produced their masterpiece—the "Double Burner." This vital step in advance, represents years of investigation and two generations of stove builders' efforts. In using soft coal the Double Hot Blast burns the smoke, soot and gas, producing a clear, bright flame, develops all the heat from the fuel, and the large radiating body of the heater delivers it direct into to your rooms, not out of the chimney. The patented Cone-Center Grate prevents the forming of clinkers, and the seamless, one-piece Ash Pit, and doors, ground on, give assurance of perfect control for life.

ROUND OAK IRON CHIEF

Conceded to be the one range that will burn with supreme success, coal, wood and gas, in the same range, without change of parts. Superior cooking and baking qualities, and a life time of efficient service, is the universal experience of users of this range of character.

Genuinely good—no wear out—no weakening after years of service, when this range is selected.

Let durability, economy and true worth determine your final choice in the selection of a range this fall.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

BY

John Randall Dunn, C. S.
Member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston Mass.

Entitled

Christian Science: The Supreme Discovery of the Age

John Randall Dunn, C. S., of Boston, Mass., a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship, delivered a lecture Friday evening, August 31, on "Christian Science: The Supreme Discovery of the Age," under the auspices of First Church of Christ, Scientist, of this city at Van Pelt Hall.

The lecturer was introduced by Dr. F. H. Wilkinson, who said in part: "The average non-Scientist regards Christian Science as something that claims to cure disease and make sick people well; and while it does all this, if you will listen to the testimonies given in our Wednesday evening meetings, you will note that although gratitude and appreciation is expressed for physical healing, more gratitude and appreciation is expressed for the spiritual uplift and for the better understanding of God and the Bible. Mrs. Eddy says in her book 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures,' 'It is our ignorance of God, the divine Principle, which produces apparent discord, and the right understanding of Him, restores harmony.' Christian Scientists are grateful beyond measure for this 'right understanding' that helps them to distinguish between the false and the true, between the real and the unreal."

Mr. Dunn said:

I have chosen for the subject of my remarks, "Christian Science: The Supreme Discovery of the Age." To some of you such classification may seem arbitrary, may appear even presumptuous. But a few moments' consideration of the great subject of Christian Science, its origin, its promise, and its fruitage, should not fail to convince the most skeptical that the revelation of this truth to the world may well be denominated The Supreme Discovery of The Age. And it is not an extravagant statement to say that it is vastly more important to the human family than the most notable achievements chronicled in the realm of natural science or human invention, for it concerns you and me more than the discovery of the thousand and one marvels which on all sides spring to our service at the touch of a button or the motion of a lever.

MATERIAL ACHIEVEMENT INADEQUATE

The world has made marvelous strides in the subjugation of the electric current, but has it made proportionate progress in the subjugation of animality, of hate, of greed? Geologists have laid bare the great mineral heart of the earth and from its depths have taken an ever-increasing store of treasure. But has human ingenuity developed any invention whereby fear and sorrow and discouragement may be extracted from the human heart? The efforts of a self-sacrificing body of medical men are bringing to light every conceivable material theory for the alleviation of human suffering. And yet the underlying cause of disease seems untouched, and frightened humanity is still confronted with a terrifying list of so-called incurable diseases. The human mind has been taxed to discover new luxuries, and new modes of amusement, to keep pace with mortals' fickle and ever-changing demands. But can it be said that its accomplishment along these lines has brought to the famished affections anything that truly satisfies, anything that brings abiding peace and happiness? Jesus said, "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" And we may well inquire what shall it profit us, if we reach the zenith of material achievement and have no peace, no satisfaction, no spirituality, and no health?

BREAKING OF GREATER SPIRITUAL LIGHT

It should not seem unreasonable to anticipate that an age which has brought forth such material marvels should also witness the breaking of greater spiritual light. To this thought, however, the average man comes with more or less caution. He willingly supplants his grandfather's candle with a modern incandescent lamp, unblushingly prefers an automobile to an ox-cart, and yet hesitates to accept the thought that he should expect advancement along the line of spiritual unfoldment as well as advancement in the realm material. He probably tells you that the religion of his fathers is good enough for him, and on this point he will find no argument with a Christian Scientist, for the religion of the fathers is good enough for him if by the fathers he means the early Christian fathers. The religion of Jesus and the early Christians, the religion which was evidenced by the healing of the sick, the stilling of the tempest, and the feeding of the multitude is indeed good enough for all mankind; in fact, it is the only panacea that is good enough for the aching heart of man. And it is to this self-same religion of Jesus that Christian Science, this great twentieth-century religious movement, turns the sick and weary of earth.

Christian Science is not a modern philosophy, not the "product of a fertile human brain." It is the revelation of the spiritual facts of being, the revelation of the truth about God and man taught by Jesus and the prophets, and it is all to be found in the Bible.

THE PATH MARKED BY JESUS

Have you ever seen in the mountains a "blazed" trail? A large piece of bark is cleft from a tree, and this operation is repeated on other trees at frequent intervals throughout the length of the trail. No matter how the trees may grow, the "blaze" remains, and so the trail is marked out for generations to come. When the world seemed immersed in the materialism of Jewish theology and Roman paganism, there appeared one whose mission was to point the way to spirituality, to deliverance and healing, and he "blazed" a trail to the Father's house so plain, so simple that a child could follow it. But in after centuries fast-growing weeds of ritual and human doctrines, of political power and ecclesiastical worldliness, obscured the trail, and mortals seemed content to follow the devious paths of creeds until in our time a woman-pilgrim came upon it and gave to her discovery the name Christian Science, or the Science of Christianity, and she rested not until she had written a book showing you and me how to find it. This guide book is called "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and is the text-book which Christian Scientists use in connection with their manual of life, the Bible.

THE MANNER OF TRUTH'S APPEARING

A Christian Scientist loves to tell the story of the discovery of Christian Science, for the manner of Truth's appearing to Mary Baker Eddy is the way of its appearing to every hungering and receptive heart.

There is nothing of the spectacular or the emotional in this coming of Truth. It is the natural, orderly unfolding in the receptive human consciousness of the facts of being, and it comes to us, as angels have ever come to troubled humanity; when "in the quiet sanctuary of earnest longings" (Science and Health, p. 15) we silence self and listen to the "still small voice" of spiritual sense.

MRS. EDDY'S HEALING

From her childhood Mrs. Eddy possessed a deeply religious nature. She was also a keen, analytical thinker, and long before the light of Christian Science dawned upon her thought she was an earnest seeker after truth. She sought it in medicine and in every theory advanced by the human mind at that time, but from no human source could she find help when, in the year 1866, she seemed near the door of death. Then it was she called for her Bible. Many another sufferer has done this, especially when the last enemy appears not far distant from the bed of pain. But Mary Baker Eddy did not open her Bible to find therein comforting passages relating to the after-life. She sought in its sacred pages the promise of healing, the promise of deliverance through reliance on divine power, and she turned to this verse in the ninth chapter of Matthew:

"And, behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed; and Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy; Son, be of good cheer, thy sins be forgiven thee."

Speaking of this experience in one of her writings, Mrs. Eddy says that as she read, the healing Truth dawned upon her sense, and she was enabled to rise from her supposed death-bed with a realization of health and strength. (See Miscellaneous Writings, p. 24.)

THE HEALING OF THE SICK OF THE PALSY

How many times has the Christian world read this simple story of the healing of the sick of the palsy and yet missed the vital import of its message! Let us consider the verses following that to which Mrs. Eddy turned:

"And, behold, certain of the scribes said within themselves, This man blasphemeth. And Jesus knowing their thoughts said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts, For whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee, or to say, Arise, and walk, But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (then saith he to the sick of the palsy,) Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house. And he arose, and departed to his house."

In the light of Mrs. Eddy's teachings we can discern plainly that the healing of sin and the healing of sickness were one and the same to the Master. Do you not believe that it is possible for a sinner to be instantaneously awakened from the nightmare of sin, if through the crust of his seared mentality can break a gleam of the sweetness of a more spiritual sense, Then you must concede that the sick man can be as speedily restored, and by the same method,—that is, if you accept Jesus statement in the passage from Matthew, "For whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and walk?"

THE DISCOVERER A WOMAN

Occasionally one hears this question asked, "Why should a woman have been the discoverer of an eternal truth?" The most effective answer to this query may be obtained in a book entitled, "The Life of Mary Baker Eddy" by Sibyl Wilbur. This work is an authentic record of Mrs. Eddy's career, and may be found in most public libraries and in every Christian Science free reading-room. When you read in the Life of Mrs. Eddy of her infinite patience during the trying and discouraging formative periods in the establishment of the cause of Christian Science, when you read of her persecutions, how she was ridiculed and reviled and urged to drop the "nonsense," as it was called, you will see that the leader of this movement had to be a woman, had to possess the instincts of the mother who clings to her child when all others forsake it; had to be endued with the fortitude and faith and perseverance which are the inherent possessions of a spiritually minded woman!

I shall not attempt to speak for any man other than myself, but I shall tell you very frankly why I did not discover Christian Science. It was because I did not know enough; was not possessed of sufficient spiritual-mindedness, because I did not search the Scriptures, yearn and pray for light as did this devout woman. In fact until beginning the study of Christian Science, it was not my habit to indulge in any deep thinking along religious lines. I accepted the inherited doctrinal teachings of my church very much as I accepted my given name and features, with no questioning and little analysis. You have heard probably of the old fisherman who was asked how he passed the time during the long winters when the frozen waters precluded the possibility of plying his trade. "Well," said he, "sometimes we set home and think, and sometimes we just set!" Is it not painfully true that this describes the mental status of many of us as regards the deep things of life? Christian Science bids us awake from this lethargy and accept the divine invitation chronicled in Isaiah, "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord."

HOW TO READ SCIENCE AND HEALTH

On the first page of the Preface of Science and Health we are told that "the time for thinkers has come." And as only those can understand this mighty revelation who think rightly or are willing to be taught so to do, it not infrequently follows that one hears this remark: "I have read Science and Health; in fact I have read it many times, but can get nothing from it." Yes, one might go to the sage-brush deserts of our western country and sow seed and then sow more seed, and never have a flower. If one is wise he will not sow until in some measure he has prepared the soil. There is irrigating to be done and the obstructive sage-bushes must be rooted out. Is it not possible, you who may have read and can find nothing, that your mental areas are cumbered with the stubborn growths of bias and criticism and self-satisfaction, or parched with the unlovely alkali of a purely material viewpoint?

Ruskin gives the following useful hints as to the proper way to arrive at the full meaning of a book. He says that we should study books; "First, with a desire to be taught by them, and to enter into their thoughts. To enter into theirs, observe; not to find your own expressed by them. If the person who wrote the book is not wiser than you, you need not read it; if he be, he will think differently from you in many respects. Very ready we are to say of a book: 'How good this is! that's exactly what I think.' But the right feeling is: 'How strange that is. I never thought of that before, and yet I see it is true; or if I do not now, I hope I shall some day.' But whether thus submissively or not, at least be sure that you go to the author to get at his meaning, not to find yours. Judge it afterwards, if you think yourself qualified to do so, but ascertain it first."

So let us approach this unique volume with an open heart and a sincere desire to be taught. And if we persist in its study, nothing can withhold from us the joy of its message.

To analyze or attempt even a resume of the seventeen chapters of Science and Health would require a period of time far greater than that allotted for this lecture. It is our purpose therefore to consider briefly but a few phases of Mrs. Eddy's discovery, especially those relating to the mission and teachings of Jesus and the possibility of repeating his healing work.

PRAYER

The chapter on Prayer, with which the text-book opens, is to the human mind surcharged with the murkiness of materiality, as a cooling breeze wafting gently away the oppression of a midsummer's day. Through its pages thought is quietly led from the finite material conception of God to the apprehension of Him as ever-present Love, as infinite unchanging good, who needs no reminders from frail mortality as to the proper conduct of His universe. True prayer is seen, therefore not as petition, nor the effort to change the all-knowing Mind, but as that hungering after righteousness that "habitual struggle to be always good" (Science and Health, p. 4), which brings human consciousness into relation with the divine and lifts thought to the realization that a loving Father has already done all things well.

ATONEMENT AND EUCHARIST

The second chapter of the text book is entitled Atonement and Eucharist, and in a clear, forceful statement deals with the great life-purpose of the Master. It has been said that this chapter may be ranked with the choicest of English prose classics. It breathes a spirit of deepest reverence and only he who clings to a material viewpoint and avoids the author's uplifted spiritual sense will quarrel with its statements.

The chapter opens with a trumpet-call to thinkers; to those who may be willing, temporarily at least, to put behind them preconceived theological opinions and to reason. The life and mission of Jesus the Christ are instantly taken from the realm of the mystical, the supernatural, and are shown to be intensely practical and divinely natural. Hear these clear, intelligible utterances: "Jesus of Nazareth taught and demonstrated man's oneness with the Father, and for this we owe him endless homage. His mission was both individual and collective. He did life's work aright not only in justice to himself, but in mercy to mortals,—to show them how to do theirs, but not to do it for them nor to relieve them of a single responsibility." "His mission was to reveal the Science of celestial being, to prove what God is and what He does for man." "The divinity of the Christ was made manifest in the humanity of Jesus" (Science and Health, pp. 18, 26, 25.)

IGNORANCE OF JESUS' MISSION

Without doabt, the great error of Cbristlan history lies in mankind's ignorance of Jesus' mission. Mrs. Eddy's spirituul interpretation' of his words and works reveals him as humanity's Way-shower, teacher and friend, rather than humanity's King. And when the race truly understands and demonstrates the facts involved in this interpretation, wars will be uaknown, sin, greed, and hate will vanish from the land, nnd the propbecy of Isaiah will be fulfilled: "And the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick."

The failure of perfunctory religion to measure up to the joyous stsndard af Jesus' Christianity was never more manifest than in the following incident.

A Christian Scienee practitioner was endeavoring to swaken to a larger, happier sense of things tha bowed-down thought af a wretched man who applied to him for help. The patient claimed to have been a Christian from childhood, but in his mlsery he could discern not one cheering ray.

"Try to cling to some comforting verse from Scripture," urged his practitioner, "or try ta sing some upllfting hymn as you go sbout your work."

The man left, promising to follow this advice as far as possible. The next day he returned sank listlessly into a chair, and said: "It's no use. I can find no help. I tried to sing as you suggested, but I found na comfort."

"What did you sing?" asked the other.

"One of our old religious songs," he replied. "The first line reads: 'Hark from the tombs a doleful sound!"

A lifetime of study of the words and works of Jesus had developed no more hopeful or helpful inspiration than "Hark! from the tombs a doleful sound."

CHRISTIANITY IS EXACT SCIENCE

Mrs. Eddy discovered that the religion taught by Jesus is as exact a science as is the science of numbers; that a Christian should be enabled to overcome sickness, fear, discouragement, poverty, or any other discord, with the same readiness and certainty of correct result that he takes to his problem in msthematics. Thus she has defined Christian Science "as the law of God, the law of good, interpreting and demonstrating the divine Principle and rule of universal harmony" (Rudimental Divine Scienee, p. 1.) And the applieation of this rule to the problems of everyday life immediately becomes the privilege and duty of the consistent follower of Jesus.

THE MISSION OF THE SAVIOUR

A story is told of a shipwrecked soilor who was cast upon a far-off isle lnhabited by semisavage tribes. One day he came upon a group of wrangling natives, and, inquiring the enuse of the commotion, learned that there was a certain supply of cocoanuts brought to the island to be equally distributed among these men, and no one could decide as to the number that each should have. The sailor counted the cocoanuts. He found one hundred. He counted the men. There were twenty five of them. Without hesitation he said, "Each will have four as his share." Imagine his surprise when the natives straightaway flung themselves at his feet, called him a god, and proceeded to worship him! Try os he might, he could not persuade the simple folk that his instantaneous culculation was the result of an understanding of the principle of mathematics and was in no sense miraculous.

To the bewildered and heartsick children of men came a Saviour. Understanding the great Principle of being, he solved their problems, bringing instantaneous answers in henlth and reformation nnd regeneration. He plainly said that of himself he did not the works, and that if they would but understand his mission and his Principle, they too could solve the problems as did he. But they called him a wonder-worker, worshipped his personality, and crucified him! Mrs. Eddy writes of the world's misunderstanding tbus:

"Not the spear nor the materinl eross wrung from his faithful lips the plointive ery, Eloi, Eloi, lama snbachthani? ("My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?") It wos the possible loss of something more important than buman life which moved him—the possible misapprehension of the sublimest influence of his career." (Science and Health, p. 50.)

And the human mind has continued it misapprehensian down through the centuries, with the result that we still seo thousands professing Christianity and worshiping the personality of Jesus, but following bim in practical demonstration af divine power—not at all!

THE SIGN OF A CHRISTIAN

Do you know that Jesus once pointed out a very simple method of discovering a true Christian? The directions are to be found in the sixteenth chapter of Mark, and follow immediately the well-known command to "preach the gospel to every creature." His words are:

"And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

Christians, are we measuring up to this standard? Suppose we nre traveling in a distant land, and a would-be convert says to us, "Are you a Christian?" And upon receiving an affirmative reply, suppose he next says: "Oh, how glad I am that you came! I see by your Bible that signs are to follow the trus believers. Now I am possessed by a veritable devil. I am a victim of the opium habit. Do, I beg of you, through your beautiful religion, cast this devil out!" What would we say? Would we recommend a well-known sanitarium famed for its treatment of the drug habit, or what would we do? Suppose he then says: "My old mother is very ill. I see by your book that a Christian understanding the great power taught by Jesus can cause her to recover. Come, I pray you, and heal her!" What would we now soy? Would we suggest a chnnge of doctors, or recommend a new diet or climate—or would we undertake to put our faith to the test? And if by chance we say to this hungering thought: "Ah, my dear sir, that was not meant for our time! The days of healing are past"—do not be surprised if he closes the Bible and hands it back with this statement: "Very well! I have a religion to die by that is older than yours!"

THE POWER IMPARTED BY JESUS

What was the power which Jesus imparted first to the twelve and later to the seventy disciples? It could not have been a mysterious magnetic current flowing from the personality of Jesus to those about him, as some would aver, for, as has been stated, Jesus insisted that of himself he could do nothing, and that it was the Father dwelling in him that did the works. Again, in the well-known passage from the fourteenth chapter of John, he states thot his mighty works shall be done by those who believe on him, or in other words those who understand his great mission and the divine Principle thereof. Thus we see that the power given by Jesus to his followers was a spiritual understanding, just as a teacher in school gives his pupils power to solve problems in arithmetic when he shows them the rule and principle basing arithmetic. But apparently no definite rule was left by Jesus whereby this vital teaching was discernible. Here let us offer up psalms of thanksgiving! In this wonderful volume, Science and Health, has been revealed that treasure which to the unlightened sense remained lost in the pages of the Bible for centuries.

"THE TRUTH SHALL MAKE YOU FREE"

Jesus said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." The all-important question, therefore, is What is truth? What is the truth which Jesus taught, the understanding of which will enable us to reinstate primitive Christianity with signs and with power? Answering this stupendous question, Mrs. Eddy directs thought to the first chapter of Genesis.

The truth revealed in the opening chapter of the Bible, like all great things, is infinitely simple. Herein was see a record of creation depicting successive steps of unfoldment, symbolized by the appearing of light, the heavens, the earth, the growing things upon the earth, the heavenly bodies, the fowl of the air, the fish of the sea, the creatures that move upon the earth, and lastly, the highest creation, man. He is made in the image and likeness of God and is given dominion over all the earth. At the close of each step in the progression we read: "And God saw that it was good." Then at the conclusion of the chapter appears that mighty statement basing all Truth, "And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good." The second chapter opens with this statement: "Thus the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the host of them." Could words be more plain? Crention is finished, and it is good, yea, "very good." No evil has been created, no sickness, sin, or death. Man is spiritual, made in the image and likeness of God, and so is not subject to frailty, or error, but is endued with dominion and power.

REMARKABLE DISCOVERY OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Now comes the remarkable nnd revolutionary discovery af Christian Science. The second chapter of Genesis, contnining the Adam and Eve narrative, is seen to be a new and different record of crention, separate and distinct from that covered in the preceeding chapter. Heretofore, religionists have regarded the record of the creation of Adam from the dust, and of Eve from Adam's side, as an amplification of that statement in the first chapter: "So God created man in his own image." But revelution plainly shows the error of this. To begin with, the two records are distinctly separate documents, called the Elohistic and Jehovistic, because in the first chapter the Creator is called Elohim, God, and in the second, Jehovah, or Lord God, the Jewish tribal name for Deity.

The first record is positively closed. God's work is done. His creation is good and eternal harmony reigns. Do we find that God ever changed his perfect handiwork? Is there any record of His having created evil? No. Then whence came the evil, the sickness, and the sorrow, the discord, and imperfections, which are visible on all sides? The sixth verse of the second chapter solves the problem. We read: "But there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground."

THE MIST

What does a mist do? Does it destroy, or demolish, or does it anly obscure? Is it not possible then that the universe today is as perfect as "when the morning stars sang together," and that its perfection is hid from aur gaze by reason of some obscuring sense—some "mystification," as Science and Health put it? (p. 523.) Material man with his sinful tendencies comes not upon the scene until the mist appears. It follows, therefore, that the evils and inharmonies which cannot belong to the kingdom of good must be the product of the realm of mystification. Mystification is ever the polar opposite of understanding. Therefore mystification means just this: ignorance. Ignnrance of the facts of creation; ignorance of spiritual sense. This is the mist that seems to go up from the earth and hide from our sight the man and the universe made and seen by God; and from this ignorance springs the material view of crestion which depicts man as sick and sinning, and the universe as discordant nnd destructible.

GARDEN OF EDEN ALLEGORY

The Adam and Eve narrative, symbollzing as it does materiality, sin, and sin's unhappy consequences, is called in the text-book only "an object lesson for the human mind" (Science and Health, p. 214,) in which you and I are shown the sad results of a departure from the spiritual sense of things recorded in the first chapter. That the story is a fable, is self-evident. The references to the "tree of life" in the garden, and the "tree of knowledge af good nnd evil, stamp it as allegory. Then, too, the introduction of a talking serpent further indicates fiction.

MAN'S TRUE ANCESTRY

How has the suffering human family been imposed upon! Handed down from generation to generation has been the mischevious fallacy that this second record of creation is an historicnl fact! How have we been deceived into calling ourselves descendents of these fictitious beings made of mist and dust, and prone to every known mortal weakness! The mission of Jesus was to acquaint humanity with man's true heritage. His teaching prove that the first chapter of Genesis, and not the second, contains the truth of being and sets forth man's real origin.

"YE MUST BE BORN AGAIN"

One of the first of Jesus' teachings was this: "Except a man be born agsin, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Can there be an atom of doubt as to the meaning of this passage? If the material, the Adam sense of things, constitutes God's creation, why should the Master have declared that in order to see this creation or kingdom, a man must be born again—in other words, must gain a radically different point of view?

Paul makes it plain that this material, fleshly sense of things is not of God's creating, when he writes in Romans: "They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God." And Jesus drives home this fact with even greater clearness when he says, speaking of material man, "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do."

EVIL NOT POWER

Now we have learned that the Adam-view, or material concept, is a product of the mist, or mystification which ever goes up from the earth, from material premises, and we have further endeavored to show the mist to be synonymous with ignorance. Thus we arrive at another discovery teeming with good for the blind and fettered of earth. The devil—that terrifying element of the whole world's religious belief, that monstrous figment of the false teaching of the ages, against whose seeming power the sons of men have vainly striven, and who apparently has been able to out wit even the Most High—this devil is ignorance, nothing more! Is ignorance a great forbidding monstrosity, with horns, hoofs, and a spear? Is it a mighty presence, an entity which has being and action and power? Or is it only an absence—the absence of knowing? What peace may be ours when we banish the belief that there is power in evil! With what courage can we face our problems when we realize that no subtle, destructive force is pitted against us, and that the only power evil can seem to have is that which we ourselves bestow upon it.

This truth is stated with great clearness in a letter which Mrs. Eddy once wrote to a friend, which was quoted in The Christian Science Journal of August, 1912, in an article entitled "No Evil Power."

"Did you but know the sublimity of your hope; the infinite capacity of your being; the grandeur of your outlook, you would let error kill itself. Error comes to you for life and you give it all the life it has."

HOW JESUS HEALED THE SICK

We are now ready to consider one of the most important poragraphs in Science and Health, for it may be said to contain the "pearl of great price." It tells us in the simplest of words how Jesus healed the sick.

"Jesus beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appeared to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick. Thus Jesus taught that the kingdom of God is intnct, universnl, and that man is pure and holy." (Science and Health, p. 476.)

This then must have been the understanding which Jesus imparted to his disciples, which enabled them to duplicate his wonderful healing work. This is the understanding which today is enabling Christian Scientists to confront, undismayed, the appearance of disease and vice, and to rescue the unfortunates in bondage thereto.

SENSE-TESTIMONY UNRELIABLE

At this point some of you may ask, "Does this mean that I am not to accept as real the evidence of my senses when I see before me sickness or sin, or discord?" It means just that, just that! And should we not rejoice in such a revelation? If the material senses report the truth of being, there is no good or just God, no law or Principle in the universe; for on all sides we see injustice, lawlessness, disease, disturbances of nature, hate, poverty, and death—a sorry picture indeed! Do we want these evils to be true? If you find yourself in the throes of a nightmare what greater joy and peace can come than the awakening consciousness that after all it was only a dream.

Was ever a message more vital to a stricken individual, nation or race, than the understanding brought by Christian Science, that materiality with its host of discords and ills is but another name for the Adam-dream and that it is possible for suffering mortals to awaken therefrom? We may waken from a dream, but we can never waken from a fact! The night of materialism has been long, and the sleep has been deep and troubled; but thanks be to God, we are slowly awakening! At least, the dream is losing for us its terror, and, hearing the voice of Truth cheerily bidding us to be not afraid, and to judge not according to the appearance, we are enabled more nnd more to look past the shadows, past the seeming, to the Kingdom of Mind, where all is harmony and all is law.

You are not asked to take the word of Christian Scientists for all this. You are urged rather to take the text-book, nnd study it with open heart and teachable thought, and prove for yourself the truth of these statements.

EVIL UNREAL

The following illustration may help to throw more light on the Christian Scientist's attitude toward sin and disease. Before studying Christian Science, and while a member of an orthodox church, I was asked by a friend to "use my religion" as he expressed it, in the effort to reclaim a brother seemingly enslaved by drink. I accepted the commission, and proceeded to "use my religion." I found my subject in a most repentant mood, and he agreed almost tearfully with my ringing condemnation of his evil ways. I asked him if he did not realize the depths to which he had fallen, how wicked he was, and how terrible was that evil power to which he had submitted. Yes, he realized it all, but evil had been made so real, and so powerful to him that even the hope of divine deliverance, with which I finally endeavored to inspire him, was of no avail, and he sank even deeper in the mire of sin.

Let us now consider another picture: A slave to false appetite is brought to one endeavoring to be a scientific Christian, or a Christian Scientist. The Scientist sees before him no bad man, no perpetrator of sin, but a victim of sin. He sees behind the fleshly appearance the man of God's creating, who is not a sinner, who has no pleasure in sin and no sinful desires, but who is eternally pure and free. He therefore bids the sufferer to awaken from this mesmerism. He shows him that the bondage which to him has seemed real and powerful, is a lie; for, as Jesus said, there is no truth in the devil, or evil; and he is assured that God has given man dominion over all error. And in thousands upon thousands of cases where these good tidings have been preached, have the victims of wrong desire risen in the glory of a new found manhood. And through the same process, in numberless instances, has the sick man been awakened from his nightmare of invalidism and pain. Thus we see that a Christian Scientist does not ignore sin and disease, but by understanding their unreality and the spiritual truth of being, he heals them.

GOD'S WORD NEVER FAILS

"But," say you, "Christian Science treatment is not always effectual." Ah, but it is, it is! A Christian Science treatment consists of thinking God's thoughts, seeing creation as God sees it; and a God-invested thought never fails! Suppose you are confronted with the task of breaking a great rock. You seize a hammer and vigorously start your work. Blow after blow descends, and you note with some discouragement that even the surface of the rock has not been cracked. A friend comes to your assistance. He hammers sturdily, but apparently makes no headway. Again you are led to resume the work and keeping steadily at it you at last see the rock reduced to small pieces. Which blow did it? The last? No, every one of them did the work. Not one was wasted, not one failed.

The work of Christian Science is the work of eternity. It is spiritual education. During this process of edueation some students pass from our sight. Did God's work fail? Were the blows of truth on the rock of error in vain? No, a thousand times no! Ask those who fought side by side with them in the battle. They will tell you of the victories won, of the peace realized, of the pain subdued, and the attainment of that spiritual vision of Life eternal which enabled them all to say, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" Mrs. Eddy writes in Science and Health (p. 348):

"I have never supposed the world would immediately witness the full fruitage of Christian Science, or that sin, disease, and death would not be believed for an indefinite time; but this I do aver, that, as a result of teaching Christian Science, ethics and temperance have received an impulse, health has been restored, and longevity increased. If such are the present fruits, what will the harvest be, when this Science is more generally understood?"

THE REWARD OF PATIENT PERSISTENCE

Some one may say: "I have worked and studied, but my healing seems so slow." Yes, some rocks are harder to break than others, and much patience and perseverance are necessary in a majority of cases in order to win the day. But, oh, my friends, what dividends are paid in return for an earnest, patient seeking after Truth! How self is subdued and universal love enthroned! How much purer becomes desire, how much dearer the goal of spiritual sense! "Let us not be weary in well doing," exclaimed the apostle Paul, "for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

Let us attack our problems each day as though we had never seen them before, putting behind us the memories of yesterday's struggle. Let us realize that as our understanding of Science grows, we are able to speak to evil with more and more authority, consequently day by day are being equipped to be more efficient Christian warriors. Let us claim the joy and peace which is your heritage and mine, today and here and now! Let us not be unmindful of the stupendous fact that Christian Science, in teaching the divinity of the Christ, teaches the divinity of man! Beloved now are we the sons of God."

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENTIST A PATRIOT

Thus the man who has felt the healing, liberating touch of Truth as taught in Christion Science is sure to feel an ever-increasing sense of gratitude for and loyalty to this great Nation. For because of the freedom guaranteed by its Constitution, the birth and development of this mighty cause were made possible. In fact, the very coming of Christian Science, which proclaims man's birthright of freedom and dominion, was foreshadowed in that great protest against tyranny, the Declaration of Independence, when it was written. "We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endawed by their creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty nnd the pursuit of happiness."

And it seems especially fitting that I should read tonight words named by our revered leader nearly twenty years ago, when the United States was at war with Spain—words which have a peculiar prophetic significance for the troublous times in which we live:

"In reply to your question, 'Should difficulties between the United States and Spain be settled peacefully by statesmanship and diplomacy in a way honorable and satisfactory to both nations?' I will say I can see no other way of settling difficulties between individuals and nations than by means of their wholesome tribunals, equitable laws, and sound, well-kept treaties . . . But if our nation's rights or honor were seized, every citizen would be a soldier and woman would be armed with power girt for the hour.

"To coincide with God's government is the proper incentiva to the action of all nations. If His purpose for peace is to be subserved by the battle's plan or by the intervention of the United States, so that the Cubans may learn to make war no more, this means and end will be accomplished."

Hear then the benediction with which she concludes—this great statement of truth which is far the "healing of the nations":

"The government of divine Love is supreme. Love rules the universe, and its edict hath gone forth: 'Thou shalt hove no other gods before me,' and 'Love thy neighbor as thyself.' Let us have the molecule of faith that removes mountains,—faith armed with the understanding of Love, as in divine Science where right reigneth. The ravered President and Congress of aur favored land are in God's hands," (The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany, pp. 277-278.)

So the whole message of Christinn Science, its message to this sad world, to you nnd to me, may be summed up in these two verses from our hymnal:

God made all His crentures free;
Life itself is liberty;
God ordained no other bands
Than united hearts nnd hands.
So shall all our slavery cease,
All God's children dwell in peace,
And the new-born earth record
Love, and Love alone, is Lord.
(Christian Science hymnal, p. 159.)

DARKEN GRAY HAIR, LOOK YOUNG, PRETTY

Sage Tea and Sulphur Darkens So Naturally that Nobody can tell.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart color and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

HEAVY MEAT EATERS HAVE SLOW KIDNEYS

Eat less meat If you feel Backachy or have bladder trouble—Take glass of Salts.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

HEART of the SUNSET

By REX BEACH

Author of "The Spoilers," "The Iron Trail," "The Silver Horde," Etc.

He extended his arms, and Alaire saw that his olive features were distorted with emotion; that his hands, his whole thin, high-strung body were shaking uncontrollably.

She could summon no coherent words.

"You believed I was a hawk and would seize you, eh?" he queried. "Is that why you continue to shrink? Well, let me tell you something, if my tongue will frame the thoughts in my mind. My passion is so deep and so sacred that I would not be content with less than all of you. I must have you all, and so I wait, trembling. I say this so badly that I doubt if you understand. Listen, then: to possess you by force would be—well, as if I sacked a cathedral of its golden images and expected to gain heaven by clutching the cross in my arms. Senora, in you I see the priceless jewel of my love, which I shall wear to dazzle the world, and without which I shall destroy myself. Now let me tell you what I can offer you, what setting I can build for this treasure. Marriage with Luis Longorio—"

Alaire could not control a start.

As if quickened by his intensity, the man read her thought. "You did not imagine that I offered you anything less?".

"What was I to think? Your reputation—"

"Blood of my heart!" breathed the general. "So! That is what you meant a moment ago. That is why you refuse my embraces. No, no! Other women have feared me, and I have laughed in their hair as they tore at my arms, but you—you will be my wife, and all Mexico shall bow at your feet." He checked her denial with a gesture. "Wait until I tell you the vision I have seen during these days of despair. I see Mexico made whole by my hands; a land of peace and plenty; a people with one name upon their lips—the name of Longorio the Deliverer; and you as the first lady of them all. You know me for a man of tremendous ability in every line. Well, I know myself, too. I have measured myself carefully, and I have no weakness. There is no other like me. Pancho Gomez? Bah! He is a red-handed bandit of no culture. Candelaria, his chief? The idol of the ignorant and a dreamer of no force. Potosi? He is president today, but what of tomorrow? Those who surround him are weaklings, and he stumbles toward oblivion. Who will succeed him? Who will issue from the coming struggle as the dominant figure of Mexico? Who but that military genius who checks the Yankee hordes and saves the fatherland? I am he. Fate points the path of glory and I am her man of destiny. You see, then, what I bring you—power, position, riches. Riches? Caramba! Wait until my hands are in the treasury. I will load you with gold and jewels, and I will make you the richest woman in the world. Senora, I offer you dominion. I offer you the president's palace and Chapultepec. And with all that, I offer you such passionate love as no woman of history ever possessed."

He paused, spent by the force of his own intensity; it was plain that he expected an immediate surrender.

Alaire's lips parted in the faintest of mocking smiles. "You have great confidence in yourself," she said.

"Yes. I know myself as no one knows me."

"Why do you think I care for you?"

Longorio's eyes opened. His expression plainly showed that he could not imagine any woman in her senses failing to adore him.

"Don't you take much for granted?" Alaire insisted.

The Mexican shook his head. Then his face lightened. "Ah! Now I see. Your modesty forbids you to acknowledge your love—is that it? Well, I know that you admire me, for I can see it. All women admire me, and they all end by loving me." His chest arched imperceptibly; with a slender finger he delicately smoothed his black eyebrows. Alaire felt a wild impulse to laugh, but was glad she had subdued it when he continued. "I am impetuous, but impetuosity has made me what I am. I act, and then mold fate to suit my own ends. Opportunity has delivered to me my heart's desire, and I will not be cheated out of it. Among the men I brought with me to La Feria is a priest. He is dirty, for I caught him as he was fleeing toward the border; but he is a priest, and he will marry us tonight."

Alaire managed to gasp, "Surely you are not in earnest."

"Indeed I am! That is why I insisted that you dine with me this evening. I cannot waste more time here, for necessity calls me away. You shall go as my wife."

"Do you think I would remarry on the very day I find myself a widow?"

"The world will never know."

"You dare to say that!" Her tone was one of disgust, of finality. "I would rather die than submit to so much. It is horrible."

"You are still a little hysterical, and you exaggerate. I, I had more time, I could afford to wait." He ogled her with his luminous gaze. "I would let you play with me to your heart's content and exercise your power until you tired and were ready to surrender."

Alaire raised her head proudly, her nostrils dilated, her eyes ablaze with hostility. "This is very humiliating, but you force me to tell you that I hate you."

Longorio was incredulous rather than offended. He drew himself up to his full height and smiled, saying: "That is impossible." Then, ignoring her impatience: "Come! You cannot deceive me. The priest is waiting."

When Alaire spoke next, it was with an expression and with a tone of such loathing that his yellow face paled. "Your conceit is insufferable," she breathed.

After a brief struggle with himself, the Mexican cried, hoarsely: "I will not be refused. You wish me to tame you, eh? Good! You have found your master. Make your choice, then. Which shall it be, surrender or—compulsion?"

"So! You have been lying, as I thought. Compulsion! Now the real Longorio speaks."

He flung up his hands as if to ward off her fury. "No! Have I not made myself clear? I shall embrace you only with the arms of a husband, for this is not the passion of a moment, but of a lifetime, and I have myself to consider. The wife of Mexico's next president must be above reproach; there must be no scandal, no secrets hidden away for enemies to unearth. She must stand before the people as a perfect woman; she must lend prestige to his name. When I speak of compulsion, then, I mean the right of a husband—"

Alaire uttered an exclamation of disgust and turned away, but he intercepted her, saying: "You cannot hold me at bay. It is destiny. You shall be mine tonight. Think a moment! We are alone in the heart of a country lacking in every law but mine. Your friends do not know where you are, and, even if they knew, they could not help you. Your nation's protest would avail nothing. Outside of these walls are enemies who will not let you leave this house except under the protection of my name."

"Then I shall never leave it," she told him.

For the first time Longorio spoke roughly: "I lose patience. In God's name have I not waited long enough? My strength is gone." Impulsively he half encircled her with his thin arms, but she seemed armored with ice, and he dropped them. She could hear him grind his teeth. "I dare not lay hands upon you," he chattered. "Angel of my dreams, I am faint with longing. To love you and yet to be denied; to feel myself aflame and yet to see you cold; to be baited at the very doors of Paradise! What torture!"

The fellow's self-control in the midst of his frenzy frightened Alaire more than did his wildest avowals; it was in something of a panic that she said:

"One moment you tell me I am safe, the next you threaten me. You say I am free, and yet you coerce me. Prove your love. Let me go—"

"No! No! I shall call the priest."

Longorio turned toward the door, but half-way across the floor he was halted by a woman's shriek which issued from somewhere inside the house. It was repeated. There was an outburst in a masculine voice, then the patter of footsteps approaching down the tiled hallway. Dolores burst into her mistress' presence, her face blanched, her hair disordered. She flung herself into Alaire's arms, crying:

"Senora! Save me! God's curse on the ruffian. Oh—"

"Dolores!" Alaire exclaimed. "What has happened?"

Longorio demanded, irritably: "Yes. Why are you yelling like this?"

"A man— See! One of those dirty peladors. Look where he tore my dress! I warned him, but he was like a tiger. Benito will kill him when he learns—"

"Calm yourself. Speak sensibly. Tell me what happened."

"One of those miserable soldiers who came today—pig!" Dolores was shaking, her voice was shrill. "He followed me about like a cat, purring and grinning and saying the most horrible things. Just now, when I went to your room, he was waiting in the darkness, and he seized me. My money!"

"A soldier? One of my men?" Longorio was incredulous.

Alaire turned upon him with a blazing anger in her face. "Is this more of your protection?" she stormed. "I give you and your men the freedom of my ranch, and you insult me while they rob my women."

He ignored her accusation, inquiring of the elder woman, "Who was the fellow?"

"How do I know," Dolores sobbed. "He is a—a thick, black fellow with a scar on his lip, like a saari."

"Felipe!"

"Yes, Felipe! I believe they called him that."

Longorio strode to the end of the living room, flung open the wooden shutters of a window, and, leaning far out, whistled shrilly on his fingers.

"Olga! Teulente! Ho, you fellows!" he shouted.

From the darkness a voice answered; a man, evidently on guard, came running.

"Call old Pancho," the general directed. "Tell him to bring me black Felipe, the fellow with the torn lip. Quick!"

"Yes, general," came the voice; then the metallic rattle of spurs and accoutrements as the sentry trotted away.

Dolores had completely broken down now, and Alaire was trying to comfort her. Their guest remained by the window, frowning. After a time there sounded a murmur of voices, then a shuffling of feet in the hall; Alaire's friend, the old lieutenant, appeared in the doorway, saluting. Behind him were several others.

"Here is Felipe," he announced.

"Bring him in."

A sullen, frowning man in soiled uniform was pushed forward, and Dolores hid her face against her mistress' shoulder.

"Is this the fellow?" Longorio inquired.

Dolores nodded.

"Well, what have you to say for yourself?" The general transfixed his trooper with a stare; then, as the latter seconed hereft of his voice, "Why did you enter this house?"

Felipe moistened his scarred lips. "That woman has rings of gold. She's not so old, either, when you come to look at her." He grinned at his comrades, who had crowded in behind old Pancho.

"Well, What Have You to Say for Yourself?"

"So! Let us go outside and learn more about this." Longorio waved his men before him, and followed them out of the room and down the hall and into the night.

When a moment or two had dragged past, Dolores quavered, "What are they going to do with him?"

"I don't know. Anyhow, you need not fear—"

There sounded the report of a gunshot, deadened indeed by the thick adobe walls of the house, yet sudden and loud enough to startle the women.

When Longorio reappeared, he found Alaire standing stiff and white against the wall, with Dolores kneeling, her face still buried in her mistress' gown.

"Give yourself no concern," he told them, quickly. "I beg a thousand pardons for Felipe. Henceforth no one will molest you."

"Was that a—shot?" Alaire inquired faintly.

"Yes. It is all settled."

"You killed him?"

The general nodded. "Purely for the sake of discipline—one has to be firm. Now your woman is badly frightened. Send her away so that we may reach an understanding."

"Oh—h! This is frightful," Alaire gasped. "I can't talk to you. Go—Let me go."

The man pondered for an instant. "Perhaps that would be better," he agreed reluctantly, "for I see you, too, are unstrung. Very well! My affairs will have to wait. Take a few hours to think over what I have told you. When you have slept you will feel differently about me. You will meet me with a smile, eh?" He beamed hopefully.

"Sleep! You expect me to sleep?"

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamful sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. It is free from alcohol.

We Have Always Wanted To Handle the BEST Manure Spreader---And We've Got It.

As all our friends know, we have been engaged in the farm implement business right here for a long time. We've made it a rule to handle only thoroughly reliable goods. No matter how tempting a maker's proposition is, we leave it alone, unless we are convinced that the article will be of real value to our customers.

Now please keep this rule of ours in mind and then come in and see the

NEW IDEA Registered U.S. Pat. Off.

Manure Spreader

First Wide-Spreading Machine Ever Built.

The fact that we have this machine set up, ready to demonstrate, shows that we believe there isn't a better spreader made. If there had been we would have found it. "New Idea" is the original wide-spreading spreader. Built to spread outside its own wheel track when other machines merely dumped manure behind. Low down and light draft, easy to load, easy on a team. Its chain conveyor brings every scrap of manure to the two cylinders where it is thoroughly pulverized and thrown onto swiftly revolving steel paddles that distribute it in even width and depth across three corn rows. This makes driving over spread manure unnecessary.

The New Idea Spreader can't clog and spreads at will, 3, 6, 9, 12, 15 or 18 loads per acre. It has a chain drive—no gears to break or strip from cold or under sudden strain. Wide tires fit the "New Idea" for use on soft soil. The New Idea Spreader is thoroughly well built of exceptionally stiff and sturdy materials, and the makers cheerfully guarantee it for a year against breakage from any cause. With proper care it will last a lifetime.

Now here is a machine that will give you dollar for dollar on a moderate investment in one year's time; because if used regularly it will absolutely save the full fertility value of manure and put it on the soil in such condition that growing plants can get it all.

The New Idea Spreader will save you money. Come in and see it next time you're in town. You'll be interested.

DON'T FORGET TO ASK US FOR THIS FREE BOOK We've a book here we would like you to read—"Helping Mother Nature." Tells more about the care and use of manure than you ever thought of. Written by an expert and full of right-up-to-the minute scientific data. Don't forget this—it's important.

CHILDREN CAN AID IN WAR PREPAREDNESS

Nation's Schools Open Next Week for Twenty Million Boys and Girls

To the Boys and Girls of Michigan:

We ars at war. Our country has called the men of tbe nation to its defense. On tbe 5th of June, ten million men reported ready for orders. Many havo already gone, others are on the way, many will soon depart—all to fight the powerful foe across tbe sca. On the door of yonder home we read the sign:

A Man from This House
Is in France
Fighting for His Country.

We are startled, pain grips us—for ws know that at last war has crossed the thresbold, banished joy, bid sorrow enter.

But as that fins company of men march away we feel the sober, determination that speaks from their faces and at once we take courage for we know they will meet the terrors of tbe battlefied — death itself — as Americans always have when duty called.

I chanced tbe other day to travel a little way with an old man, a tried and true American. He was bound for his old home to celebrate his birthday where fourscore years ago he was born. The brown button on his breast told me he was of the Grand Army of the Republic. I asked him about the service and he told me of four years of fighting for the Union—of battles, wounds, lingering death in prison pens, incredible suffering.

"That was a terrible trial!" I exclaimed. "I marvel that you lived through it."

The old veteran replied simply: "I did my part. I obeyed orders."

That speech comes to me again and again—I did my part. I obeyed orders.

On the 4th of September Uncle Sam will call an army which surpasses all the armed hosts of Europe. More than twenty million boys and girls will report at the public school, the training camp of American democracy.

And here are the orders of the commander-in-chief:

Boys and Girls of America: I have always need of you. You are my Grand Army of Preparedness. I summon you to your tasks for the safety of the republic. The worst enemy in our land is the ignorant man or woman. You are to be intelligent men and women. Every time you get a lesson well you strike a blow at ignorance.

But today I am much in need of you. I am distressed hy enemies across the sea. I depend upon ynu, boys and girls, to help destroy their power for they would rob us of the liberty we enjoy.

How can you do this?

Every boy and girl that breathes deep, sleeps well, and eats right, serves our country.

Every boy that pulls a weed and plants a seed feeds an American boy in the trenches and, besides, puts food in the pantry while father is at the front.

Every girl that makes a bandage soothes a soldier's pain; and when she sweeps and dusts a room gives mother added strength to meet the care and grief that mothers always bear in cruel war.

Boys and girls, bs strong, work hard. Do the dishes and keep the woodbox full. On every home put up the sign:

The Boys and Girls of This House
Do Their Part—
They Obey Orders.

FRED M. KEELER,
Supt. of Public Instruction.

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass af hot water before breakfast.

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well. what a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening tbe sluices of tho system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stag nant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick ar well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspooaful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all tha sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, billious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast

NEW LAWS AFFECTING MOTORISTS

REGULATES WEIGHT AND THE WIDTH OF TIRES

Advocates of Good Roads Intarested and Will Lend Aid In Its Enforcement

Automobile owners will be directly interested in the new laws enacted by the last legislature, which affect directly the Michigan motorist and appeal to the advocates of better roads. Following is a resume of the new laws:

To preserve the improved highways there is a law to prohibit the hauling of larger loads than 15 tons, except in cities. The tire width of the largest trucks and trailers must not exceed five inches. No chains can be used on 15-ton trucks. While the act does not affect any trucks or trailers now building, it will stop the building of larger vehicles later. Fifteen tons is considered a maximum safe load.

Highway officials, especially those of counties, are required under senate bill No. 68 to place detours around roads or bridges in safe condition for travel. A law that is going to help check car thefts is that known as senate bill No. 113, which makes it criminal to tamper with the number of an automobile, either the factory number of the car or the motor. Another important law is that which makes it a felony to drive away an owner's car without his permission. Automobile club, police and county officials were strong supporters of this act. The house of representatives was equally busy in law enactment for motorists and those interested in keeping up the roads. One bill makes it unlawful to operate a traction engine or other heavy machinery on state highways during March, April or May, the months when gravel and macadam roads are soft. Another makes it punishable by a $100 fine; imprisonment for 90 days, or both, to remove or deface the manufacturer's serial number on an automobile. This is similar to senate bill No. 113.

The state highway department can contract to pay one half the cost of a highway bridge between Michigan and another states. This bill, house No. 118, was passed for Iron county alone. The method by which a township, village or city shall become a part of a good roads district is changed by house bill 127. A county, which changes from the county roads system, must pay back certain money to townships, according to the provisions of house bill No. 131. Under house bill No. 156 the judicature act is amended by providing for the filing of cross suits in an accident for injuries or damage done to property arising from automobile collisions. This is considered, from a legal point of view, an excellent piece of legislation.

BOARD OF COMMERCE

Neighboring Cities Come Into Limelight by Action Taken

Boyne City has just organized what appears to be one of the livest chambers of commerce in this region, and now Cheboygan is following the example set by the city just to the south, and will revive her organization of a similar name. Both cities have been slowly but surely losing their lambering industries through the disappearance of the standing timber, and are now turning their attention to other manufacturing lines. At Boyne City, memberships were secured on a three-year basis at $12 per year. About 250 men joined—Petoskey Evenings News.

IS A SOLDIER WHEN CALLED

CHANGE OCCURS WHEN OFFICIAL CALL COMES

Not a Deserter Until He Has Become a Soldier and Deserted—Recent Ruling

At what moment does a selective service man become actually a soldier? Merely registering or passing his physical examination does not make him a soldier. Just when does the change take place?

The question has become important owing to the threat of extreme penalities for desertion. A soldier is not a deserter until he has become a soldier and deserted. The penalties for refusing to register are named in the draft law. They consist of jail penalties. But resisting the federal government after the draft law has become operative is a very different matter—dealt with by courtmartial followed by extreme penitentiary sentences and even the firing squad.

There is no oath administered to members of the selective service army, according to Provost Marshal General Crowder.

"There has been no formal ruling in that matter," said Major Gullion, "but in the absence of any provision in the law, it is safe to say the oath is not required to make the selective service man a soldier. He becomes a soldier at the moment specified in the notice he receives For instance, if he is told to report at noon September 1, 1917, at a certain place, he becomes a soldier at that moment."

The absence of any oath-taking by these men will be unusual. When a man joins the regular army or state militia or navy, his formal entrance into the nation's service is marked by his oath to support the constitution "and true allegiance bear" to the United States of America. This oath is what constitutes the volunteer. All members of the regular army are volunteers. Likewise the state militia.

When the state militia were on the Mexican border and were incorporated into the federal service, they were asked to take the oath, volunteering for federal service. They were not commanded to take such oath. Unless the oath were taken voluntarily it would have no effect. This applies in the case of the selective service army. Being drafted, the selective service men have no choice whether or not to serve; they must serve "and true allegiance bear." To ask them to swear to do what they must do, would be a surplusage.

MANY CHANGES IN GAME LAWS

or other officer whose duty it is to enforce the game and fish laws, and the owner who permits such a cat to run at large shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

No person shall make use of a sneakboat where more than fifty decoys are used, and such decoys must be placed at least 1,000 feet from any other decoys. No such decoys shall be permitted to remain in the water over night, nor shall such decoys be set earlier than one half hour before sunrise.

It is unlawful to kill or hunt any water fowl save only from sunrise to sunset of each day of the open season for hunting and killing such waterfowl. The closed season on woodducks extends to 1920. The open season for killing waterfowl will be Sept. 15 to Dec. 31 inclusive.

It is unlawful for any person to kill more than six geese and brant in one day or have more than fifteen in possession at any time or kill more than twenty-five in one calendar year.

Hereafter the open season on ruffed grouse shall be from Oct. 1 to Nov. 9 inclusive. It will be noticed that the grouse season closes the day before the deer season opens, which will avoid the necessity of having bird dogs in camp during the deer hunting season.

The open season for killing woodcock shall be Oct. 1 to Nov. 9.

It is unlawful for owners of lands which have been posted as game refuges ta hunt upon the same without securing a license.

It should also be remembered that it will no longer be lawful to disturb a den of skunks or to dig the skunks out of any place of congregating. This will result in reducing the number caught of these fine furbearers. Trappers have been in the habit af catching from one to eight in a single hole. Hereafter they will have to set traps for them just as they do for any other animal.

A license may be issued a minor under seventeen and over twelve years of age, to hunt and trap, upon oath or application by the state game, fish and forest fire commissioner or any other person authorized to issue licenses on condition that the minor child shall be accompanied by his parents or legal guardian or some other person authorized by them, when hunting upon lands upon which their parents are not regularly domiciled.

Alien residents of this state who have not secured their full citizenship papers will be required to pay $10 for a license to hunt or trap.

It is a misdemeanor for any person issuing licenses to charge more than one dollar for making affidavit and issuing a resident hunting license or more than $10 for an alien or non-resident license.

Hereafter, any person who shall kill any weasel, hawk, or owl shall receive a bounty of fifty cents. Any person to secure this bounty must present the head of the animal or bird to the county clerk and make affidavit as to the time and place where such animal or bird was killed. The county clerk shall issue a certificate to the applicant which shall be filed with the county clerk and presented to the board of supervisors at any meeting of the board for action. If the claim is allowed, the clerk shall issue a certificate on the treasurer, upon which certificate the treasurer shall pay the bill. The state is to pay one half and the county in which the animal or bird is to be killed is to pay the other half of such bounties.

Pythianism At a Glance

The Knights of Pythias is the third largest purely fraternal order in the world, and the youngest, having been founded in the city of Washington, February 19, 1864. It comprises fifty-five grand domains (states, territories, and provinces,) has upwards of 8,000 subordinate lodges, with lodges in Alaska, Australia, Canal Zone, China, Hawaii, and the Philippines. It has approximately 800,000 members.

The financial strength of the order is a matter of extreme gratification, the finances being invested in such a way as to make the cash available to at once relieve destitute brethern or the widows and families of deceased brethern, in the briefest possible time. During each year the order is credited with the expenditure of about $2,000,000 for relief purposes.

About $4,500,000 represents the investments in lodges and temples by subordinate lodges, and new temples are being erected at the rates of fifty per year. In real estate holdings the order represents over $6,000,000 much of this being homes for the aged brethern and orphan children of members.

The Domain of Michigan is rapidly erecting a fund called the Foundation Relief Fund which in a few years will amount to $100,000 the interest on this fund to all go to the relief of members and their families in distress, the interest an this fund now being used for the said purpose, as fast as it accumulates, with the best of results.

This order furnishes a vast field of usefulness for those who uphold friends, home flag, and country, and the work of the order offers splendid educational features to the young man with ambitions for self improvement.

FORMED AT MEETING HELD MONDAY EVENING

Road Committees of Three Cities to Work Together in Concerted Movement

Members of the boards of commerce from Boyne City, East Jordan and Charlevoix, supervisors from several townships, both in the east end of the county and near Charlevoix, and n number of other men interested in good roads, met at tha Hotel Bartlett on Monday eveniag last at the invitation of George H. Van Pelt, the object being first, to get acquainted with each other; second, to talk about aad discuss the road situation in Chsrlevoix county, and last, the most important of all, to orgonize the three cities as a united association to work for the betterment of the community along the lines of permanent highways.

In all about thirty men were present, all ready to do the part of the work assigned to him by the association, and to be o one man boosting committee. The evening session opened with an invitation from Mr. Van Pelt to adjourn to the dining room, where an excellent supper was thoroughly enjoyed.

The artistic manner in which the dining table was prepared deserves special mention and we pay tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett for the originality of the scheme displayed, as it conveyed to those present the real intent of the meeting. The table was hondsomely decorated with astors and other flowers, but the centerpicce was the unique feature of the decorations, being a minature concrete road with signs at either end directing tourists to "drive around Pine Lake before going farther north or farther south." A patch of grovel road was shown at each end of the concrete and on this a toy automoblle lay in a wrecked condition. It is needless to say that the automobiles on the concrete were shown bowling along in safety and ease. Other signs indicated the West Michigan Pike and Dixie Highway. The idea was a clever one nnd thoroughly demonstrated the intent of the meeting.

After dinner was over and cigars were lighted, the discussions began, presided over by J. L. Crane, president of the Charlevoix Commercial association. One of the first steps was the organization of what in the future will be known as the Charlevoix County Good Roads Association. Geo. H. Van Pelt was chosen president by acclomation, as was W. F. Tindall of Boyne City, vice president and John Porter of East Jordan for secretary and treasurer. The association is represented by the good roads committees of the three cities of the county. Boyne City, E. J. Kirchner, chnirman; P. J. Smith, F. C. Thompson, W. F. Tyndall, John Santos and T. B. Pomeroy. East Jordan, R. O. Bisbee, chairman; John Porter, Alex Cameron, John Kennie, A. E. Cross and Roscoe Mockey. Charlevoix, Geo. H. Vnn Pelt, chairman, R. F. Sloan, R. C. Hammett, Richard Lewis, Harry Nicholls and Dr. R. B. Armstrong.

One of the first acts of the new associntion was the passage of the following resolutions:

"Relieving it to be high time that the voters of Chorlevoix county should know exactly what our nine feet gravel roads are costing us, and that a nine foot concrete road can be build under contract for the same sum

"RESOLVED, That it is the concensus of opinion of this meeting that at the next meeting of the Board of Supervisors of Charlevoix county furnish us with an itemized account of every item of expenso from both the regular tax money, as well as the amount take from the contingent fund, including grocers, ice, and all oommodities for the boarding of men, automobiles, gasoline, and every other item which the Road Commissioners have charged the county for the building of roads. Such account to be published in all the papers published in the County free of expense.

"This motion is made for the purpose that every voter and tax payer in Charlevoix County may be able to discuss this all important question of road building. Remember Gentlemen—that good roads lead to Henven, Harmony. Also that badly built roads lead to Hell and discord.

"FURTHER BE IT RESOLVED, That every law abiding citizen should take an active interest in the manner in which the funds for our county ore being disbursed. We owe it to our children, and to ourselves,

CHATTY LETTER FROM FORMER CHARLEVOITES

Mrs. F. N. Chapel Reports Entire Family Well and Busy

In a chatty letter received from Mrs. F. N. Chapel this week, now located at Portland, Oregon, she states that they are well and happy, and also very husy, (which by the way spells happiness about as well as anything.) Mr. Chapel is doing relief work in drug stores and husy almost day and night, seven days in the week. During the summer vacation he was employed in a wooden ship building plant, receiving $3 per eight hour day.

FERGUSON HOUSE CHANGES HANDS

THOMAS & THOMAS OF THIS CITY NEW OWNERS

To Be Converted Into Sales Room and Service Station for Nash Motor Cars and Trucks

A deal was closed on Saturdoy of last week whereby Fred H. Thomss and C. L. Thomas, of the firm of Thomas & Thomas, became the owners of tho Ferguson House, located at the corner of Bridge and Mason streets.

The buildiag et a later date will be converted into a sales room and service station for Nash motor cars and trucks, for whom the firm of Thomas & Thomas are local representatives.

The Ferguson House building which is one of the old land marks of Charlevoix, is some 50 x 50 feet, located on a lot 88 x 50 feet, and is one of the most desirable locations in the city for the purpose which the new owners will utilize it.

It is our understanding that it is the intentions of Messrs. Thomas & Thomas to use practically all floor space on the first floor to dispiny the line of cars they represent, beside conducting a first-class service station and handling auto accessories. Both men are hustlers and we predict a bright future for them.

LOCAL DRAFTED MAN EXAMINED AT ESCANABA

Where He Had Been Called on Important Business

In the list last week of those who had been drafted nnd had not appeared for examination was the name of Roy M. Babcock. Mr. Babcock states that he was called to Escanaba upon business which could not be avoided, and that he was examined there on August 31.

There nre doubtless others in the list who were examined elsewhere, or hnve some other good excuse for not appearing, as we are loath to believe that any would wish to be slackers.

BOYNE CITY MAN GERMAN CAPTIVE

RAY ROOK AND FOUR OTHERS IN PRISON CAMP

Reported Interned at Brandenburg After Being Landed Off a Teuton Submarine

Ray Roop, of Boyne City, is in a prison comp at Brandenburg, Prussia. This news was conveyed to the American Red Cross at Washington, D. C., by cable from Geneva. The message announced that Roop, boatswain's mate on the American tank steamer Campona, together with Capt. Albert Oliver of the submarined ship and Charles Lovan Klins, gunner's mate, Fred Stephen Jacob, a seamen, and James Delaney, chief gunner's mate in charga of the gun crew had been interned. Roop was a member of the gun crew.

Seaman William Albert Miller, also taken prisoner by the submarine at the time of the Campana sinking, is not mentioned in the cable and an inquiry has been sent to Geneva to asecrtain what became of him.

The message announcing that tbe five men had been interned set at rest all fears that they had been put to death by the Germans or drowned by the action of an allied warship which, it was believed, had struck the U-boat on which the Americans were captives and possibly sunk it.

VAN PELT SAYS WORLD IS RAPIDLY WAKING UP

People Realizing More Every Day Need of Permanent Roads

The whole world is waking up to the fact that our present system of road building is bad. In fact, it is rotten. Every paper you pick up from any part of the United States, shows the crying need for permanent roads. Roads to be built of concrete or brick. No matter which roads you build, what either kind may cost, they are the cheapest, and will continue to be much cheaper than roads built of gravel, stone or macadam. I like to use the last word because it gives me a sort of satisfaction, and a chance to place extra emphosis on the last syllable, "dom," and when you add to it, "poor investment," you have struck the nail squarely on the head and have not smashed a finger or a thumb. It's the truth. Do you ever stop to think about this wonderful word "truth?" Just think of it for a moment. It is now, always has been, and always will be "truth," and no power on earth can change it.

Just a word to the thinking man. Try and make o great effort to find out what the few miles of common gravel roads we have built this year have cost us. You cannot do it if you try and I would advise you not to try, because if you should find out and be a heavy tax payer, you would become sick immediately. You would not send for a doctor, but you would send for some expert and ask him, "is it true about the cost of these roads and under what conditions were they built?

PLEASED WITH LIFE IN CAMP

DESPITE HARD, TEDIOUS WORK AND LONG HOURS

Dan P. Mather Says Uncle Sam Aims to Make Fighters Out of Recruits, Not Drill Masters

Dr. F. H. Wilkinson received a long interesting letter lost week from Don P. Mather, ona of the recent recruits leaving Charlevoix for the trnining camp at Fort Sheridan, Illinois. From the tone of the letter, Mr. Mather is well pleased with camp life and is making the affort of his ilfe to "make good." Below is tha letter in detail:

13th Company, 2nd Regiment
Fort Sheridan, Ill.,
August 31, 1917.

"Dear Friend:

"I would not have missed this camp for anything, and I guess every one here feels the samc, authough we all know what may come after the camp.

"There are men here of all ages within the limit, and of all walks of life, and they are certainly men with whom it is o privilege to be nssociatod. We are all in dead earnest, and the amount that has been accomplished so far is remarkable, at least it seems to me. We are alrcady equipped almost completely, and have had the school of ths squad of arms making packs and other things, and we also take about one hour hikes each day. Yesterdoy it was with light packs. The setting np exercises are fine.

"We are located in the brick barracks at present and the quarters are very pleasant, each man having a oot to himself. The food is very good, and they make quite a point of it that any man who makes a table pig of himself, need not expect to stay long. Thero are a lot of things like that governing our stay here.

"From what I hear and what they are teaching us now, and what I expect they will teach us, they are aiming to make fighters out of us, and not drill masters. I expect that wa will get some real duty soon. Have already seen trenches like those we will practice in.

"If the whole army to be constructed gets the spirit we have here, it certainly will be a winner.

"I will try and write as often as I can.

"Yours sincerely,
"DAN P. MATHER."

We sincerely hope he will prove himself as proficient, should he chaaco in the futuro to come up against a German "boche."

NOW IN CONCENTRATION CAMP

INTERESTING LETTER FROM FORMER CHARLEVOIX BOY

Relates Experiences on Long Trip Across Ocean and "Sub" Scare —Learning French Ways

After a strenuous voyage from some American port to France, with the American Expeditionary Force, being attacked and shot at by a submorine, Claud Volkert, a graduate of C. H. S., 1914, and well known in this city, wrote a very interesting letter to his uncle, County Clerk Richord Lewis, which we reproduce in full:

"Somewhere in France,"
August 25, 1917.

"Dear Uncle and Aunt:

"Arrived safely. Had a nicc trip across the water. We are now in a concentration camp but expect to leave shortly for the regular medical training camp neor Poris. France is a beautiful country, the agriculture being the samo as the states. Just now we are enjoying plenty of fruit. Frult is the only thing that is reasonable in price. All French products are very dear and American products ore hard to get. French tobacco is "bum," ond the ship from the states which carried a large supply of tobacco, was sunk, so it is quite scarce.

"We had a submarine battle the last doy of our voyage. About 40 shots were fired by our destroyers and ships. About the timo the excitement started we were met by three French air crafts. One torpedo came very closc to our ship, missing only by a few feet, hut none of the ships were injured.

"I am trying to get this off on a ship that sails today, so must close. You ought to receive this in less than a month. I am now taking French lessons, having quite a time trying to talk.

"Goodbye for this time. Will write again soon. Don't forget to write soon as it will take a letter quite a while to get here.

"Your loving nephew,
"CLAUDE."

Address, American Expeditionary Force, U. S. A. A. S., Sec. 93, France.

PATRIOTIC DAY FOR COUNTY FAIR

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6 SET ASIDE FOR EVENT

Committees Hard at Work Arranging for Annual Event—Liberal Prizes Offered

The 33rd annual Charlevoix County Fair will be held this year on September 25-28 inclusive, at the county association's fair grounds in East Jordan. Indication are that it will surpass all feirs heretofore held in tha county.

The Fair Association, in an effort to give its patrons real and interesting horse racing and for patriotic reasons, has this year limited the entries to horses owned in Charlevoix county and has stipulated that races must be run in three minutes or better or no money paid. A number of local owners are getting their horses in shape and the entries to date assure good racing. One feature of the race program is the chariot race. A prize of $50 is offered the winner of this race. Chariots may be of any design and must he drawn by at least two horses. Several have entered their teams from East Jordan and vicinity and it is hoped that teams from Charlevoix and Boyne City and vicinities will be entered, and that the race will resolves itself into a race between the fastest teams of the three communities.

Another interesting feature of the race program will he a novelty race in which ths ladies will harness and hitch their horses before the grand stand and then race for half a mile. $50 is offered for this race and a large entry is expected.

Dedos Comedy Circus, introducing educated pony, educated dogs, trained monkey and Dynamite, the bucking mule, together with Dare Devil Oliver and his diving dog, make up the list of free attractions. A cash prize will be given anyone who can stay on Dynamite's back for three minutes. Dare Devil Oliver performs feats of fancy and spectacular diving into a tank containing fifty-two inches of water. He is assisted by a diving dog. Dare Devil Oliver dives from o height of a hundred and fifty feet and his dog from a height of fifty feet.

Competent and impartial judgea from out of the county have been secured for all of the departments. These men will first do the judging and after having made awards will be glad to point out the reasons for their awards. This is expected to be an interesting and educational feature of the fair.

The attention of farmers and dairymen is called to a new feature of the fair. A first prize of $25, second prize of $15 and third prize of $10 is offered to owner of a cow producing the largest number of pounds of butter fat during the four days of the fair. Cows must be in their stalls on the fair grounds by six p. m. on Tuesday, September, 25th, when the first milking will be made. Milkings thereafter will be made at six a. m. and six p. m. during the continuance of the fair. The milking will be under the supervision of Mr. Mather. The milk will ha tested publically at ten a. m. each morning at the educational building. Cows entered in the butter fat contest are not barred from other entries for other prizes.

This is an excellent opportunity for farmers and dairymen to learn just what percentage of butter fat their cows are producing and a number of entries are expected.

The usual premiums are offered in all departments and it is expected that the buildings will be filled to overflowing with exhibits. It is the patriotic duty of all farmers in the county to exhibit their best products and the Fair Association confidently expects each man, woman and child to do his or her share toward making the buildings groan with their load of exhibits.

Governor Sleeper, by proclamation has asked each Fair Association to set aside one day for Patriotic Day. The Fair Association has designated Wednesday, September 26th as Patriotic Day for Charlevoix County Fair and on that day speakers of national repute will deliver patriotic addresses. An effort is being made to have the Governor present on that day and the association is now in receipt of a telegram from Congressman Scott, stating that he will be

LADIES! LOOK YOUNG, DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Use the Old-time Sage Tea and Sulphur and Nobody will Know.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

GLASS OF SALTS IF YOUR KIDNEYS HURT

Eat less meat if you feel Backachy or have Bladder trouble—Salts fine for Kidneys.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder disease.

COUNTY GOOD ROADS ASS'N

and to the newcomers into our county. In conclusion, let me ask first for your serious consideration—Is there any business man in Charlevoix County, who would hand over to any agent or employe the sum of $50,000 and say, here, go to it, spend it as you like, and make no account for it, or would he not say, give me a daily account of your expenses in order that I may know what you are spending my money for.

Next discussed was the county's needs along the road question. General conditions were discussed, matters of great interest were threshed out, which finally resulted in the appointment of E. A. Ruegsegger of Boyne City, as a committee of one to prepare a proper petition for submission to the board of supervisors at their October session, asking that a proposition to bond the county for $300,000 for road building be submitted to the voters at a general election next spring.

The main object of the bonding issue is to enable the county to take advantage of the federal aid which is now available, to complete the Mackinac Trail and to build other roads in the county as are deemed necessary for the better development of the territory through which they runs. This bonding issue, however, is not to interfere with the regular work of the county commissioners in the present or future.

The plan is a comprehensive one and requires a campaign of education that will enable every voter in the county to familarize himself with it. Perhaps a short explanation here will not be amiss: The idea is this: that in order to secure federal aid, we must show Uncle Sam that we have the money with which to carry out the work as outlined and it cannot be done a mile at a time, it must all be done ut once or he will not listen. Unele Sam will allow Federal aid on interstate roads and the Dixie Highway comes under this act. There is about 16 miles of this highway passing through the West side of our county and if built by, and under this act, Uncle Sam will pay 50 per cent of the cost of the road, the state will pay 15 per cent, and the county has to pay the balance which is only 35 per cent. Should we let this chance pass while it is within our reach? Those present thought not. Further, this county is allowed 34 miles of what is known as Trunk Line Mileage from the state of Michigan and this trunk line draws Double Reward. If Uncle Sam builds the Dixie Highway this is not counted as state Double Reward. Therefore, besides receiving Federal Aid, we are increasing our State Trunk Linc Mileage by 16 miles which means to us several hundred thousand dollars. Shall we let that pass. It will be up to the voter but before he votes he must be thoroughly familiar with the details of this program. It is not for the purpose of spending $300,000 but rather to save more than that amount by taking advantage of conditions which have presented themselves. If carrier it will mean, approximately, that we will be enabled to build considerably over forty miles of concrete road at less than the cost of twenty miles. Forty miles would put this county on the map of the world. It would be the biggest advertisement we could devise to say nothing of the thousand benefits which would naturally accrue to local farmers. It will build more than the trunk lines; it will build some of the best lateral roads and some of the most needed roads in the county.

Such is to be the work of the newly organized Charlevoix County Good Roads Association. An effort will be made to have all residents of the county work in perfect harmony for the good of all. Each district will receive her share of the road building. Our road problems are all county problems and the sooner the entire county works together with this in view, the sooner the main object, the having of good roads, will be attained.

A second meeting of the association will be held in East Jordan on Monday evening, September 17, when work of the organization will be completed and plans outlined and adopted for a good roads campaign over the entire county.

MARRIED FRIDAY

Former Charlevoix Girl Becomes Bride of Bank Cashier

The Lotus Hotel at Monroe Piers was the scene of an attractive wedding Friday at noon, when Miss Lucile Hunderman, of Holly, Michigan, was united in marriage to Mr. Herman A. McLellan, also of Holly, Michigan.

Rev. Lea of Detroit, read the marriage service at 11 o'clock. Immediately after, a dinner was served, the bridal table being appointed in pink, with pink roses for the center piece. Places were marked for six.

The bride and groom left shortly afterward for an eastern honeymoon and will reside in Holly, where the groom is cashier of the Citizens Savings Bank.

Guests from out of town included Mrs. Dena E. Beaubien and Miss Audrey Hunderman of Holly. The bride is well known in Charlevoix where she has many friends who wish her a long life of happiness.

MAY CLOSE EMMET TO DEER HUNTERS

Supervisors Plan to Take Action at Coming Boord Session

Emmet county supervisors plan to take advantage of the 1917 provision in the state game laws which provide that any ten members of any board of supervisors in the state may petition the state game department to close their county to deer hunters.

Such a petition is being circulated among the supervisors, and it is believed sufficient signers have already been secured. The petition will go to department headquarters at Lansing.

The new state law provides that a public hearing may be given the case before final action is taken by the game department. Such a hearing will be given for Emmet county if the petition receives favorablo consideration at Lansing.

Last year sixty-two deer were killed in Emmet county, and the already small number of these fleet-footed animals was nearly wiped out. The government has a game preserva in the north end of the county, and it is in thnt region that most of the remaining deer are to be found.

SCHOOL COMMISSIONER'S NOTES

Many schools started the first Monday in September. Reports of opening of achool have bean received from Missea Eva Latham, Olive Underhill, Mabel Dunlop, Jessle Barkley, Constance Gallop and Clara Thorsen.

An explanation from the teacher of the Magee achool says that a library had been voted in that district ten years ago and that the reports had failed to show this. Consequently they had no receipts from the library money. This is a point worth investigating but if the record is lost it will be easier to vote the library anew.

Schools started in East Jordan, Charlevoix and St. James on the 10th.

The newsy items from Melrose No. 3 indicates a number of improvements on the schoolhouse. A better school next year and that much nearer a Standard or good school.

Marquette Normal sent two life certificate teachers to fill the vacancies in our rural schools and at present the supply is just even with the demand. It was necessary to hold a special examination for three applicants for schools on the Beaver Islands, there being no qualified teacher to take these positions. These certificntes thus granted hold good until the April examination,

The Mountain school of Eveline township is being repainted and tinted on the interior. New text books will be provided.

The term reports from all the different districts of the county are now on hand correct and ready for the Lansing office, with the exception of one township, which had to be sent back for further corrections. The reports will be expressed to Supt. Fred L. Keeler on the morning of Thursday the 13th so that they may reach the department on the 15th as required by law. It takes a great deal of careful and patient work on the part of the directors to get these reports as perfect as the state requires them and a great deal of copying has to be done to make the four copies for the different offices. The town clerks are the first in line to correct these reports and their careful inspection and knowledge at hand has this year saved a great deal of time so that there will be no doubt of the timely arrival of our county reports at the capitol.

City schools have building problems as well as our districts with the one room building. East Jordan west side possesses the west side school, built years ago before anyone paid any attention to what a schoolbuilding is used for and at a time when they merely put up a building, that was all. Last year the eye test taken in the fall by Supt. Holliday and his assistant teachers showed the poorest vision in the advanced room for the 5th and 6th grades. At the urgent request of the teacher, Mr. Osborn, the board consented to put in a bank of windowa on the left for more light, promising the other teachers that aimilar changes would be made in their rooms if improvement waa noticed in the first room remodeled. We notice now that the room directly below thia one is being given the benefit of one side light and plenty of light and we are happy to noto that the little folks may bask in the sunny air of a school room purified by the cleanaing power, the sun'a rays, nature'a greatest fumigator and germicide.

THE DUCK SEASON WILL OPEN SUNDAY

This Applies to All Kinds of Duck Except Wood Duck

The duck season for 1917 opens Sunday, September 16, and lasts until December 31, according to the federal game laws, just announced. This applies to all kinds of duck except woodduck, which are protected throughout the year until 1920. Last year considerable confusion was caused by the disagreement of the state and federal laws. The state law opened the season September 1, while the national game laws prohibited duck hunting until September 16. This is not the case this year, as the state law has been nnnounced to conform with the national law.

JAMAICA GINGER HIGH-BALLS

PLACED UNDER BAN BY PROSECUTING ATTORNEY

Drug Stores and Grocers Must Not Sell Without Prescription From Physician

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Shanahan's recent order of prohibiting the sale of Jamaica ginger in liquid form, unless accompanied by a prescription from a physician, has resulted in consternation to the followers of John Barleycorn.

Hereafter all drug stores and grocers who have been peddling this compound over their counters, either for domestic use or to those desiring to use it for other purposes, must file a statement with the prosecuting attorney of the amount they have in stock and also the amount they purchase during each month of the year. Failure to comply with this order on the part of any person will result in his or her prosecution, as according to Mr. Shanahan, he is quite anxious to make a test of the legality of his order.

"Certain drug stores in the county," says Mr. Shanahan, "have been selling Jamaica ginger (liquid form) by the gross, and it must be stopped. Some say the largest per cent of it is consumed by Indians, but my close observance has convinced me that poor Lo is not the only one addicted to its use, as case after case has been forcefully brought to my attention where the white brothers are quantity purchasers, especially those who are in the habit of getting 'lit up' frequently."

"I intend that this order will be strictly lived up to," Mr. Shanahan continued. "The practice is an abominable one and the situation is becoming serious. If men are determined to become beastly intoxicated and when their supply of "booze" is exhausted expect to continue their debauch on jamaica ginger, or other substitutes such as lemon extract, Hinkley's Bone Limiment, Red Raven Splits, Sal Hepatica, Peruna, Hard cider, or any combination of the above, they need a guardian and should be adjudged mentally unbalanced."

Gee—what next? This must be a blow to the advocates of "personal liberty."

IMPORTANT WORK BY LOCAL RED CROSS

Comfort Kits Given Boys on Their Departure for Camp

A great deal of work has been done at our Red Cross rooms this summer. A group of women under the able leadership of Mrs. Ella Sehwab, have met mornings all summer.

Eight pajama coats have been cut and made, and one hundred and twenty-five bed shirts have been cut and at least half that number made, by this group.

Two hundred yards of bath robe material donated by Mr. Isaman, is being cut free of charge at the Wooltex factory in Cleveland, through the kindness of. Hugh Black.

The auxiliary and all those interested, feel deeply grateful for the royal assistance given by our summer visitors.

From now on, a register will be kept of those doing Red Cross work and this list will be published from time to time.

This is a national affair. Let every one help in this great cause. Comfort kits are given, made by our auxiliary, to our boys, as they leave for camp, and seem to be greatly appreciated.

Must Obtain License

A law passed by the state legislature at their 1917 session requires every owner of a threshing machine who threshes for hire to get a license from the secretary of state. No fee is charged, but the operator of every machine is required to make a statement each week of the kind and amount of grain threshed, together with the name and address of the grower of such grain, the number of acres and yield.

We carry a large assortment of automobile springs. When your spring breaks, see us. Benj. Brown Garage. 35tf.

The Northern Auto Co. has the handling of Ford cars, trucks and tractors in Charlevoix, Emmet and Cheboygan counties, and will utilize the garages recently acquired as distributing points.

KNOCKED DOWN AND RUN OVER

FORD SPEEDER HITS COUNTY ROAD EMPLOYE

John Boyer Now a Mass of Bruises and Abrasions From Encounter with Car

Talk about miraculous escapes, John Boyer, an employee of Road Commissioner O. D. Hammond at his camps on the East Jordan road, certainly had one early Tuesday morning when he was hit by a Ford car driven by Guy King of East Jordan.

Boyer was riding on a wagon driven by Will Bird, who was in the lead of three wagons on their way to the Lyngklip farm after stone. They had proceeded south on the road until reaching the gate leading to the place where the stone was located. Upon reaching the gate, Boyer left the wagon to open the gate and had just made his way round the front of the team, when the car struck him on his right side, throwing him under the car and rolling him for some thirty feet.

Those witnessing the accident are emphatic in their statement that the car was running at a speed not less than 30 miles per hour. All that could be seen of Boyer after the car struck him was a cloud of dust, a leg or arm appearing for a second from under the car.

King stopped the car about four rods after running over the body of Boyer and came back to his assistance. Boyer lay on his face, partially stunned, but when turned over on his back and the dirt and dust removed from his eyes, made his way to the camps with the assistance of Hammond and his men.

Medical assistance was immediately summoned and upon examination it was found that no bones were broken, but Boyer's right hip was badly bruised, and his entire body, face and hands a mass of bruises and abrasions.

That he was not instantly killed is a miracle, and it will be sometime before he is able to resume work again. King admits his guilt of speeding and is doing everything possible to render aid to the injured man.

Repentance on his part or any other careless driver does not in the least lessen the danger of death or severe injury to pedestrians or car drivers on our country roads, and immediate steps should be taken to make an example of a few of the "speed demons."

MEN OFF FOR BATTLE CREEK

CHARLEVOIX'S SECOND CONTINGENT LEAVE TODAY

Reported at Court House for Final Instructions and Leave On Noon Train

Charlevoix's second contingent for the new national army has been completed by the exemption board and the men reported at the court house for final instructions Wednesday at ten o'clock, and left on the noon train for Battle Creek.

Citizens turned out en masse to give the boys a rousing send-off and all that could be done to show our love for, appreciation of and confidence in the 29 brave young men, upon their departure for the great cantonment near the "food city" to represent Charlevoix county in the world conflict for the preservation of the principles of liberty, was done.

The parade was formed on Bridge street at 11:30 headed by the fife and drum corps, followed by G. A. R. members, the drafted men, members of the Boy Scouts, hundreds of school children and a long line of business men. Following these were automobiles estimated at nearly a hundred in number, the entire procession covering over six blocks.

At the Pere Marquette station the drafted men were formed in line and each presented a "housewive" made by local members of the W. R. C. As the train pulled out of the station, cheer upon cheer bade God-speed to the departing ones.

LIGHT PROBLEM FINALLY SOLVED

CITY ENTERS INTO ANOTHER TEN YEAR CONTRACT

Charles S. Abbott of Detroit Obtains Control of Richardi Plant at Bellaire

The long drawn-out controversy over the Richardi electric lighting contract has at last been ended. At a regular adjourned meeting of the council last Thursday evening a contract was entered into between the city of Charlevoix and Charles S. Abbott of Detroit, covering a period of ten years.

Under the terms of this contract Mr. Abbott agrees to furnish the city with electric current for power purposes at a two and one-half cent k. w. rate, and for illuminating purposes at three cents per k. w., except during the months of July, August and September, when the rate for current for illuminating purposes will be advanced to four cents per k. w. on all current in excess of 35,000 k. w. per month, the advance of price during this period being granted to offset the extra expense of additional machinery made necessary to carry our heavy load during the height of the resort season.

The source of electric supply will be furnished from the old Richardi water power plant at Bellaire, the plant at East Jordan which is owned and operated by Mr. Abbott, and the 500 h. p. steam unit, now located at Bellaire, and which is to be moved to this city on ground near the old sugar factory.

In all, this gives three sources for electric current supply, not including the city's 110 h. p. plant about to be installed. In the deal Mr. Abbott buys the Richardi plant, and it is understood and agreed by all parties to the contract that Mr. Richardi waives all claim to any bill against the city. The new contract will go into force on October 1.

JUMPS FROM RAPIDLY MOVING AUTOMOBILE

Local Druggist Severely Shaken Up on Way to Depot

All the anticipated pleasure of bidding our soldier boys farewell, as they departed on the noon train, was taken away from Frank N. Metcalf just before noon today while he was on his way to the depot.

He was riding with other members in the car of Frank Fox of Horton Bay and were on the Petoskey road, on the way from the Pere Marquette station, when his hat blew off. Metcalf called to Fox, who was driving the car to stop, but jumped from the car before its speed was lessened. He landed on the gravel road on the top of his head, sustaining severe bruises about his neck and shoulders.

His injuries are not thought to be of a serious nature, although it will be some time before he fully recovers from the shock.

TRAGIC DEATH OF YOUNG BOY

WAS HELPING HIS FATHER MOVE A HOUSE

Blow From Sweep of Windlass Crushes His Skull—Death Thought Instantaneous

The accidental death of Rollcy, the fourteen-year-old son of Rollie Baumbach, who lives on the shore road about two miles south of Norwood, adds another to a long list of mishaps which he has been subject to for some time past. Last winter Mr. Baumbach lost his house by fire, at other times he has lost a horse, a cow, crops have been a failure, until it seems that he has been subjected to about everything in the line of unfortunate accidents of all kinds.

The accident Thursday, which resulted in the death of his son, occurred during the forenoon. Mr. Baumbach, assisted by his son and others, were moving a house down a hill to replace the one burned last winter. Owing to the incline down which the house was being moved a windlass and sweep were used.

From what we have been told, the young lad was driving the horse on the windless and attending to the rope, etc. While changing position of the windlass, Mr. Baumbach removed the sweep, which was later placed in position by the boy. The young lad was about to hitch the horse to the sweep, when either by the weight of the house or in some other manner, the sweep began to whirl around, striking the horse, and a second later the boy.

The young lad dropped as if struck by a cannon ball, the blow from the sweep crushing his skull, resulting in almost instant death. A call was sent to this city for an automobile and was responded to by a car from H. B. Wood's livery. The young lad was brought to this city and taken to Dr. Armstrong's office, where it was found that the skull was badly crushed and that death must have been almost instantaneous. The remains were then taken to S. M. See & Sons undertaking rooms, where preparations for burial were made.

Funeral services were held Sunday, interment in the Antrim City cemetery. The beautiful tokens of flowers in a manner expressed the deepest sympathy of friends and neighbors to the bereaved family in their hours of grief and sorrow.

PATRIOTIC DAY SEPTEMBER 26

GOVERNOR SLEEPER AND OTHERS TO SPEAK

Patriotic Exercises, Band Concert, Pole and Flag Raising—Fireworks in the Evening

Wednesday, September 26, will be Patriotic Day at the Charlevoix County Fair, and an excellent Patriotic program has been arranged by the management. Patriotic addresses will be given by Hon. Frank D. Scott, congressman from this district and Hon. Will A. Norton, an attorney now practicing in Lansing, Michigan, and formerly a resident of Charlevoix county. Gov. Sleeper has promised to come on that day if it is at all possible for him to get away. At the present time he is out of Lansing on business connected with the war and on his return will let the association know definitely whether he will be present. Another prominent state official has been invited to address the patrons of the fair, and may possibly be present but is unable to give a definite answer at this time.

The Patriotic exercises will consist of a Patriotic band concert, patriotic addresses and a pole and flag raising. The pole will be one of the highest in this section of the country and will be raised at the conclusion of the addresses. A 12-1-2 x 25 foot flag has been purchased and will be flung to the breeze at the conclusion of the pole raising.

In the evening the business men of the City of East Jordan have provided a band concert and a spectacular display of fireworks. The fireworks include eight set pieces. Among these set pieces are four patriotic designs. "Welcome Americans," "Star of the Union," "American Flag" and "Good-night Americans." "Star of the Union" has an actual fire frontage of 30 x 30 feet and shows a great star of fire outlined in red, white and blue fires with magnificient golden sunburst points extending 12 feet up from each point of the start. "American Flag" is a grand feature showing "Our Flag" flowing to the breeze and waving from a golden staff. The "Welcome Americans" and "Good-night Americans" designs have each letter outlined with fireworks in many colors.

The other set pieces consist of forest fires with a fire frontage of 35 x 35 feet, "Mystic Wheel" consisting of revolving wheels embellished with beautiful color, "Fox Trot" consisting of revolving wheels embellished with bands of color surrounded by battery effects of huge stars and the "European Battle Effect" being a veritable battle with a great candle bombardment with banked mines and filing the air with brilliant flashes and loud reports. This is an entirely new design and has never been shown in this section of the country. The balance of the fireworks display is made up of rockets, bombs, torches, golden fountains, European war mines, etc.

The fireworks display will take place on the lake. This will be a new and interesting feature and the reflections in the water will undoubtedly enhance the beauty of the display.

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. No alcohol in Scott's.

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

Everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it, before breakfast.

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physician.

If you get headaches, it's your liver. If you catch cold easily, it's your liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, furred tongue, nasty breath or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddy complexion, watery eyes all denote liver uncleanliness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected organ of the body. Few know its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste, bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous, salivating chemical which can only be used occasionally because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, to wash from the liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, the poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Limestone phosphate does not restrict the diet like calomel, because it can not salivate, for it is harmless and you can eat anything afterwards. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, and any pharmacist will sell you a quarter pound which is sufficient for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans, stimulates and freshens the liver, keeping you feeling [illegible] day out.

THEY PRONOUNCE IT "CANTOONMENT" IN MILITARY CIRCLES

—o—

They call it "cantoonment" in the army, with the double "o" as though it were boon, but most of the ordinary every day civilians are afraid of seeming to affect a military pose, and content themselves with a t—o—n—e pronounciation. The dictionary, too, gives the military way of saying the word as the proper pronounciation. It is not unusual to hear the word as if it had something to do with Canton, Ohio.

"GET BEAN MAGGOT NOW" IS WARNING

Return of Pest Can be Discouraged by Fall Plowing

There is need in Michigan this fall of energetic measures against the bean maggot, according to the department of farm crops of the Michigan Agricultural college. It was this pest which last spring did heavy damage to young bean plants in many parts of the state, but the danger of its return in 1918 can be lessened, the college men say, if land intended to be used for beans next year is fall-plowed.

The bean maggot was found to have done its greatest damage last spring to beans planted on spring-plowed clover sod. Injury on fall-plowed clover or alfalfa land, however, was rare and in most cases could be traced to the presence of thistles.

"The bean maggot comes through the winter and begins work early in the spring on the roots of thistles and clover, and in organic matter, the department state, "if land is fall-plowed, the bean maggot is very largely killed out. Fall-plowed lands can be put in shape for beans much more easily in the spring than is possible when it is newly plowed, and the land has time in which to settle. Thorough dragging at intervals in the spring will work the field into good shape to seed beans.

"The majority of Michigan lands, however, are greatly benefited by plowing in the fall, regardless of whether it is beans or some other crop for which they are to be used. Light lands which are likely to blow or erode or which are deficient in organic matter should not be fall plowed. Corn, potatoes and beets, as well as beans, are all greatly benefited if planted on fall-plowed land."

BAD FIRE AT BOYNE FALLS

Two Frame Buildings on Main Street Are a Total Loss

On Wednesday night of last week Boyne Falls was visited by a disastrous fire which destroyed two frame buildings on its main street. One was the W. A. Davoll building, a part of first floor being used by Mr. Davoll as a justice office and a part by Dr. Howe as an office, and the upstairs by Mr. and Mrs. Davoll as a dwelling place. The other was the building south known as the L. A. Moon Drug Store, at the time being used as a storage room.

The buildings were a total loss, with insurance on the property, building and contents of $3,000.

Tha public endorsement of a local citizen is the bsst proof that ean bs produced. Nons better, nons stronger can be had. SCHOOL COMMISSIONER'S NOTES

Notice of opening of schools were this week received from Ruth Chaney, No. 5 Boyne Valley, Arla Hawkins, No. 4 Chandler, Ada Bardwell, No. 5 Evangeline, Ethel Brotberton, No. 6 Hayes, Alta Vogg, No. 2 Bay, and from Etta Thayer, No. 2 Melrose. The programs on the backs of these reports indicate busy times.

Mabel Dunlop, Olive Underhill, Eva Latham, Ada Bardwell, Florenee Meggison, Muriel Kerry and Etta Thayer thia week asked for Home Work supplies in order that they might start this system in their schools.

The St. James high school has added the twelfth grade for which they were working last spring. A new teacher, Florentine Hessman, teaches the 11th and 12th grades, and the principal of last year's grammar grades, Mabel McDonald, teaches the 8th and 9th and 10th grades. There are three teachers to handle the first seven grades and they are busy, competent teachers.

We note the touch of pride in the Walker school notes of last week, and we agree with the correspondent that the improvements made on the schoolhouse bring it way above the ordinary requirements for a Standard school. When we remember that there are but seven Standsrd schools in the county well may we be proud of the districts that raise their school huilding above all ordinary demands. There is keen competition among the schools of Eveline township and nearly every school is in the race.

A business trip through the county brought the chance of information that scareity of labor had not thwarted the ambition of a district school board in far away Chandler township. Every member of the board has little children in school and they have been working together to bring the school up to the Better school class and give their children just as good as could be had. Last year it was new seats, new toilets, new entryway; this year new windows all but one on the left hand side of the pupils. The school had nothing practically to begin with but now it lacks only the ventilating system but with this three piece installment plan, with these people it is bound to come. It is a splendid thing to work with an aim in view and to keep on working year by year. It is the only way that some schools would ever afford to do the repairing which time has made necessary. There is only one danger in the slower method and that is the danger of losing interest, or the change of plans if different officers come to the control of things, but in Chandler No. 6, in Forest Hill, the district is working together, the officers are as a unit, nothing has held them back, while the love of their children, and the reasons back of every move have impelled them to their task.

The Rock Elm and Ranney schools report that the furnaces are complete and school has opened.

Miss Hansen of Marquette Normal accepted the position made vacant by the sudden resignation of Miss Hazel Richardson in the Rock Elm school.

Fair tickets will be sent each teacher to present to the students who were neither absent or tardy for the last three months of school last spring. They will be sent directly from the office of the Secretary of the fair, D. L. Wilson, East Jordan.

YOUNG ROYSTER PAYS $55.20 FOR HIS FUN

Boyne City Justice Makes Evening Entertainment Expensive

James Parmenter of East Jordan, a young man well known in that city, was the star actor in a fracas pulled off in Boyne City last Wednesday evening, that is not only a disgrace to himself, but to other members of his party.

Parmenter was one of the occupants of several cars from East Jordan making a visit to Boyne City. The trouble started when he made several insulting remarks to two young ladies whom he had followed to a picture show and from there to a garage, where he seized one of them, but fled when their cries awakened the entire neighborhood.

After a chase lasting for several hours, Parmenter was captured and jailed. The following morning he was taken before a local justice and fined $50 and costs, amounting to $5.20. Just another case of misinformation as to character, we are told. A fresh young man looking for "fun" as is sometimes npplied locally. The same lesson would apply nicely to some "freshies" we are plagued with right here at home.

USES OF THE LIBERTY LOAN

It is a mistaken notion that all of the money raised by the sale of the Liberty Loan Bonds which is to be used for war purposes will be an eventual loss to the United States and its people; that it is all to be spent for things used up in war or useless except for purposes of war. It is well to remember that a great deal of the money raised by the sale of Liberty Loan Bonds is to be invested in things that will be of great use and value to the nation when peace shall be declared.

One thing that most people realize will be of value is that it is going to put this nation in a state of preparedness. While it is hoped and believed that the end of this war will be the ending of all great wars it will be a valuable thing to America to find herself at its close prepared to enforce the just decree of peace. There may be a twilight zone between the close of this war and the establishment of peace all over the world and preparedness will place America in a position to have that voice in the world affairs that this nation is worthy of. We know that voice will be for peace and justice and freedom.

Millions are to be spent in the construction of merchant ships and these, at least those that escape destruction in war, will be a valuable investment. There will ba a tremendous demand for merchant ships when peace comes, and, whether the United States continues to own and operate this merchant marine or whether the ships are sold to private individuals, the money invested in them by the United States will be no loss to the nation. It may be a great gain to it. In the revival of foreign commerce, in the contest for foreign markets, the United States will no longer be at the mercy of foreign ship owners. We can do our own carrying trade and our commerce will have a fair chance in the foreign markets.

Billions of this money raised by the sale of Liberty Bonds have been and are to be loaned to those European nations engaged in war with Germany. This is no expenditure without return. It is an investment and it is an investment that no one will say is insecure. It will not only bring in a return interest and a return of the principal when due but it has brought to us a regard and friendship with those nations the value of which in dollars cannot be estimated.

The war is going to be expensive; it is going to call for sacrifices on the part of the nation and on the part of the individuals composing the nation. Much wealth is going to be shot out of the mouths of guns and cannons and much is going to be sunk at sea, but all of the money used for war purposes is not going to ba a financial loss to the nation. America will emerge from the war not only with her honor and greatness and power increased, but she will emerge better fitted for the struggles of commerce when peace comes and much of the money spent for war purposes will be equally valuable if not more valuable in time of peace.

MOTOR CYCLE AND FORD CAR

MEET IN HEAD-ON COLLISION SUNDAY EVENING

Dan Wasagesic, Driver of Motor Cycle, Sustains Painful Cuts and Severe Shake-Up

Dan Wasegesic, an Indion employed at the Charlevoix Rock Product Co.'s plant, received painful injuries Sunday evening about eigbt o'clock, in a head-on collision with the Ford milk delivery wagon of Elmer Ingalls of Marion township.

Tha accident happened on the cross-road about half way between tha cemetery and the Norwood road. Wasagesic was driving his motor cycle and states that he noticed the lights of Ingall's car, and slowed down to a speed of twelve miles an hour. He was about to turn out for the car, when they came together, the motor cycle striking the Ford delivery car almost head-on.

The impact was terrific and Wasagesic was thrown forward over the hood of the Ford, through the windshield, where he laid until assistance was given him to regain the ground. He was later taken to his home near the cement plant and Dr. Dunham summoned.

Examination revealed severe bruises and cuts about the head, and a gash some four inches long in his leg, where ha had evidently came into contact with the Ford. While his injuries are not thought to be of a serious nature, he suffered severely from loss of blood from the deep wound in his leg and the nervous shock.

The motor cycle doubled up like a jack knife and was badly damaged. "Lizzie" withstood the collision somewhat better, sustaining a broken windshield, badly bent radiator, but was right on the job the following morning delivering milk from her owner's dairy farm.

The accident was purely accidental Wasagesic saw the lights of the car and himself carried a flashlight. He states that he underestimated the distance between himself and the car before turning out.

Another "Ex"

It's a good scheme, this one of the Kaiser's to erect Alsace and Lorraine into a new duchy with his third son, Eitel Fritz, as the reigning duke. It will give the young man another title to which to put the prefix "ex" when the inevitable debacle comes and Alsace and Lorraine are once more beneath the tri-color.

HEART of the SUNSET

By REX BEACH

Author of "The Spoilers," "The Iron Trail," "The Silver Horde," Etc.

"Please," he begged. "Beauty is like a delicate flower, and sleep is the dew that freshens it. Believe me, you can rest in all security, for no one can come or go without my consent. You are cruel to postpone my delight; nevertheless, I yield to your feelings. But, star of my life, I shall dream of you, and of that little priest who waits with the key to Paradise in his hands."

He bowed over Alaire's cold fingers, then stood erect until she had Dolores had gone.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Priest From Monclova.

That was a night of terror for the women. Although Longorio's discipline was in some ways strict, in others it was extremely lax. From some quarter his men had secured a supply of mescal, and, forgetful of Felipe's unhappy fate, they rendered the hours hideous. There were singing and quarreling, and a shot or two sounded from the direction of the outbuildings. Morning found both Alaire and Dolores sadly overwrought. But they felt some relief upon learning that the general had been unexpectedly summoned from his bed at daylight, and had ridden to the telegraph office.

Profiting by his absence, Alaire ventured from her room, racking her brain to devise some means of escape. But soldiers were everywhere; they lolled around the servants' quarters; they dozed in the shade of the ranch buildings, recovering from the night's debauch; and an armed sentinel who paced the hacienda road gave evidence that, despite their apparent carelessness, they had by no means relaxed their vigilance. A round of the premises convinced Alaire that the place was actually guarded, and showed her the futility of trying to slip away. She realized, too, that even if she managed to do so, her plight would be little better. For how could she hope to cover the hundred miles between La Feria and the Rio Grande when every peon was an enemy?

She was standing in one of the open, sashless windows when her former protector, the old lieutenant, bade her good morning and paused to smoke a cigarette.

"Well, it was a great night, wasn't it?" he began. "And we have great news this morning. We are going to fight you gringos."

"I hope not."

"Yes; it will probably go hard with you. Tell me, this city of Washington is a fine city, and very rich, is it not?"

"Oh, yes."

"It's full of loot, eh? Especially the president's palace? That is good. One can never believe all one hears."

"Why do you ask?" Alaire was curious.

"I was thinking it would pay us to go there. If your soldiers march upon Mexico City, it would be a brilliant piece of strategy for General Longorio to invade the United States, would it not? It would be funny to capture Washington and hold your president for ransom, eh?"

"Very funny," Alaire agreed dryly. "How would you go about it?"

Pancho shrugged. "That is the trouble. We would have to march around Texas, I presume."

"Around Texas?"

"Yes. You see, Texas is a bad country; it is full of—barbarians who know how to fight. If it were not for Texas, we would have the United States at our mercy." After some consideration, he ventured this opinion: "We could afford to pay the Texans for allowing us to ride through their country, provided we stole nothing and paid for the cattle we ate. Well, Longorio is a great one for schemes; he is talking over the telegraph with somebody at this moment. Perhaps it is the president of Texas."

"You are a poor man, are you not?" Alaire inquired.

"Miserably poor."

"Would you like to make a great deal of money?"

"Dios! That is why I'm a soldier."

"I will pay you well to get me two horses—"

But old Pancho shook his head vigorously. "Impossible! General Longorio is going to marry you. We all got drunk last night to celebrate the wedding. Yes, and the priest is waiting."

"I will make you rich."

"Ho! I wouldn't live to spend a single peso. Felipe disobeyed orders, and the general shot him before he could cross himself. Boom! The poor fellow was passed in a minute. No. We will all be rich after we win a few battles and capture some American cities. I am an old man; I shall leave the drinking and the women to the young fellows, and prepare for my old age."

Seeing that she could not enlist Pancho's aid, Alaire begged him to fetch the priest.

"You wish spiritual comfort, senora?"

"Perhaps."

"Well, he doesn't look like much of a priest, but probably he will do. As for me, I don't believe in such things. Churches are all very well for ignorant people, but we Mexicans are too intelligent; we are making an end of them."

The priest was a small, white-haired man with a gentle, almost timid face, and at the moment when he appeared before Alaire he was in anything but a happy frame of mind. He had undergone, he told her, a terrible experience. His name was O'Malley. He had come from Moncleva, whence the rebels had banished him under threat of death. He had seen his church despoiled of its valuables, his school closed; he himself had managed to escape only by a miracle. During his flight toward the border he had suffered every indignity, and finally Longorio had intercepted him and brought him here, practically in chains.

"What a situation! What chaos!" he lamented. "The land is overrun with bandits; there is no law, no authority, no faith; religion is made a mockery. The men are becoming infidels and atheists, and in many places they will not allow us to give comfort even to their women."

"Is it as bad as that?"

Father O'Malley shook his head sadly. "You've no idea. What do you think of a people who forbid the mention of God's name in their schools? That is what the revolutionists are doing. Candelaria claims that the churches are the property of the state. He confiscates them, and he charges admission. He has banished all except a few of us priests, and has shamefully persecuted our Sisters of Mercy. Oh, the outrages! Mexico is, today, the blackest spot on the map of Christendom." His voice broke. "That is the freedom, the liberty, the democracy, for which they are fighting. That is the new Mexico. And the federals are not a bit better. This Longorio, for instance, this—wolf—he brings me here, as his prisoner, to solemnize an unholy marriage! He treats me like a dog. Last night I slept in a filthy hovel—"

"Oh! I'm sorry," Alaire exclaimed. "But I'm half crazed with my own troubles. You must come into the house; the best I have is yours. You shall be as much my guest as I can make you, and—perhaps you will help me to escape."

"Escape?" The little man smiled mournfully. "You are watched and guarded, and so am I. Even if you got away from here, what then? You can't imagine the condition of the country."

"I won't marry him!" Alaire cried, with a shudder. "I won't!"

"He can't very well force you to do so. But remember, these are war times; the man is a fiend, and he puts no restraint upon his desires. If he is madly bent on having you, how can you prevent it? In normal times he would not dare injure one so prominent as you, but now—" Father O'Malley lifted up his hands. "I only wonder that he suggests a lawful marriage. Suppose you refuse? Will he not sacrifice you to his passions? He has done worse things." After a moment's consideration, he said: "Of course it is possible that I misjudge him. Anyhow, if you desire me to do so, I will refuse to perform the ceremony. But—I'm afraid it will just mean ruin for both of us."

"Surely he wouldn't harm you?"

The father shrugged. "What am I? An obscure priest. Many of my brothers are buried in Mexico. However, I shall do as you wish."

As the day wore on Alaire realized even more clearly the fact that she was Longorio's prisoner. His men, in spite of their recent debauch, kept very good watch over her, and it was plain that they would obey his orders, no matter how extreme. It occurred to her finally that he was staying away purposely, in order to give her a fuller appreciation of her position—so that she might beat her wings against the cage until exhausted.

Afternoon came, then evening, and still Longorio did not return. Father O'Malley could give scant comfort; Dolores was a positive trial.

Half distracted, Alaire roamed through the house, awaiting her captor's coming, steeling herself for their final battle. But the delay was trying; she longed for the crisis to come, that this terrible suspense might be ended. At such an hour her thoughts naturally turned to Dave Law, and she found herself yearning for him with a yearning utterly new. His love had supported her through those miserable days at Las Palmas, but now it was a torture; she called his name wildly, passionately. He knew her whereabouts and her peril—why did he not come? Then, more calmly, she asked herself what he, or what anyone, could do for her. How could she look for succor when two nations were at war?

Night had come before she finally gave up and acknowledged the hopelessness of her situation. She had fought bravely, but with darkness her fears grew blacker. She was on the verge of her first breakdown, when, in the early dusk outside, she heard voices and the stamping of horses' hoofs. The sounds were muffled by the heavy wooden shutters she had taken pains to close and bar, but they told her Longorio had returned. Since it was futile to deny him entrance, she waited where she was. Old Pancho's voice sounded outside; then there came a knock upon the door of the room in which she stood.

"Come in," she said tensely.

The lieutenant thrust his head in, and, removing his hat, announced, "There is someone here to see General Longorio on important business. He says you will do."

"I."

"Yes. He says he is one of us—"

Pancho was pushed aside, the door was flung back, and a man strode swiftly into the lamplight. He paused, blinking as if momentarily blinded, and Alaire clutched at the nearest chair for support. A roaring began in her ears; she felt herself sway forward as if the strength had left her knees. She heard Dave's voice faintly; he was saying:

"Take care of my horse. Feed and water her well. Understand? When General Longorio comes tell him I am waiting here."

As if in a dream, Alaire saw the Mexican go out, closing the door behind him. Then she saw Dave come toward her, heard him speak her name, felt his arms around her.

She Heard Dave's Voice Faintly.

LADIES! SECRET TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Bring Back its Color and Lustre with Grandma's Sage Tea Recipe.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

DRINK MORE WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat and take Salts for Backache or Bladder trouble—Neutralizes acids.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, acke, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

HAS BROKEN BACK BUT IS STILL ALIVE

Condition of Central Lake Man Puzzles Physicians

David Somerville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Somerville of Central Lake, who was recently injured by having an eighteen-inch log fall across his back, cracking one vertebrae, thus paralyzing him from the hips down, and his abdominal organs, and who was recently taken to the Lockwood hospital for treatment is now able to be up and walk about.

The man is eighteen years old, large for his age and healthy. He has been working in the lumberwoods for some time and is a tower of strength. His wonderful constitution appears to be pulling his through what appeared at first a fatal injury.

The X-ray pictures showed one of the vertebrae cracked through the center from top to bottom, and pushed partly out of place.

His physician says it will be some time before he is able to join the army but that he will recover unless something now unexpected turns up in his case.

MOBILIZING PYTHIAN ARMY

Every Member Invited to Contribute to War Relief Fund

At no previous time in the history of the order of Knights of Pythias has an attempt been made to communicate personally with each of the seven hundred and fifty thousand members. But that is now being done in connection with the work of the War Relief Commission, in the raising of the half million dollar fund which the Supreme government has pledged. Each member who can be reached will receive through the mails a letter reading as follows:

The army of the Blue, Yellow and Red is to be mobilized.

As a member of the great fraternity of Knights of Pythias we ask you to immediately report to your local lodge.

Not being at the front, you can render assistance to those who are.

Our boys are on the firing line and in training camps, meeting the test of steel. Their needs will be many. Some will, of course, meet death, others will suffer from wounds and disease, and families at home will require assistance.

To meet the demands that will thus be made upon us, we need a fund of half a million dollars.

One dollar from each of our members will raise it. We want our membership to respond with that decree of loyalty which the principles of our order inculcate—BUT WE WANT NO UNWILLING DOLLARS.

Allied or Alone?

The assertion that this is England's war or France's war or Russia's war is not heard abroad in the land as frequently as it was a few months ago, but it has not entirely disappeared.

The moon will be "full" twice during the present month, in spite of the fact that the distilleries are going out of business.

BOOMS STATE AS RESORT SECTION

$100,000 "AD" CAMPAIGN AIDS MICHIGAN

Little Traverse Region Is Famous Breathing Spot, But There Are Others

The $100,000 advertising campaign launched by the Michigan Tourists' bureau is destined to make Michigan greater as a resort section.

From the pretty resorts on the St. Clair and Detroit rivers to the shores of Lake Superior there are hundreds of summer breathing places which have made the Wolverine state famous throughout the world. Just now the vice-president of the United States is at one of them because it is there that he feels he has the best chance to restore his wife to her former good health. He says the waters of its black sulphur well restored him years ago.

Of course, it is everywhere known that the Little Traverse region is the biggest resort section in the state. Mackinac Island is beautiful and exclusive, and there are other summer breathing spots which boast millionaires, but, if it comes to money, there is more money represented on land at Harbor Point and Wequetonsing which could be put into a half section than on any similarly sized bit of summer cottage property in the state.

Resort Business Changes

The resort business has gone through many stages. While the day of the big hotel is by no means ended, the cottagers are now by far in the majority. In recent years, however, the automobile has brought in still another factor, and the hotels are fighting back again, although this time it is for the roaming motorist, rather than the city folk who "go somewhere" for the summer. The new guests stay but a few days or sometimes only hours, in each spot, and then roll on to the next little lake and inn.

The days when summer cottages were simple little affairs is rapidly passing, too. People of one neighborhood buy a group of lots at some resort and all construct elaborate summer homes where the family spends several months and the man gets out for the week ends, with his vacation thrown in.

State Studies Resorts

Michigan summer resorts welcome the information that comes from the state board of health that a campaign is to be launched to make the resorts more sanitary and healthy. It is a problem that has confronted the resorts so long that they had abandoned hope of ever solving it.

The Michigan state board of health contends that resorts have not done their share to make conditions sanitary; that the cities have taken steps to clean up generally and that the city man, woman or child who goes to a summer resort, leaves a place where health is assured.

Lack of sewer facilities and improper handling of garbage, also inefficient care of premises and the allowed accumulation of refuse are the main drawbacks to the summer resort, the state health authorities demand action, likewise the resorters. In this connection, one state authority says:

"The traveling public of today is well versed in the principles of modern sanitation and the city dweller who is about to choose a location for spending his summer vacation, or to which he may send his family for relief from the heat and dust of the city streets, is vitally interested in the sanitary surroundings of the location of the resort."

Fishing Is Varied

In one respect, fishing in Northern Michigan is different than in any other state of the Union. This is because the fishermen have made it so. Each lake and stream has its own particular kind of fish possibilities, and they are always renumerative.

Thousands of anglers come northward annually to whip the streams, the trout fishing sport predominating. The thousands of lakes and streams of Northern Michigan afford ample breathing room for the fisherman, there being so many lucrative fishing grounds that the angler never finds conditions cluttered. Many of these streams are in such wild country that it is safe to say there are, among them, some that have never heard the swish of the casted fly, the splash of the fighting gamester, the soft tread of the fisherman as he cautiously approaches the stream and whips his lure into a darkened spot in the water where constantly lurk the speckled beauties who fight so bravely for their lives, make such appetizing eating and such pretty post cards to mail home.

COMMUNICATIONS

I think that I have shown the people of Charlevoix county, as well as the adjoining counties, that concrete roads for all main travelled roads, are not only the best, but are also the cheapest, and now I come forward with a plea for the conservation of every heifer, every sow pig, and every ewe lamb, as well as all the yearlings and two-year-olds. If you don't do it, the time is not far distant before we will be in as bad shape as they are now in Germany. No meat to eat. No hides for shoes. No wool for clothes. Friends this is no idle dream, but a bare, positive fact—facing you as well as the rest of the world. Read the following, what the Chicago Tribune has to say on the subject.

Concrete roads for permanence and the saving of every female creature producing food to eat and wool to wear—as well as the saving of hens and chickens, will all help to settle the war question and provide for future generations as well as the present.

"Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—Livestock men were urged to increase production at a conference of leading representatives of that industry held here today.

"Herbert Quick of the farm loan board, W. P. G. Harding of the Federal Reserve Board, Secretary of Agriculture Houston, Food Administrator Hoover, Daniel Willard, chairman of the advisory commission of the council of national defense, and senator Kendrick of Wyoming addressed the conference.

Opposes Killing Young

"Mr. Quick deprecated the marketing of cows and calves, pigs, and other immature stock. He said that germinal factors of the livestock industry are being destroyed by this practice.

"Secretary Houston advanced two tentative plans:

1. The possibility of distributing cattle from districts where food is short to those where it is plentiful.

2. Encouraging the southern farmers to grow more livestock.

Iowa Leads in Raising

"In the latter connection, Secretary Houston said the average number of cows to an Iowa farm is 74, while in North Carolina and Alabama there are but one or two.

"Mr. Hoover said the country is over-exporting its cattle production. He suggested the possibility of an agreement being worked out with the allies to take a surplus of meat products, following increased production in this country.

Retail Clothiers Enter Campaign for More Wool

"Members of the National Association of Retail Clothiers, entered the campaign for sheep and wool raising yesterday, when Herman C. Ritter the president, urged each one to spread the gospel of sheep and wool in his own territory.

"James Kuppenheimer, speaking for the manufacturers, said that America can be on a solid wool basis in two and a half years if from 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 sheep are placed on American farms as is projected by the national sheep and wool bureau. He said Germany is destitute of wool and has with its allies 125,000,000 people to clothe.

"The wool bureau has announced that as fast as requests for sheep are received they are being answered with shipments, and that a stockyards committee is delivering many orders for ewes to be placed on Illinois farms."

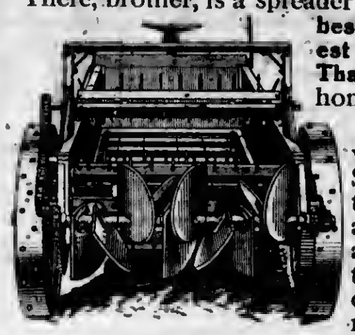
Nothing But the New Idea Spreader for Us.

Any old machine that would just carry manure to the field and dump it on the ground wasn't good enough for us. When one of our customers came in and said, I need a manure spreader, we wanted to point to a machine and say "There, brother, is a spreader that handles manure best, pays for itself soonest and lasts longest. That machine we can honestly recommend."



Naturally we investigated Manure Spreaders; and we've taken the agency for a machine that actually measures up to the ideal we had set in our own mind. This machine is called the
